Martin, of Franklin, No. 41, Plainfield; Assistant Recording Secretary—H. B Wyckoff, of Ivanhoe, No. 72, Somerville; Financial Secretary—J. R. Rollison, of Union, No. 31, Rahway; Warden—L M. Beekman, of Franklin, No. 41, Plainfield; Treasurer—H. Saltmer, of Pioneer, No. 58, Bound Brook; Junior Past Councilor—J. D. Anderson, of Pioneer, No. 58, Bound Brook.

The following officers were installed for the ensuing quarter: Councilor—M. J. Whitford; Vice Councilor—D. F. Blackford; Jr. Past Councilor—W. S. Coriell; Recording Secretary, 1 year—J. Hart; Assistant Recording Secretary—J. R. Dunham; Financial Secretary, 1 year—James Day; Treasurer, 1 year—W. S. Davis; Warden—F. S. Ward; Conductor—Wm. Brokaw; Inside Sentinel—Chas. H. Ward; Outside Sentinel—A. G Nelson; Trustees—P. Mitze, 18 months; D. F. Blackford, 12 months; J. R. Dunham, 6 months.

After the institution refreshments were served by Charles S. Day, chairman of the Committee of Arrangements. The honor of establishing this new Council is due to Pioneer Council, No. 58, of Bound Brook, and J. R. Rollinson, of Rahway.

An Insurance Agent Accused of Embezzlement.

Wm. J. Rouse, of West Fifth street, local agent of the Prudential Insurance Company, was arrested yesterday and sent to the County jail on complaint of Wm. W. Dougal, an inspector of the concern, on the charge of embezzlement. Dougal's affidavit, issued before an Elizabeth justice-of-the-peace, accuses Rouse of appropriating to his own use $312 belonging to the Company. Dougal now has charge of the local office. He told a PRESS reporter who sought an interview that he might tell him a column story about the case, but was under contract with the Company not to talk to reporters without his President's permission. Much sympathy is expressed for Rouse, who is believed to be an honest man, and who is known to have paid money to the Company out of his own pocket rather than have some of his customers lapse in their payments. Whatever deficit there really is, it is believed will be found to be due to customers' lapsing rather than to Rouse's own shortcomings. Judge Codington, his counsel, will have him released on bail to-day, and he will return to his wife and children. An indignant friend says: "These petty insurance concerns are always causing trouble for some one."

St. Mary's Christmas Choir.

Special music for the Christmas services is now being prepared at St. Mary's Roman Catholic church. The church has two choirs, both of which are under the charge of Mrs. Ronan. Some of the singers in the chancel choir, which is composed of excellent voices, are to be joined to the large choir, and are soon to begin rehearsing, under Mrs. Ronan's competent direction, for the holiday music. A large and thoroughly instructed body of singers will be the result. The members of the large choir include Miss May Flanagan, Miss Katie Reed, Miss Nellie Casey, Miss Alice Quinn, Miss Lucy Rafferty, Miss Maggie Sheehan, Miss Maggie Conway, Miss Julia Day, Mr. O'Rourke, Mr. Connor, and Mr. Traynor. The chancel choir is composed of Miss Josephine L. Shaffer, Miss Lucy A. Rafferty, Miss Nellie T. Casey, Miss Maggie A. Lawler, Miss Sarah Sharkey, Miss Mary Scully, Miss Maggie Conway, Miss Tessa Scully, Miss Lizzie Casey, Miss Katie Flannagan, Miss Lucy McIntyre.

How Many Days in the Month is the Contract Kept?

This is the particular season of the year when street lights are especially needed from sunset to sunrise, as the contract with the Plainfield Electric Light Company stipulates shall be the case the year 'round. But who of those who are on the streets in early morning or early evening can testify that the Co. fulfills its agreement and keeps the lights burning from sunset to sunrise? As a matter of fact, does n't the city lose an hour or two of lighting, every day, just now?

Perfectly harmless. No poisonous drugs used in compounding Hires' Cough Cure. Its effects are magical. No remedy has ever been discovered so safe, sure and effectual in breaking up a hacking cough or cold.

A HUNTSMAN'S GUN EXPLODES.

Almost a Fatal Shooting Accident in the Mountain Woodland.

[Special to THE PRESS.]

WASHINGTONVILLE, Dec. 10.

A serious shooting accident that might have proved fatal happened to Peter Burnett, a young man living near Millington, yesterday. With a party of friends, Burnett went out hunting, in the morning, the light fall of snow of the night before having made good tracking for bunnies. Burnett started a cotton-tail, and raised his gun to fire. He pulled the trigger, and that is all he remembers. The other members of the party heard a terrible report, and, looking around, saw Burnett lying on the ground, the stock of his gun in one hand, while the rest of it was scattered around promiscuously. The left hand was shattered so badly that Dr. Jones of Basking Ridge found it necessary to amputate the two first fingers. Part of the palm is torn away. The shock was so great that Burnett had to be carried home. Everything possible was done to alleviate the sufferings of the young man, who is about twenty-two years of age, and who works on what is known as the Frank Carle farm, which he manages with his brother.

PAINED TO SEE CHRISTIANS WRANGLE.

Plainfielders Witness Deplorable Scenes at the Sabbath Union Meeting.

Notwithstanding the peculiar avowal of Col. Elliott F. Shepard, of The Mail and Express, of his abhorrence of the idea of being President of the American Sabbath Union another year, Dr. H. K. Carroll, of North Plainfield, editor of The Independent, Robert Grahame, and the Rev. Jas. H. Darlington, a majority of the Committee on Nomination of Officers, felt it their duty to nominate him at yesterday's session, but the Rev. W. J. Robinson, of Allegheny, Penn., and the Rev. James Parker, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, did not, and they nominated the Rev. Sylvester Scovell, of Wooster University, Ohio. Wearied and disgusted delegates began to leave. Still protesting that he did not want the office, the Colonel toyed with the subject of declination or acceptance, assuming, of course, that there could only be the preordained result. He presided during the balloting, and announced the result: "Shepard, 24; Scovell, 10; John Wanamaker, 1." He again declared his repugnance for the office, and finally said that he would declare his intentions to the Board of Managers. He thought the convention "ought to felicitate itself" on its size and its successful termination. He is probably the only man—remarks The New York Times—that thinks so. Men of all parties unite in deploring the sensational, saddening scenes witnessed yesterday.

An interested spectator of the proceedings—continues The Times—has been the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, of Plainfield, a leading spirit among Seventh-Day Baptists in this country, and a pronounced opponent of the Sabbath Union, and yet he confesses that the pain from seeing Christians wrangle had been greater than the satisfaction of seeing a society with a wrong basis disintegrate.

No More Tickets for the Choral Concerts.

Every ticket for the Choral Society concert was sold at an early hour this morning. The first man to select seats was on hand at two o'clock, and waited patiently for the doors to open. By four o'clock twenty people were in line, waiting. Most of them were gentlemen of color, who turned out to get tickets for their employers. By seven o'clock, when the sale began, there were nearly enough people on hand to buy up all the tickets.

Senators Considering a Cloture Rule.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The Republican Caucus Committee of the Senate spent several hours in consultation concerning the advisability of adopting a cloture rule for the Senate. A number of propositions were considered by the committee, but no agreement was reached. The members of the committee are coming closer together in their views, however, and it is likely that a report will be made to a Republican caucus to be held in a few days.

Grant's Tomb Will be in New York.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Congressman O'Neill (Pa.) called up the Senate resolution looking to the removal of Gen. Grant's remains from Riverside Park in New York to Arlington Cemetery in Washington. It was defeated in the House on a standing vote—55 to 118—the yeas and nays being 93 to 153. Mr O'Neill was greatly surprised.

New Postmaster of the House.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—James W. Hathaway, of Montana, has been selected to succeed Captain Wheat, of Wisconsin, as postmaster of the House. The selection was made at a Republican caucus last night. One ballot only was taken Mr. Hathaway receiving 75 votes to 39 for all other candidates.

THE GUILD OF THE TELEGRAPH KEY.

A Plainfield Dispatcher Tells an Interesting Story of the Men Who Send Our Lightning Messages.

Telegraph operators—says a manipulator of the key who handles dispatches at the Western Union office in Plainfield—form strong friendships over the wires. Metaphorically they shake hands cordially twice a day—when they begin work and when they end it. And when business is dull they hold long conversations, with many miles separating them, as two friends might do over a dinner table. They tell of their hopes and fears and ambitions and impart very confidential information to men whom they have never seen. Of course, all these exchanges take place between those who have been in communication constantly for some time.

There are pairs of men who have been in daily communication with each other over the same telegraph wire for years, and who have never seen each other. Each is well acquainted with the other's temperament, his moods, his disposition, and his sentiments. Telegraph instruments and telegraph wires are unfeeling and stolid-looking things. Yet, through them a man is able to convey emotions of sorrow or joy almost as plainly as they may be expressed facially. The fact is perfectly palpable to the man at one end of the wire, while he is receiving dispatches, that the man who is sending them is ill or well, or—though the sender may make use of no terms of friendliness or of swear words—that he is in good temper or bad.

When the feeling between two operators in two cities, instead of being that of gentle affection, is that of strong dislike, the fact can be made just as apparent as though they were within a few feet of each other. No personal collision can occur, of course. That is one of the drawbacks. But a man can call names and make threats over a wire with almost the same facility as by word of mouth. One of the favorite resorts when two operators are quarreling is that professionally known as "fighting circuit". Not much is accomplished by this, however, for when two operators strive at the same time to call names over a wire, neither can succeed.

In their conversations telegraphers use a system of abbreviations which enables them to say considerably more in a certain period of time than they otherwise could. The morning greeting of a Plainfield dispatcher to a friend in New York, Somerville, or some other city, is usually "g. m." and the farewell for the evening, "g. n.," the letters of course standing for good morning and good night. The salutation may be accompanied by an inquiry by one as to the health of the other, which would be expressed thus: "Hw r u ts mng?" And the answer would be: "I'm gty wl; hw r u?" or "I'm nt fig vy wl; fraid I've gt t miaria."

By the time these courtesies have taken place some early messages have come from the receiving department or from some other wire, and the man before whom they are placed says to his friend, many miles away: "Wl hrs a fu; Gol hang ts everlastin grind. I wish I was rich." And the other man says: "No rest fo t wicked, min pen," the last two words indicating that he wants the sender to wait a minute while he adjusts and tests his pen. Presently he clicks out "g. a.," meaning "go ahead," and the day's work has begun. If the sender is old in the business, he will take a steady, even gait, and the fact that the messages are piling up faster than he is getting rid of them won't worry him. When the pile gets too big he will notify the chief operator, and that important individual will probably take a portion of them away and have them sent by another wire. But, if the sender is young and ambitious, he will, as soon as the messages begin to accumulate, deem it his duty to "whoop 'em up," and unless the other man is ambitious, too, there will be trouble pretty quick.

The receiver will "break" a good deal, and directly he will observe, "Oh dt b in sch a bloomin hurry, u won't gt ur salary raised tt way." And the sender, being young and "fresh," will reply to the effect that the receiver is a "ham" and will advise him to "get rif," which means that he ought to get up and let a competent receiver take his place. Then he will snap out the figure "4" peremptorily, which is the arbitrary sign standing for "Where shall I go ahead?" But although he may hurry and perspire, he won't send as many messages as the steady old fellow during the day.

No two operators send alike. The click of the instrument is always the same to the ear of a man who does not understand it, but one operator recognizes the sending of another if he has ever heard it before for any length of time, just as a familiar face is recognized. Operator "Tommy" Snaggs leaves Plainfield, and, after roaming from one city to another, finally lands in an office on the line of Plainfield's wire and goes to work. The man in Plainfield begins to send. Mr. Snaggs pricks up his ears and interrupts the sender. "Ain't tt u Cholly Schermerhorn?" he asks, and the popular Plainfield manager says, "Yes, tts I, & ur ole Tommy Snaggs." Mr. Snaggs returns, "tts wo I am, I thot I reconized ur sendin." Then they devote a few minutes to telling of their travels.

It is a peculiar fact also that an experienced operator can almost invariably distinguish a woman's sending from a man's. There is nearly always some peculiarity about a woman's style of transmission. It is not necessarily a fault. Many women send very clearly and make their dots and dashes precisely as they were intended to be made. It is impossible to describe the peculiarity, but there is no doubt of its existence. Nearly all women have a habit of rattling off a lot of meaningless dots before they say anything. But some men do that too. A woman's touch is lighter than a man's, and her dots and dashes will not carry so well on a very long circuit. That is presumably the reason why in all large offices the women are usually assigned to work the wires running to various parts of the cities.

Operators laugh over a wire; or, rather, they convey the fact that they are amused. They do this by telegraphing "ha, ha." Very great amusement is indicated by sending "ha" slowly and repeating it several times, and a smile is expressed by sending "ha" once or perhaps twice. Transmitting it slowly and repeating it tells the perpetrator of the joke at the other end of the wire that the listener is leaning back in his chair and laughing long and heartily.

Twenty or twenty-five years have made great changes for the telegraphers. In the old days an operator was an individual to whom great interest was attached, and around whom was a halo of mystery. Then he received a salary which was deemed handsome for what was apparently such light work. In a boarding house he was always the star. Railroad passes were obtainable by him for the asking. He was frequently given the freedom of cities, and when it was not given to him he sometimes took it. But now—well, the old-timers assert that the business has gone to the dogs.

Buy at Home.

There is no season of the year when the injunction "buy at home" is more appropriate than just before the holidays. It is good advice at any time, but the more so at this season because it is, of all others, the season when large purchases are made and much money is expended.

Reliable local business men, like reliable local newspapers, help greatly in building up a place. They take great care to select fine stocks of goods, and bring them right to the doors of those who live here. More than that, they offer the goods, as a rule, at reasonable prices, and relieve the purchasing community of any necessity of going out of town. It is only right, to say the very least, that those who wish to buy shall see what is offered at home and at what price it can be bought before going anywhere else. Anything short of that is discourteous to those who have tried their best to supply all the needs and requirements of a cultured community, and is more or less disadvantageous to the city at large.

The advertising columns of THE PRESS show, better than any other medium, the places and the individuals who are most entitled to local patronage. Reliable merchants who have been the leading business men in their respective lines for a quarter of a century find it to their advantage to make use of these columns, and the people of Plainfield find that they can learn more of the business and the business men of this city from these columns than from any others.

There is no better way to build up a city than by patronizing the institutions of that city. The stores are for the convenience of the people, as well as for the prosperity of those who own them, and the fact that they are home institutions ought to entitle them to preference over any teat are beyond the limits. It would give a wonderful impetus to local business if the money to be expended by citizens of Plainfield within the next three weeks were all expended in buying at the stores in this city; and it will assuredly increase trade in every department if those intending to buy will first see hat is offered here before going elsewhere.

Besides, the Afternoon Paper is the Paper for Live News.

The Newark Press is about to give up its morning edition, and to appear only as an afternoon paper. Whereupon the Newark Journal proceeds to show that a morning paper has never been made to pay in Newark. It says that at least $100,000 has been sunk in these efforts and all have been found impracticable. Among the men who have tried the experiment are Richard Watson Gilder, the present editor of The Century Magazine; Editor E. H. Clement, now of the Boston Transcript; Dr. Thomas Dunn English, Col. William H. Gilder, the Arctic explorer; Miss Jeannette Gilder, editor of the New York Critic, and well known abroad in literature and journalism, besides others of ability. There have, at intervals, been rumors of a morning paper in Plainfield, but such a plan has never yet materialized. With the experiments in Newark as a criterion it would appear to be impossible to establish a successful morning paper so near New York. Metropolitan competition is too strong.

—Edsall says in his advertisement today that he is offering the greatest book bargain of the age in the R. S. Peale & Co. Chicago reprint of The Encyclopædia Britannica. It is worth looking after.

—"There is no time like the old time," wrote Oliver Wendell Holmes. Oh, yes there is, Oliver! At Collier's, 3 Park avenue, you can find watches and clocks good enough to keep the zodiacal procession right up to the business notch.

—Dr. Chauncey B. Ripley is in the habit of accomplishing everything he undertakes. He tries to be right; then goes ahead. He will probably sell his hundred acres. That means a hundred houses, or over a quarter of a million dollars in improvements.—Union County Standard.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

Grand Army.

Commander-in-Chief Veazey has just issued three very important general orders that are of interest to posts and comrades everywhere. In one, department inspectors are ordered to make an inspection of all posts that were not inspected prior to the last National Camp, and report at once to the Inspector-General. Another announces the appointment of assistant inspectors general as follows: For Illinois, C. C. Jones, Rockford; for Iowa, J. W. Muffly, Des Moines; for Minnesota, G. H. Holden, Duluth; for Wisconsin, C. G. Nuttman, Neenah; for South Dakota, D. W. Diggs, Milbank; for Indiana, J. M. Story, Franklin; and for North Dakota, W. E. Parsons, Grand Forks. In the next order the attention of posts is called to the basis of representation in the National and department encampments. The posts will be entitled to representation in the department encampments on the numerical strength shown in the reports for the quarter ending Sept. 30, and to representation in the National Camp on the basis of the reports to be made Dec. 31, 1890.

Department Commander Clarks of New York has suspended the Commanders of six posts in that department for neglecting to forward to department headquarters at Albany the regular quarterly reports. This is discipline with a vengeance.

A new post is about to be organized at Hamilton, Ontario, with fifty charter members.

Odd-Fellows.

The members of this order in Columbus, O., have been entertaining their friends with an amusing burlesque entitled "An Expose of the Ancient Order of Hercules." The representation was well attended not only by members of the order but the general public, and several officers of the municipal government were patrons, including Mayor Bruck.

At the recent session of the Grand Lodge of Illinois, a resolution was introduced providing for a committee to be appointed to formulate a plan for district representation, to be submitted to each lodge in the State for consideration, so that the sense of the entire membership on the subject might be obtained; but the representatives seemed unwilling to support a measure that would be likely to cut off most of their heads besides the mileage and per diem, and the resolution was defeated.

The Elks.

The Elks of Louisville, Ky., have begun preparations, on a grand scale, to receive and entertain the members of the Grand Lodge and visiting delegations who will attend the annual reunion and Grand Lodge session to be held in that city next May. It is now estimated that at least 10,000 Elks will gather in that city on that occasion.

Louisville lodge No. 8 recently celebrated its 200th communication by a great "stag social" at which there was a good representation of the dramatic profession.

Chicago lodge No. 4 is about to hold a lodge of sorrow as a tribute of respect to the memory of brethren of that lodge who have died during the past year.

Order Eastern Star.

Another ground of unpleasantness has sprung up among the Sisters of the Eastern Star. It appears that the General Grand Chapter of the order has appropriated and been using the copyrighted ritual of the venerable Masonic writer, Robert Macoy, of New York, without fee or reward. It seems to be one of the besetting sins of a certain class in fraternal circles to appropriate the brains and the literary productions of others without recompense or credit.

At the recent session of the Grand Chapter of California the reports showed a membership of 6,066 in that jurisdiction. A fund of $3,000 was raised to aid in building the Masonic home in that State. California is the banner State of the order.

Masonic.

At last, after a protracted discussion, the Grand Lodge of Canada has decided to adopt the American method of transacting the business of the lodge in the third degree. This rule does not prevail in all the Grand jurisdictions of the United States, but where it does exist it seems to be supported by reason and authority.

A new Masonic organization has just been created in New York and called the "Square Club." It is composed of masters and past masters of one of the leading metropolitan Masonic districts and its ostensible object is to promote fraternal visits among the lodges and cultivate a greater degree of perfection in the work.

Knights of Honor.

John I. Martin, Grand Dictator of Missouri, accompanied by a number of prominent members of the Grand Lodge, chartered a special car at St. Louis Thanksgiving day and visited Mascoutah, Ill., and attended the annual ball given by the lodges of the order in and near Mascoutah. The Knights turned out in large numbers to participate in the parade and the entertainment that followed was a great success. Grand Dictator Martin delivered an eloquent address which was followed by an excellent musical entertainment. An elegant banquet was served, after which the company betook themselves to dancing which was kept up till a late hour.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

Who Buys Diamonds.

During a trial, in which it was necessary to call in some expert testimony as to the value and quality of diamonds a certain pawnbroker took the stand.

"Well, sir," asked the attorney, "do you sell diamonds?"

"Yes, when I can," was the reply.

"Is trade very good now?"

"Not much."

"Who buys the most diamonds?"

"The biggest fools, sir, who have the money."

The testimony was considered decidedly expert.—Texas Siftings.

He Had Not Finished.

Whopper—Yes, sir, that cat of mine could spring fifty feet after a mouse, and—

Whopper—It's not a lie, and I'll knock you down if you don't take that back!

Breakley (calmly continuing)—l—l—lively cat!—Boston Traveler.

UNSYMPATHETIC.

Wanderer—Kind dame, can you give me a place to lay me down to die?

The Kind Dame—Certainly. Just go up to the barn. My husband is the county coroner an' he hain't had a case for a month.—The Jury.

Circumstances Alter Cases.

De Braggs—There, look at that!

Pugsby—That cracked jug?

De Braggs—Cracked jug! Manalive, that's a tenth century devergne.

Pugsby—I wouldn't have it in my house. It's ugly.

De Braggs (stiffly)—It cost three thousand dollars.

Pugsby—Three thous— How beautiful!—Texas Siftings.

Why He Got Six Months.

Judge—How far did the thief carry your pig?

Complainant—Fully two miles away from my house.

Judge (to prisoner)—What have you to say to this charge?

Prisoner—It was only a joke, judge.

Judge—Six months—because you carried the joke too far.—Fliegende Blaetter.

Time Is Money.

Scene—General S. S. Agency, Broadway; six months hence.

Mr. B. Z. Ness—Book me for the Plutonic, to-morrow.

S. S. Agent—Well, I can accommodate you on her; but if it's on urgent business, I'd advise you to go by the City of Hoboken. She's ten minutes faster!—Puck.

No More Dodging.

George—I say, Gus, what's happened? You strut along the street as if you owned the whole city. Fallen heir to a fortune?

Gus—No, but I've been dodging my tailor for eighteen months, and to-day I've got the money in my pocket to pay him.—N. Y. Good News.

No Cause for Alarm.

Mrs. Cobwigger—Oh, dear, I've spilled the bottle of ink over your table cloth. I'm afraid I've ruined it.

Mrs. Brown—Not at all, my dear. It's only the bottle of indelible ink.—Munsey's Weekly.

WHERE DID YOU GET THAT HAT?

Master James—Why, Uncle Remus, what's the matter with your hat?

Uncle Remus—Massa Jeems, dat ole bat knowed I wuz so glad to see yer, dat hit jist natu'ally walked right offen dis chile's head, and I spec it's forgot to stop!—Texas Siftings.

An Embarrassing Question.

Artist—You say you want your portrait painted.

Miss Elderly—Yes, I would like to have it life size.

Artist—All right; and now one more question—which do you prefer, a good likeness, or handsome? You can't have both.—Texas Siftings.

A Pointer for Canvassers.

Gentleman—Why do you always begin to beg on the top floor instead of beginning at the first floor.

Mendicant—Well, you see if I begin at the top floor and am thrown down a flight of stairs I can keep right on begging on the next floor.—Texas Siftings.

Probably an Exception.

Freddy Fangle—Papa, are all men single before they are married?

Fangle—Yes, Freddy.

Freddy Fangle—How about the Siamese twins?—Judge.

A MAN out West swallowed a large needle, and it is needless to say that ever since he has stitches in his right side. Do you see the point?—Siftings.

Snagsby Had a Narrow Escape.

"Cornelius," said Mrs. Snagsby, shaking that unfortunate gentleman vigorously as he lay in bed; "Cornelius, what in the world is the matter with you?"

"Wha—what, Elyria?" gasped Snagsby, rubbing his eyes.

"What is the matter with you, Cornelius? What makes you out cry so in your sleep?"

"What did I say, Elyria?" asked Snagsby.

"You shouted: 'A horse on me, Truffle. Shake it off!' What did you mean?"

"Oh, nothing, Elyria. I see. Simply had a nightmare and wanted somebody to wake me up, that's all. Thank you, Elyria, for doing so."—Chicago News.

A Poor Substitute.

Congressman—I tell you that the people want free sugar!

Senator—Won't taffy do just as well for them?—West Shore.

NO NEED TO BE ALARMED.

Mr. Pine (of New York)—I feel rather embarrassed, as the subject I am going to speak of is rather delicate.

Miss Porcu (from Chicago)—Oh, don't let that embarrass you. To tell the truth, I am very fond of delicacies.—Puck.

He Had Him There.

Agitator (on woman's rights)—I claim that the rights of both sexes should be equal. In whatever field woman has entered she has equaled and often surpassed the men who had theretofore exclusively occupied it. In what—I repeat, in what branch of industry, what profession, what art has she not displayed her equality?

Chairman—There is a young man in yonder corner who evidently desires to say something.

Agitator—Well, young man, do you wish to refute what I say? Speak!

Young Man—I only wanted to ask if a woman can sharpen a lead pencil as well as a man.—American Stationer.

Where the Sugar Went.

A teacher desiring to classify her pupils put questions to them to find out how much they knew. During the examination of the son of a leading Austin politician the following dialogue occurred:

"You say that there are three kingdoms—the animal, the vegetable and the mineral?"

"Yes, sir."

"Now, where do you put the sugar?"

"Pa puts it in the water and then the whisky in afterwards and stirs 'em up with a spoon."—Texas Siftings.

On a Street Car.

"This is my birthday," she said. The whole car and her escort were interested.

"Is that so?" said he.

"Guess how old?"

"I can't."

"Will I have to tell you? Well, it is my—"

"Twenty-fourth!" bawled the conductor, opening the door. Every one knew it wasn't true, but she was so mad that she shut her mouth tight and the car heard no more.—Kansas City Star.

A Business Letter.

King of the Cannibal Islands (to his typewriter)—My dear, just take this note for the Board of Missions, in New York.

Typewriter—I am ready, O noble Tumtum.

King—Gentlemen: The last lot of missionaries you sent me were old, and tough, and stringy. If you can not do better—got that?—if you can not do better I shall have to make a change, and—get—my— missionaries—elsewhere. Yours truly, Tumtum, Rex.—Life.

Too Risky for Him.

Uncle Humsted—No, James, I can't stay all night with ye. I'd like to; but New York is an awful dangerous place, and I must be gettin' home.

James Upton—New York dangerous! How do you make that out, uncle?

Uncle Humsted—Why, I see there were over two hundred thousand mysterious disappearances here this year.

James Upton—Where did you get your figures?

Uncle Humsted—From the Federal census.—Puck.

A Conscientious Youth.

Studious—Tom, you are a lazy fellow. Why don't you apply yourself to something?

Otiosus—That is just what I am doing. You have often told me that a fellow ought to devote himself to what he can do best, and I believe in it. I am giving my entire attention to loafing.—Munsey's Weekly.

A Wise Precaution.

Colonel Greytop—Miss Uptown, I would like to introduce an old friend of mine—a soldier—one of the Balaklava Six Hundred.

Miss Uptown—One of the Six Hundred! Oh, Colonel, hadn't I better see mamma first?—Life.

What, Indeed?

He—When I was at the theater the other night I could see nothing but ladies' hats.

She (surprised)—Well, what else does any one go to a theater for?—Munsey's Weekly.

HOUSEHOLD BREVITIES.

—An original use of glass has been devised. Various colored pieces in odd sizes are pierced by three or four holes on the edge, and caught together by wire until they form a mesh or fret-work large enough for a panel in a transom.

—Water-proof paper, transparent and impervious to grease, is obtained by soaking good paper in an aqueous solution of shellac and borax. It resembles parchment paper in some respects. If the aqueous solution be colored with aniline colors very handsome paper, of use for artificial flowers, is prepared.

—Tomato Coy.—Two gallons green tomatoes sliced but not pared; twelve onions sliced; two tablespoons ground mustard; one tablespoon black pepper; two tablespoons salt; two quarts good vinegar; one quart sugar; one teaspoon cloves; one teaspoon spice. Cook all together until tender.—Western Rural.

—Caramel Filling.—Three cups of white sugar, one cup fresh milk and a heaping tablespoon of butter boiled together. One cup sugar melted and mixed with the other; stir until well mixed, then let it boil until almost as thick as icing when you take it off. Just before you are ready to put it on the cake flavor to your taste with vanilla.—Detroit Free Press.

—Silver-Top Drink.—Water, one quart, white sugar, one pound, essence of lemon, one teaspoonful, whites of two eggs beaten with one-half teaspoonful of flour. Boil to a sirup. Divide into equal parts and to one add three-fourths ounce tartaric acid, to the other one ounce of carbonate of soda. Put in a teaspoonful of each to two-thirds glass of water. Drink quickly.—Housekeeper.

—Pickled Beans.—String a quarter of a peck of tender green beans, throw them into a kettle of boiling water, add a teaspoonful of salt and boil twenty-five minutes. When done, drain in a colander, let stand until cold; then put into glass or stone jars, sprinkle lightly with cayenne, add a tablespoonful of whole mustard, a tablespoonful of chopped horseradish, and cover the whole with good, strong vinegar.—Boston Budget.

—A great deal of sickness families suffer could be easily traced to the cellar. The cellar not unusually opens into the kitchen; the kitchen is heated and the cellar is not. Following the natural laws, the cold air of the cellar will rush to take the place of the warmer, and therefore, lighter air of the kitchen. This would be well enough if the cellar air was pure, but often it is not; partly decayed vegetables may be there or rotten wood, etc.

—Beefsteak Pie.—Take two pounds of good steak; put it on to boil, with water enough to cover well; add a small piece of onion chopped, and cover closely to confine all steam while cooking; boil until very tender; then remove the meat and cut it into bits, carefully removing all gristle and bone; line a deep dish with a good biscuit dough; season with salt and pepper; thicken the liquor in which the meat has cooked and pour it over the meat; add a top crust and bake one hour.—Boston Herald.

FALL FASHION NOTES.

Hints and Suggestions of Particular Interest to Fair Readers.

Fawn-colored back grounds, with floral designs, are still in demand for Louis XV. brocades.

Wood-brown is seen in most of the new fabrics and promises to be a leading color in both fall and winter goods.

Large rosettes made of narrow ribbon are arranged as a neck band and tied closely round the throat, with a long floating loop and ends of ribbon at the back.

New and pretty stuffs for tea gowns are in pale satiny grounds, powdered all over with floral designs in brilliant tints. An apricot satin had tiny baskets and miniature wreaths alternated. A white ground brocade, showing the iris patterns in gold-colored silk, and a combination of white, blue, gold and ivory are among the noticeable novelties.

There is a revival of the pretty fashion of wearing long vails. Colored gauze twisted around the hat and tied in a careless bow at the side or under the chin, seems to be universally becoming, and softens the lines of the face. Mauve or lilac vails are much worn, but those of beige-yellow, striped on the edge with three narrow bands of white, are newer.

Nearly all evening costumes are deluged with lace. Cascades of black Chantilly vailed the front of an exquisite shade of primrose faille, and coquilles of the same lace adorned the corsage. Black lace coquilles were also used on a poppy-red China silk; the flounce around the skirt was headed by a solid wreath of poppies, and ropes of poppies crossed the bodice and were knotted carelessly low down on the left side of the skirt.

A costume of silvery gray alpaca, with full drapery, is made over a petticoat of gray satin, brocaded all over with bouquets of colored flowers. The coat-shaped bodice, cut "en cavalier," is made with a seam around the hips. The waistcoat, of the same brocade as the petticoat, is buttoned down the front with quaint silver buttons, and a small cravat of old Brussels lace makes a pretty finish at the neck. With this costume should be worn a three-cornered black chip hat, bound around the brim with silver braid and the crown trimmed with black ostrich feathers, rosettes and loops of silver galloon; parasol of black and silver.

A pale yellow evening gown, worn recently by a dreamy-looking blonde, with long-lashed, shadowy violet eyes was embroidered with exquisitely shaded mauve orchids. Two or three of the orchids were worn in the hair, and the yellow gauze fan was decorated with a tightly embroidered design of the same flower. Another dainty dancing gown of old rose crepe had the skirt trimmed with numberless crossways frills. The pointed bodice laced in the back, and shoulder knots and sash with floating ends of gauze ribbon, added to the airy effect. A wreath of almond blossoms for the head, and a necklet to correspond around the white throat, completed an exceedingly pretty and simple costume.—N. Y. Sun.

AFRICAN COOKERY.

Queer and Palatable Dishes Eaten Without Much Ceremony.

As a rule only one principal meal is eaten in Central Africa, in the early part of the evening. It usually consists of parrot soup, roasted or stewed monkeys, alligator eggs (also well liked by Europeans) and birds of every description. They also have moambo, or palm chops, and fish. A great delicacy, so considered by Europeans and natives alike, is elephant's feet and trunk. These have somewhat the taste of veal. To prepare them the natives dig a hole about five feet deep in the sand and in it build a large fire. After the sand is thoroughly heated the fire is removed, leaving only the ashes in the hole. The trunk and feet are placed in this hole and covered with leaves, and afterwards with hot sand. In two hours they are done.

All carcasses of animals which are to be cooked are placed on a block of wood and pounded until every bone is broken, care being taken not to tear or bruise the skin. They are then boiled or roasted on an open wood fire or in hot sand or ashes, without removing the hide or feathers. The cooking is of a very inferior grade, the only spices used being salt and pepper. The kitchen utensils consist of common earthen or wooden ware. Very little time is taken for setting or decorating the table; knives, forks and napkins are dispensed with.

Africans have several vegetables well liked by Europeans. N'gutti-n'sengo is a dish eaten all over Africa. It consists of egg plant, small fish somewhat like our sardines and the roots of the cassava or manioca plant (called n'gutti), which have a knotty appearance and often weigh as much as twenty pounds.

As the latter contains poison, the manioca is soaked in water for three to four days to extract the poisonous substance. It is then cut and sliced and small tomatoes are added. All is placed in a vessel with water and seasoned with salt and pepper and boiled. Moambo, or, as the Europeans call it, palm chops, is also a favorite dish. The palm nuts are first boiled in water until the pulpy substance loosens from the pit, then the shell, which contains a very delicious oil, is placed in a wooden mortar and crushed to obtain the oil. Whatever the meal consists of, meat, fish, mussels, is put in a vessel, adding the oil and the pulpy part of the palm nut, also red pepper and salt, and is boiled. Roast or boiled squash (loenge) is generally eaten with it. Sweet potatoes (m'balla benga) are more farinaceous and sweeter than ours, but do not taste so good. They are boiled or roasted.

Bananas (bitaebe) weigh about half a pound each and are about fifteen inches long. When half ripe they are cut in slices and boiled in water with salt and pepper.

N'sensi is a little red bean, which is boiled in water without salt or pepper, and is freely eaten. For peanut bread (chisulu) the peanuts are first roasted and then crushed. This mass is then rolled and put into the skin of a banana, adding a little pressure, forming it into a body. It readily retains this shape from the pressure of the oily substance in the peanut.—N. Y. World.

THE SPOTTED NEGRO.

One of the Strangest Freaks Ever Produced By Nature.

In the early part of the present century, some authorities say 1808, George Alexander Gratton, the famous spotted negro, was born on the island of St. Vincent, both of his parents being coal-black natives of Africa. Even among the half-civilized inhabitants of St. Vincent Gratton was such a curiosity that they readily paid $1 each for the privilege of seeing what was then termed "the eighth wonder of the world."

The superstitious prejudices of the mongrel negro population placed the freak in such danger of being sacrificed that it was deemed advisable to ship him to England. The child was about fifteen months old when he landed with his parents in Bristol. In color his skin was everywhere parti-colored, transparent white and brownish black. On the crown of his head there were several perfect white triangles with black ones of equally perfect contour within them, which were formed by the odd alterations in the color of the hair, or wool. On his back, almost directly between the shoulders, there was an almost perfect circle with a square of black upon the inside, which in turn had a white triangle in its center. On one leg there was a circle similar to that on the back, all the other spots, except the numerous triangles on the head, neck and face, having no uniformity whatever, being great blotches of white on the black surface with no seeming regard for place or situation.

When nearly five years old this remarkable specimen of the genus homo died of a swelling of the jaw, which, curious to say, eliminated nearly every spot from the head, neck and face.—St. Louis Republic.

—A small boy living in Ventura, Cal., went out into a vacant lot and stood upon his head. This is as natural a position for a small boy to assume as any other, but in this instance, unfortunately, the lad was not sufficiently careful in choosing his ground, for in putting down his head he placed it directly upon the body of a large gopher snake that chanced to be taking a sun bath just there. A small boy is very heavy sometimes, and the snake was irritated. Quick as a flash it slid out from under the boy's head, and, turning, bit him directly upon the lower lip. The wound was painful, although not at all dangerous.

—Mrs. Wordsworth and a lady were walking once in a wood when the stock-dove was cooing. A farmer's wife coming by said, "O, I do like stockdoves!" Mrs. Wordsworth's (says Haydon) in all her enthusiasm for Wordsworth's beautiful address to the stockdove, took the old woman to her heart. "But," continued the old woman, "some like them in a pie; for my part there's nothing like 'em stewed in onions!"

—A new mania for collecting has broken out. This time it is not snuff boxes or canes, but shaving mugs. What next?

TAMING THE QUAILS.

Buckwheat and Gradual Advances Conquer the Wild Birds.

Several weeks ago Mrs. D. N. Snyder, of Jefferson township saw a lot of quails dusting themselves under some currant bushes in the back end of her garden. The birds looked so happy and contented that she thought it would be too bad to disturb them so she returned to the house without pulling the weeds out of a patch of onions that she had gone there for the purpose of doing. In an hour or so the quails had disappeared in the tall timothy of an adjoining meadow, and Mrs Snyder scattered some buckwheat around where they had been wallowing. On the following day the birds came there again, gobbled up the buckwheat, and had a good time. Every day for a week or so Mrs. Snyder scattered grain among the bushes for the quails to feed on, and the birds soon got so that they looked for food in the garden as regularly as they did for a resting place at night out in the woods, back of the big meadow lot.

One morning the kind-hearted woman forgot to throw the buckwheat, but the quails reminded her of her negligence by appearing at the usual hour and making a great fuss and noise because there wasn't any grain in the garden for them to pick up. Mrs. Snyder let the birds hunt for other kinds of food that day, and for several mornings after that she didn't fail to give them a good feed of buckwheat. Then she missed a morning on purpose to see how the quails would act when they didn't find any grain near the currant bushes, watching from a second-story window for them to make their appearance.

Promptly on time the whole flock crept under the garden fence from the meadow, ran among the bushes, and began to dodge and flutter about where they had been in the habit of finding the buckwheat. When they had searched long enough to learn that no grain had been put there for them, the birds piped in low tones, fluttered uneasily, scattered into the vegetable beds, and appeared to be very much disappointed. In a little while the quails gave up the search, assembled under the currant bushes, and went to dusting themselves in the soil. Mrs. Snyder counted fourteen in the flock, and then she went down stairs, got a basinful of buckwheat, and tiptoed her way into the garden. When she had got as near to the quails as she could get without scaring them, Mrs. Snyder flung a handful of buckwheat toward the quiet little flock. It fell among them, and they all scampered under the fence and went out of sight in a hurry. Then she threw some more of the grain on the ground where they had been, and secreted herself behind a row of pea vines. Presently one of the birds ventured to crawl under the fence into the garden. It soon found the buckwheat, and set to filling its crop, and at this the other birds took courage, filed from their hiding places, and went to picking up the grain as though each was determined to get its share.

From her place of concealment Mrs. Snyder flung a handful of buckwheat into the air, so that it fell into the midst of the flock. It scared the birds a little, but they quickly resumed their feeding, and Mrs. Snyder began to whistle to them, flinging more grain into the air as she whistled. That excited their curiosity just enough to make them look up for a moment, and Mrs. Snyder emptied the basin and stole away, without letting the birds see her. She fed the quails in this way for a few days, gradually got them used to her whistle and voice, and let them get sight of her by degrees. Inside of a month from the time she first saw the birds in the garden she had them so well tamed that they fluttered out of the meadow whenever she called them, ate in her presence, and did not seem to fear her at all. Since then Mrs. Snyder has taken a good deal of comfort with her strange little flock, and she said the other day that the confidence the birds have in her pays her many times over for all the trouble she has made herself in getting the wild little creatures to be as tame as they are.—Scranton (Pa.) Wrong, but No Matter.

"The census," read Sniffkins aloud the other evening, "embraces twenty million women."

"Happy man!" commented Simkins, who had just awakened from a doze in the corner.—Judge.

THREAD MILLS IDLE

The Clark Company Shut Out Their Employes.

THE SUPERINTENDENT BLAMED.

He Seeks Revenge for the Efforts Made to Oust Him from His Position.

Nearly 3,000 Hands Thrown Out of Employment—The Spinners Prepared for a Fight—The Unorganized Employes to Appeal to the Public—The Clarks Refuse to Talk About the Trouble.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 11.—The mills of the Clark Thread Company in Kearney and Newark have closed down and almost 3,000 people were thrown out of employment. The excuse given by the firm is that the mills are closed for repairs until January 1, when work will again be resumed, but the employes insist that they are locked out to satisfy the spleen of Superintendent Walmsley for the persistent efforts they have made to oust him from his position.

Neither Walmsley, who came into notoriety two years ago as the result of a strike among the girls employed in the mills because of their refusal to discard the bustle, nor the members of the firm will say anything about the shut-down.

Of those who are now out of employment, 2,500 are young women, 105 spinners and 102 creelers. For almost a year discontent has existed among the mill hands, because of the superintendent's aggressive tactics, especially among the spinners.

The only thoroughly organized body in the mills are the spinners, but relief committees have been organized to see what can be dons for the others. The spinners say that the last strike cost them $8,000, and that they did not have to get aid from the national union, and that they are in even better shape now. Out of the relief fund each striker will be allowed from $5 to $8 a week.

A meeting of the unorganized employes is being held to-day to draft an appeal to the public.

Since the trouble began, Superintendent Walmsley has been in great fear, and yesterday the strikers learned that a policeman from the second precinct station in Newark had been detailed to remain all night with him in his house.

A committee of the Newark mill men waited upon Captain McManus and were told that this detail was at the order of Chief Hopper. The men called on the latter, who told them that the request was not made by any one on behalf of Walmsley for any officer, but it had been done entirely on the responsibility of the Chief, as during the last strike explosives had been found near the man's house, and while none of the strikers were believed to be guilty of placing them there, the man was entitled to protection.

The Clarks again refused to talk of the strike.

WILL INFORM THE CZAR.

Influential Englishmen Deplore the Condition of the Russian Jews.

LONDON, Dec. 11. — At the Mansion House a meeting of influential gentlemen was convened to consider the condition of the Russian Jews. The Lord Mayor was in the chair, and a resolution was moved by the Duke of Westminster deploring the unfortunate position in which the Jews of Russia were placed.

In introducing his resolution the Duke said that he believed with Cardinal Manning that the Czar was ignorant of the unhappy circumstances by which the Jews were surrounded in his dominions.

The motion of the Duke was seconded by Lord Ripon and was then adopted by the meeting.

A committee was appointed whose duty it will be to inform the Czar of the proceedings had.

Mary Metzdorf Changes Her Plea.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 11.—Mary Metzdorf, the 16-year-old prisoner, who is under conviction of murder, was brought into court to enable her to withdraw her plea of guilty of murder in the first degree which she entered at the time of her arraignment for the killing of her little brother, James, and Miss Louisa Broadwater. She stated that she wished to withdraw her plea of guilty and plead not guilty instead. The judge allowed her to do so.

King Humbert's Speech.

ROME, Dec. 11.—In his speech opening the Italian Parliament, King Humbert said: "Following my father's example I have always respected the rights of my ancestors' religion, but I will never suffer my sovereign authority to be derogated in that religion's name." This utterance was received with enthusiastic applause.

Farmers on a Jaunt.

BARTOW, Fla., Dec. 11.—The party of visiting Farmers' Alliance delegates, numbering 281, embarked from Long Pier on the stemer Sadie for Tampa. At the latter place they were royally entertained. From Tampa they went by rail northward to Plant City, Lakeland and Kissimee.

New York Testing the Lymph.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Dr. Jacobi administered Dr. Koch's lymph to eight patients at Mt. Sinai Hospital in the presence of a large number of physicians. The first use of the lymph here was made by Dr. Kinnicutt at St. Luke's Hospital in treating a case of tuberculosis.

Snow-Bound or Lost.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—A special from San Francisco intimates that the Arkell exploring expedition in Alaska has possibly been lost. A two-months-old letter from one of the party has been received at San Francisco so much belated that the party is known to be snow-bound.

CAUGHT IN A HURRICANE.

Incoming Steamers Report that Several Seamen Were Swept Overboard.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 11.—Several over-due ocean vessels have arrived here, and all of them report a more or less serious experience with the great hurricane which swept the Atlantic about December 1.

The bark, Amy, which arrived from Rio Janeiro, was caught in the storm. Before it was over she had lost a seaman, had her cargo shifted, her sails torn from the gaskets and everything on deck started.

On November 30, the bark was struck by a hurricane that lasted four hours. Its fury was appalling. Richard Caln, a seaman of Sheffield, England was swept away. A few minutes later another wave swept over the Amy. It caught Second Mate John Wilson at his post, and in a moment he was out in the sea. As the bark struggled to right itself, a returning wave struck her, and when she had shaken it from her deck the crew were surprised to see Wilson clinging to a rope. The returning wave had brought him back.

The bark Julia Rollins, which arrived from Rio, was also caught in the hurricane and scudded before the wind for five hours. On the way out the Rollins lost a seaman known as Louis, a native of Italy.

The North German Lloyd steamship, Hermann, which arrived from Bremen with 782 immigrants, experienced a very rough voyage.

CREDITORS APPEALED TO.

Barker & Co. Ask for an Extension of One Year.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 11.—The creditors of Barker & Co., the bankers who made an assignment recently, have been asked to grant an extension for one year.

A paper to that effect has been circulated among the creditors for several days, and it is said that a number of signatures have been obtained. The principal creditors of the firm are banks, trust companies and other financial institutions, and their officers have signed the paper.

Boisterous Freshmen.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 11.— The freshmen of the University of Rochester, returning from a class supper at Geneseo, marched into the chapel bearing aloft the toastmaster and yelling the class yell, stopping the religious exercises. President Hill suspended the freshmen from chapel for the rest of the term, causing them to lose term examinations. The leaders will probably be more severely dealt with.

Component Parts of Koch's Lymph.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—An analysis of Koch's lymph for the cure of consumption has been made in this city. It reveals the fact that the remedy is composed of the ptomaines of tubercular bacilli, which is a poison as violent as the venom of a serpent; cyanure of gold and glycerine. The glycerine preserves the ptomaines and the gold gives the liquid its brownish color.

It Was Murphy, the Athlete.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Dec. 11.—It now transpires that the horse and chicken thief who was shot dead by Peter Lehman at Chatham on November 26 was not, as was supposed, Michael Murphy, of South Lee, but P. J. Murphy, of North Wilbraham, who was the best known all-around athlete in Western Massachusetts.

Passed a Large Steamer on Fire.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 11.—The British steamer Lero has arrived from Hamburg. She sustained considerable damage during the recent hurricane. On December 1 she passed a large vessel, apparently a steamer, on fire. Owing to the gale she could render no assistance to the distressed vessel.

Parnell's American Supporters.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—The meeting at the Grand Pacific to inaugurate a campaign in favor of Parnell was attended almost exclusively by the triangle, anti-Cronin and physical force elements. The same people issued a secret circular before the Dilion-O'Brien demonstration here, demanding that their adherents boycott it.

Boston's New Board of Aldermen.

BOSTON, Dec. 11.—In canvassing the Aldermanic returns it was found that by the official figures John H. Sullivan, Democrat, was elected to the board from the First District, instead of Westly A. Gove, Republican, which makes the board stand Democrats, 9; Republicans, 3. Sullivan's plurality is 23.

An Assemblyman Indicted.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Assemblyman-elect Mulvaney, of the Fifth District, was indicted by the Grand Jury on a charge of electioneering within 100 feet of the polls at the late election. Prof. Guttheil, of Columbia College, is the complainant.

Young Tried for Wife Murder.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Dec. 11.—Joseph F. Young is on trial here for the murder of his wife, in a fit of jealousy, on September 4 last. Judge Reed charged the jury that no premeditation was shown, and their verdict must be murder in the second degree or an acquittal.

THE DANGER IS OVER

Secretary Windom Recalls the Four Per Cent Call.

$8,000,000 PURCHASED TO DATE.

Official Announcement Made by the Treasury Department.

The Senate Passes the Rebate on Tobacco Bill—The Quay Substitute Finished—Total Population of the Country—Republican Senators in Caucus Decide to Hold Night Sessions.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Secretary Windom has suspended the call for four per cent. bonds issued Saturday last. The amount of purchases up to date aggregates nearly $8,000,000, for which the output will be about $10,000,000. The Secretary was induced to act as he did by the encouraging news as to the state of the market received from New York and the conviction that the crisis had passed. It will be recalled that the offer of Saturday called for but $5,000,000 (face value), but the responses have been so tempting that the Secretary purchased more than had been proposed.

In a circular issued from the Treasury Department this official announcement was made:

"The 4 per cent. bonds accepted yesterday by the Secretary of the Treasury completed the amount which he offered to purchase, and bond redemption will, therefore, for the present be limited to the 4 1-2 per cents., which the Secretary will continue to redeem at par and interest to maturity. The Secretary will also purchase for the Union Pacific sinking fund any first mortgage Pacific Railroad bonds, which are a prior lien to the subsidy bonds, and pay for them such a price as will realize 4 per cent. per annum on the investment. The amount which will be purchased is limited for the present to $500,000."

WORK OF CONGRESS.

The Senate Passes the House Bill Ordering a Rebate on Tobacco.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—In the Senate the House bill to authorize a rebate on tobacco was passed.

Mr. George spoke in opposition to the Federal Election bill.

A general conference was ordered by the Senate on the building bills passed by the House yesterday.

The House passed the bill to authorize the Corpus Christi and Padre Island Harbor Company to construct a harbor off Padre Island; also the Senate bill for the relief of the Mission Indians in California.

Population of the Country 63,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The total population of the country, including Indians, will be 63,000,000 after all. Already the Census Office has returned in round numbers 315,000 Indians and whites in the Indian Territory. This, with the population of Alaska, which Special Agent Petroff estimates at 88,000, will bring up the total population of the United States to 63,000,000, a numerical gain of 13,000,000 for the decade since 1880.

Republican Senatorial Caucus.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The caucus of Republican Senators last night agreed to pass a resolution for the meeting of the Senate at 10 a. m. and for night sessions hereafter. A committee was appointed to consider the necessity for financial legislation. A proposition to change the rules was pending when the caucus adjourned.

Will Re-Open the Investigation.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The Special House Committee appointed to investigate the charges made against Commissioner of Pensions Raum met this morning and decided to re-open the investigation on Saturday next with the examination of Mr. McPherson of the Washington staff of the New York "Tribune."

The Quay Substitute Finished.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Senator Quay has completed a rough draft of a substitute for the Hoar and Lodge Federal Elections bills. It is believed that he is acting in accordance with the sentiment expressed by the Republican party leaders outside of the Senate at the conferences held in this city last week.

Declined the Appointment.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Hon. Patrick Walsh of Augusta, Ga., has declined the appointment as a member of the Warm Springs Indian Commission, tendered him by President Harrison.

On Trial for the Reading Wreck.

READING, Pa., Dec. 11.—The trial of Henry C. Kemp, the brakeman charged with causing the cwrek on the Reading Railroad at Shoemakersville, when 21 were killed and many injured, has begun here.

Convicted of Malpractice.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Dec. 11.—Dr. Eben A. Wood of this city was convicted of criminal malpractice, this being the first time in Onondaga County that a conviction has been reached in a similar case.

TORTURED BY FIENDS.

Another Probable Murder in New Jersey that is Shrouded in Mystery.

FAIRVIEW, N. J., Dec. 11.—This usually quiet village is stirred to the depths over a dastardly attack on Mrs. Elizabeth Beermann, wife of Henry Beermann, a saloonkeeper at No. 341 Pearl street, New York, by two tramps or two of the scoundrels that hang around the Guttenberg race-course.

Mrs. Beermann is a handsome woman of 26, lives in one of the most comfortable houses in Fairview, and is well known and respected in the neighborhood. While returning from a visit to her sister in Hoboken she took the car for Guttenburg on the line which ends just opposite Nungasser's Hotel. Mrs. Beermann noticed a man on the stoop of the hotel, but thought no more of him.

The following is the story told by the terribly mangled woman:

"When near Day's Bridge I heard a man walking close behind me. I looked round and he said something to me, but what it was I could not hear. The next moment he struck me a terrible blow on my head with some very heavy weapon. I lost consciousness and remembered nothing till I found myself at home. I think I can identify the man. He was short, strongly made, and wore a dark suit and dark hat. I did not see any second man."

She has two fractures of the skull, her scalp is actually knocked into a jelly, and most of her hair was either knocked or torn off by the fiend. Besides the injuries her nose was broken and all her front teeth knocked out. "I am sadly afraid she will not live," was the report made by Beerman to-day. "She has been complaining more than at any time since the attack."

AN APPEAL TO PARNELL.

The Irish Municipal Council of New York Ask Him to Retire.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The Executive Committee of the Municipal Council, Irish National League of New York city, cabled the following to Mr. Parnell at Dublin: "The Executive Committee of the New York Municipal Council, Irish National League, gratefully remember your magnificent services to your country and deplore the necessities of the hour.

"We believe your retirement for the present absolutely essential to success. A divided Irish party will result in the collapse of Irish-American support. Unity means triumph, division means disaster and permanent ruin. We beg you to make the sacrifice which, more even than your past services, will endear you to every lover of Ireland.

"Our loyalty and services in the past will attest the sincerity of our motives. We make this appeal that Ireland may not be deprived of your future usefulness, and that her cause may not perish in our day and generation."

Bishop McMahon's Residence Damaged.

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 11.—Fire was discovered last evening in the residence of Bishop McMahon and the Roman Catholic priests, situated next east of St. Joseph's Cathedral on Farmington avenue. The fire started from the furnace and worked up as far as the third floor, the damage, however, being confined to the northeast corner of the building. The damage is estimated at $6,000; fully covered by insurance.

Opening of the Pulitzer Building.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The magnificent new Pulitzer Building, the future home of the New York World, was formally opened last night with a full dress reception which was attended by many Senators, Congressmen, Governors of States and people of prominence from all parts of the country. The decorations and illumination of the building were beautiful and the attendance amounted to almost a crush.

Detectives at Work on the Chester Case.

CHESTER, Pa., Dec. 11.—Three expert detectives have been engaged by the District Attorney to work on the Emma Pfitzenmyer murder mystery. It is said that a pair of bloody pantaloons and a pair of suspenders also smeared with blood were found to-day, and that an effort is being made to find out who they belonged to. Other evidence is believed to be in the possession of the authorities.

READING, Pa., Dec. 11.—The Grand Jury ignored the bills against the eight Reading Railroad officials, charged with intimidating voters in the interest of the Republican State ticket at the last election, and asking the next Legislature to enact laws for the protection of voters.

TROUBLE IN DUBLIN

"United Ireland" Seized by Parnell, But Recaptured.

ALL HIS EDITORIALS DESTROYED

The Irish Leader Speaks to a Big Crowd in the Rotunda.

Lifted Upon the Shoulders of the People and Carried to the Platform—He Tells His Admirers He Will Cross the Rubicon if the Youth of Ireland Will Stand by Him in His Struggle.

DUBLIN, Dec. 11.—Mr. Parnell spent most of the day in conference with his supporters. When he left Dr. Kenny's house for the Rotunda he was quickly surrounded by a crowd of his admirers, who escorted him to the hall. Here an immence crowd was assembled, and Mr. Parnell was accorded a great ovation.

He was lifted upon the shoulders of the people, and in that manner passed along to the platform, the hall being so densely crowded that all the aisles were blocked up.

The Mayor presided and moved a resolution of confidence in Mr. Parnell which was adopted by acclamation.

Mr. Parnell then rose to speak, but it was several minutes before he could be heard on account of the cheering.

The Speech.

Mr. Parnell repeated the arguments heretofore dwelt upon by him, to the effect that the plans of Mr. Gladstone in regard to home rule would not be found satisfactory unless the Irish party maintained its independence and extorted the proper degree of local powers as the price of their support of the Liberals.

He declared the impossibility of the secessionists coping with the Liberal leaders, and reiterated his charges that they had been seduced to take a stand against him by Liberal wire-pullers.

We stand at the parting of the ways. It is an issue meaning life or death to the constitutional movement. I have not promised you absolute success, but I repeat with all the force and energy my poor voice can give, that Ireland can win upon no other line, and if our constitutional movement is broken down, sundered, discredited and forgotten, England will be face to face with that imperishable force which now gives me vitality and power. (Loud cheers.)

If Ireland leaves this port, to which I have led her, almost in sight of victory, I will not for my part say what will accompany her future. (Cheers.) But I shall claim my right to be warned by mistakes of the past and shape my course accordingly. You may ask the meaning of this—whether I intend to cross the Rubicon and burn my boats. I will cross the Rubicon, and I have no boats to burn.

Mr. Parnell expressed himself as confident of winning if the youth of Ireland remained with him.

PARNELL'S BOLD STROKE.

Developing Qualities that His Enemies Did Not Think He Possessed.

DUBLIN, Dec. 11.—Parnell's forcible seizure of United Ireland was as bold a stroke as his tearing up the resolution for his deposition at Saturday's Nationalist meeting, and it has produced a remarkable impression.

Mr. Parnell is one of the directors of the company owning United Ireland, and acting in that capacity he seized the plant of the paper, stopped the issue of the current edition and ejected Editor Bodkin. A desperate row occurred in the downstairs office between the Sheriff's officers and the sub-editors. Sticks and stones were used as weapons and the air was filled with flying missiles. Finally, after a sharp and fierce struggle, the subeditors were put out of the building.

Parnell is developing qualities that few knew him to possess. One of the leading anti-Parnellites said "he is made of the stuff that Cæsars and Napoleons are formed of. He would sacrifice a whole race to his personal ambition and it looks as though he had the strength to do so."

This may be an exaggerated view of the Irish leader's potency, but it is undeniable that from the moment of his setting foot on Irish soil the situation began to turn still more in his favor than it had seemed to be before.

Present appearances all indicate that Parnell will sweep the country in his first appeal. Whether there will be a reaction on second thought or not it is too early to predict with certainty.

Mr. Parnell has nominated Mr. Barry O'Brien, the author, to oppose Sir John Pope Hennessy as a candidate for Parliament in North Kilkenny.

Mr. Parnell received a telegram from the workingmen of Kilkenny assuring him of their support.

At a meeting of the Town Council of the City of Edinburgh it was ordered that the name of Charles Stewart Parnell be erased from the roll of burgesses.

THE SECOND BATTLE.

The Office of the United Ireland Raided by Anti-Parnellites.

DUBLIN, Dec. 11.—Early this morning a strong party of Mr. Parnell's opponents made a descent upon and recaptured the offices of United Ireland.

The invaders destroyed all the "leaders" which had been prepared by Mr. Leamy, who was installed as editor by Mr. Parnell, and turned all the matter that they found set up into the fire. Then they took possession of the ledgers and other books and documents belonging to the concern. All this was done in the name of William O'Brien.

A strong posse from various laborers' societies has been left as a garrison, with instructions to remain on guard day and night and to resist by force any further intrusion by Mr. Parnell and his friends. It is stated that the suppressed edition of the paper will appear to-morrow.

ANTI-PARNELL MANIFESTO.

Bound to Protect Ireland's Cause at Whatever Personal Sacrifice.

DUBLIN, Dec. 11.—The manifesto of the seceding majority of the Irish party declares that they are bound to protect the cause of their country at whatever personal sacrifice.

It asserts that Mr. Parnell has disregarded their appeal to remember the country, and has evinced an ill-judged determination to maintain a position which will not be sustained by the people. It is the duty of all Irishmen, irrespective of their kindly personal feelings toward Mr. Parnell, to adopt a course that will save the country from the danger which threatens it as a result of Mr. Parnell's misconduct.

The document further says that Mr. Parnell's utterances would indicate that he is the injured party, whereas he alone is responsible for the present deplorable condition of affairs. It details Mr. Parnell's failure to keep his promise to repel the charges of Captain O'Shea, and makes many severe references to his conduct since the charges were brought against him.

Parnell's personality, it avers, obstructs Ireland's freedom. If he is re-elected the Tory Government will resume its power and coercion will receive a new lease of life. The manifesto is replete with declarations of the fullest confidence in Mr. Gladstone's desire and ability to grant substantial self-government to Ireland.

The document is signed by 47 members, headed by Justin McCarthy. It concludes: "The issue we submit to the people is one upon which the fortunes of our country must depend. May God defend the right."

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—Christmas comes two weeks from to-day.

—Nobody seems to have any doubts about the ice crop this season.

—The coffers of the cashier at the Holiday Bazar at The Crescent grow hourly more heavy.

—The oldest inhabitants say "We may have snow this Winter, but we won't have any sleighing."

—The Workers' Training Class for ladies will meet as usual at the Y. M. C. A. to-morrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

—Plainfielders desiring excellent tuition in German are referred to the professional card of George Tubbe, in another column.

—The Ladies' Aid Society will hold its semi-annual meeting, to-morrow at 4 o'clock P. M. in the Crescent Avenue church parlors.

—"Resolved, That the increase of wealth is a benefit to the country," is the question for debate at the meeting of the Young Men's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday evening next.

—The sixteenth annual meeting of the New Jersey State Horticultural Society will be held at New Brunswick, in the State Agricultural building, Thursday and Friday, December 18 and 19.

—Station Agent W. C. Osman has been appointed postmaster at Finderne, a position held by him several years ago and recently made vacant by the removal to Plainfield of E. H. Rider.—Somerville Messenger.

—The regular sewing meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society will be held to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church. All the ladies of the congregation are cordially invited.

—The Plainfield Produce Company have reduced the prices of their goods, and in a new advertisement today tell why they do so, and what benefit they and their patrons will receive from their new method of transacting business.

—More than two hundred people enjoyed the sociable of the St. George Cricket Club at Amphion Hall last evening. The hall was nicely decorated, and with the floor awhirl with dancers presented an enlivening sight. Fifty of the guests were from New York.

—A new singing class for boys, to be taught by E. A. Embury, of Washington avenue, will be organized at the Y. M. C. A. Monday at 4 P. M. The class now conducted by Mr. Embury has made most gratifying progress. The lessons will be given twice a week in the afternoon and without any charge.

—The body of a man, supposed to be one of a gang of bridge builders at work near Hamilton station, on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, was found on the track between Skillman and Harlingen Monday morning. It was terribly mangled, the head being almost entirely cut, off and one arm and other portions of his anatomy torn away. The body was taken to Bound Brook.

—That intelligent compositor who was responsible for the typographical error in the programme of a local entertainment which issued the startling command "Kiss Annabel Blank!" instead of merely recording the name of the young lady, has been told by admirers of Miss Annabel—whose real name is of course something else—that they don't blame him for losing his head, but that he must n't do it again.

—Messrs. Rockafellow and Mason have returned from a visit to Richfield, Conn., where they have been filling large business contracts for R. H McCullogh of North Plainfield. They put in big plate glass windows and did other building work with the thermometer considerably below freezing point. Thanksgiving Day the mercury registered 12° above zero; the next day, ten; and last Tuesday, five. From the altitude where they worked, 1,200 feet above sea level, they had a magnificent view of Long Island Sound in one direction, and of the Catskills in another.

The Man Lost His Breath, and the Ladies Fled in Terror.

A coachman riding a spirited horse rashly ventured underneath the Broadway bridge of the Jersey Central Railroad, while a train was thundering overhead, yesterday afternoon, and the horse, startled at the clatter, pranced around till it stumbled over the curb stone and fell, with its rider, to the pavement. Men who rushed forward to grasp the animal's bridle thought at first that the coachman was crushed to death, but he had only had the breath rolled out of him. When he recovered his breathing facilities he mounted his horse again and rode away, and the women who had fled for safety to the door yard of the Friends' meeting-house also breathed easier and came timidly forth from their place of refuge.

What Jimmy Knows About Eggs.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In your issue of Tuesday a Plainfield chef says that "an egg may be cooked in one hundred and ten different ways." One of your subscribers respectfully would say that "an egg can be cooked in only one way, but one hundred and ten eggs may be cooked in one hundred and ten different ways—if one knows how to do it."

JIMMY.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

The Scotch Plains Baptist church seems to be investing in real estate its newly acquired legacy from the Lee brothers. The Trustees have just paid to W. H. Dean and wife $1,500 for property in Warren.

Considerable landscape gardening has been done at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Martin, at Washington and Mercer avenues, and the grounds are greatly improved in appearance. Trees and shrubbery have been trimmed, removed, and transplanted, and at first glance one hardly recognizes the place.

THE PRESS learns that G. E. Hasselmann has dropped a remark that will excite additional interest in his testimonial which is to take place at the Gesang and Turn Verein Hall, next Wednesday. Mr. Hasselmann states that half the profits of the entertainment will be equally divided between the Children's Home and Muhlenberg Hospital. This announcement can not but attract a large gathering of the friends of these popular charities.

W. Manning, Superintendent of the Fanwood Stone Crushing Company, has among his collection of curiosities a rare time table of the Central Railroad of New Jersey for the Winter of 1858. Plainfield, then had eight passenger trains a day—four to Easton, and four for New York—and one freight train daily each way. Cranford was then Craneville; Fanwood was Scotch Plains, and Dunellen was New Market. The trip between New York and Plainfield occupied from two hours to two hours and a half; from Easton to New York occupied from four to seven hours. The fare from Plainfield to New York was fifty cents one way; from Plainfield to Easton $1.25.

Will the Next Assessment be Based on Such Estimated Increase?

Union county in eighteen months has expended $300,000 in the building of new roads. It is needless to say that this money was all raised by the sale of bonds, and it is not perhaps impertinent to suggest that the readiness with which the county created this immense debt, is not entirely unconnected with the ease with which Rahway and Elizabeth succeeded in scaling down their municipal indebtedness by refusing to pay either principal or interest, and defy the Courts to compel them to do so. Perhaps this expenditure may be wise in a speculative sense, but we are inclined to dispute the assertion of the Newark Journal "that for every dollar spent on the roadways property has appreciated at least five dollars worth." If the next report of the Union county ratables, published in the Comptroller's report, shows an increase of $1,500,000 in the taxable values of Union county real estate, we shall be very glad to publish the fact. We do not believe it will, and we must conclude that the precedent set by Union is not a proper one for Mercer to follow until some better way of paying for the improvement shall be devised than the wholesale issue of bonds and the increase of the county debt. Trenton True American.

The Son of a Plainfield Millionaire in a Railway Accident.

James E. Clark, son of the West Seventh street millionaire, had a miraculous escape from death in the recent collision at Jacksonville, Ill. The sleeping car in which he was slumbering when the crash came was cut in half by the locomotive of a freight train on a railroad crossing at right angles to the road on which his train was running. The car was completely wrecked, and three of Mr. Clark's seven fellow-passengers were killed and horribly mangled, while three others were seriously hurt. Mr. Clark was thrown from his berth to the platform of the railway station, where the blankets in which he was wrapped broke his fall. How he escaped the flying fragments of the wreck, the escaping steam, and the other horrors of the accident, he will never know. He was considerably bruised and jarred, and suffered severely from the nervous shock, but has recovered sufficiently to write an interesting letter home to his father. His brother Frank from St. Louis attended him during the time he was confined at the hospital.

No Such Scheme.

The Plainfield gas and electric light companies have consolidated and begun business with a capital of $175,000. The Press of that city intimates that this is a scheme to advance the price of light there, and regards the move as a dangerous monopoly. There has been some talk of a consolidation here, which might be a good thing, as far as reducing operating expenses, but the tendency of all monopolies is to make the "dear public" pay the piper.—New Brunswick Home News.

If THE PRESS "intimated" (and we do not think we did) that the consolidation was a scheme to advance the price of light, we take it all back. THE PRESS does not believe it is that kind of a scheme.

Bowling for a Badge.

As Winter advances, Fanwood gaiety seems to be progressing. A Handicap Bowling Tournament is being arranged by Abner P. Downer in which the great and only R. P. Moore will give points to every other member of the Club. One member, however, declines to accept the handicap, and therefore stands on the same plane as "R. P." The prize to be bowled for is a gold badge with a diamond centre-piece, and to be surrounded with miniature likenesses of the gentlemen entering the tournament.

Notes of the Theatres.

Denman Thompson and Messrs. Gilmore & Tompkins, of the Academy, New York, have almost decided to yield to the great financial pressure exerted on them by out-of-town managers to permit "The Old Homestead" to leave the big Academy after the current season. If the owners of the play so conclude, "The Soudan," the great Boston success, will be put on at the big Academy for a whole year's run, beginning in August.

"Nero's" sensational reign at Niblo's will be brought to a close Saturday evening, Dec. 13, and will be succeeded by the successful musical comedy, "My Aunt Bridget," presented by Monroe & Rice, and their admirable company of mirth-makers. Following the departure of "My Aunt Bridget," which will remain but a fortnight, and which will be the final metropolitan presentation of the piece, owing to the separation of Monroe & Rice after the present season, Niblo's stage will be given over to the presentation of the big English pantomime burlesque, "Babes in the Wood," which Manager Henry J. Leslie, of the Lyric Theatre, London, brings to this country after a very successful season at the Drury Lane Theatre. The burlesque, with portly Wm. Mestayer and ponderous George Fortescue, who, taken together, tip the scales at 600 pounds, as the Babes, is playing a preliminary engagement at the Auditorium Theatre, Chicago, prior to its important season at Niblo's.

Issued Life Insurance Policies for Gravestones.

Friends of Wm. J. Rouse, the local agent of the Prudential Insurance Company who was arrested Tuesday on the charge of embezzlement, claim that he is the victim of dishonest assistants. It is said that two young men fleeced him out of considerable money by entering his employ and having him issue life insurance policies to people whose names they had copied from headstones in the local churchyards, collecting their commissions from him on the bogus policies, and causing trouble for him with the companies because of the lapses of payments that very naturally resulted, and some of which he paid for out of his own pocket. Rouse says that he can prove by documentary evidence that he is entirely innocent of the charges made against him, and that he has always been thoroughly honest in his dealings with the company. He does not expect even to be indicted for the alleged offense. The charge of inspector Wm. W. Dougal, the complainant in the case, is said to be the result of false testimony given by another agent who is now in trouble with the concern, and who is said to be partly responsible for Rouse's having been duped into losses by others.

A Considerate Committee and an Excellent Lecture.

The lecture committee of the Unitarian church have won the cordial good will of local newspaper men by courteously departing from the long-established and unjust method most entertainment managers have of labeling journalistic passes "Complimentary", in big letters. The tickets the Unitarian committee have sent out to the newspaper men for the lecture of the Rev. C. H. Eaton at The Casino, to-night, are as neat and clean and undefaced as those which will be used by other individuals. There is no earthly reason for, and no justice in, making a newspaper man's ticket of admission conspicuous by a "dead-head" label. If the newspapers began to stamp, in glaring letters, "Complimentary" or "Dead-head" across the face of the free reading notices given to entertainments, there would be a great howl of protest. The Unitarian committee pays a delicate compliment to journalistic honor, and the newspaper men will not forget their graceful act. A lecture managed by such a considerate committee deserves abundant success.

Sergeant Lynch is Very Busy Again.

It is only once in Plainfield's lifetime that her people have an opportunity of hearing such music as was played on the streets this morning by the band traveling with the "Uncle Hiram" company. Consequently Sergeant Lynch's officiousness in ordering the players around, was not approved of by the entertained spectators.

If he really wants to earn his pay by moving someody, he might begin by cleaning the corners of the scores of loafers who breath rum, expectorate tobacco and express all sorts of blasphemy, across the faces, on the skirts and in the ears of the wives and daughters of Plainfield. These loafers, black and white, have been permitted to block the sidewalks night after night for the past fifteen years.

When such a band as that of this morning, will be so kind as to stop on the street and play, the people will be much obliged if Sergeant Lynch will mind his own business.

Ripley Hill as a Place of Residence.

For Ripley Hill as a superior place of residence, it is claimed, that it combines the following excellencies: Height above tide-water; nearness to Railroad station, 3 to 5 minutes walk; good drainage; wide avenues well kept and shaded with elms and maples of twenty years' growth; pure water; low prices of lots; liberal discounts off to those who will build at once; facilities for obtaining loans for those who desire; a low commutation, 21 cents a day; rapid transit, 42 minutes from New York City; a location where puny children become robust; near enough to the Academy to lunch at home; first-class neighborhood.—Union County Standard.

Liquor in a Club Car.

It has always been supposed that the Fanwood Club Car was governed by similar rules pertaining to the Howard Club Car of Plainfield. In the case of the Howard Car no intoxicating liquors are permitted, but last Monday evening, while hurriedly opening his satchel on the Fanwood Car, a prominent lawyer of Scotch Plains—who, however, does not practise in New Jersey—let fall on the floor a very suspicious utensil which in the eyes of the initiated resembled a most important adjunct to a whisky bottle. When asked to explain he remarked "I am a gentleman and above reproach."

Plainfielders Abroad.

The Harlingen correspondent of the Somerville Messenger says that "Mrs. Frank Fine of Plainfield has been spending a few days with Mrs. A. D. Messerole"; and that "Mrs. Winfield Schomp and son of Plainfield spent last Saturday and Sunday visiting friends in our vicinity."

Miss Willard Denies a Silly Rumor.

A statement having been published that Miss Frances E. Willard, president of the World's Christian Temperance Union, would be a candidate for the office of Bishop in the Methodist Episcopal church, provided that the vote taken in the churches and the other necessary action proved favorable to the admission of women to membership in the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, Miss Willard refutes the statement in a letter recently received, as follows:

Evanston, Ill., Nov. 27, 1890.

The newspaper talk about my candidacy for a bishopric in the Methodist church is the idlest, frothiest of all fol-de-rol. Never, by word or deed, have I intimated the faintest thought or purpose in that direction. I have said that women should have no artificial barriers placed before them in church or State, and I firmly believe that to be the only rational position on the woman question.

Somebody has jumped from this broad generalization to a specific conclusion without troubling himself to remember that I have never been either licensed or ordained, and am consequently outside the line of any ecclesiastical promotion; but I see no reason in the nature of the case why a woman might not be a bishop, and I believe that if the united brain and heart power of man and woman were brought into every circle of power in church and State it would be the very best thing that could happen to humanity.

Housewives Pay for Promises that Are Never Kept.

Various reports are coming to THE PRESS about a man who says his name is Wright, and who claims to live at New Brunswick. Plainfield housewives say that he is a swindler of the meanest sort. He shows them forged letters from prominent residents, tells them a pitiful tale about a sick wife and hungry children, and in the goodness of their hearts they give him money and food and clothing, and believe his liberal promises that he will repay them in fancy boxes and other things of his own manufacture. The fellow made a good living for the next six months, by his visits here a year ago, and now he is up to his old tricks. The women say that he never fulfills his promises.

Our Slow Old Road.

The ferryboat Elizabeth on the Central Railroad line was launched in 1867. She is to-day one of the finest of New York's fleet. That shows that for at least twenty-three years the art of making ferryboats has been at a standstill. Other cities less than a third of the size of New York have capacious and comfortable ferryboats, with a great open main deck for the men who want to smoke and a fine glass-enclosed upper saloon for the ladies. How long a time must people along this line endure the present turtle contrivances with a pigsty on one side for men and a little, cramped box for the women?

Iron Hall Officers.

At a regular meeting of Branch No. 1199, Iron Hall, held Tuesday, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Chief Justice—C. W. Tallman; Vice Justice—John Becker; Prelate—C. Hammeal; Adjuster—Wm. Dagnall; Herald—Wm. Newman; Watchman—Jacob Kittering; Vedette—Jos. Kingston; Treasurer—T. J. Young; Accountant—F. P. Storr; Past Chief Justice—E. C. Morse; Trustees—V. W. Nash, Wm. H. Brokaw, John T. Case.

Manager Hall Himself Sufficient Attraction.

"The Ticket-of-Leave Man" will be played at Amphion Hall next Monday evening with the well-known actor George W. Middleton in the role of Robert Brierly. Mr. Middleton's impersonation is pronounced as fine and polished a piece of acting as that of W. J. Florence. Manager J. Edwin Hall will appear as the stern detective, "Hawkshaw." Mr. Middleton will be supported by a first-class company. The Bellevue Tea Garden will be nicely staged.

Getting Ready for Business.

A steward from the Union League Club of Philadelphia, two butlers and a maid, have already been engaged as a part of the retinue of the Union County Country Club. H. M. Stockton is chairman of the house committee that has such matters in charge.

POPULAR SCIENCE.

WOODEN CATERPILLAR.

The Growth of What May Be Called the Oddest of Insects.

The oddest insect in existence—so odd that unless it were vouched for and explained scientifically would be considered a hoax—is the aweto. It is not easy to decide whether it ought to be classed under the fauna or flora of New Zealand, for it is as much vegetable as animal, and, in final stage, it is a vegetable, and nothing else. This is the vegetable caterpillar, called by naturalists Hipialis virescens. It is a perfect caterpillar, and a fine one also, growing to three and a half inches. Until it is full grown it conducts itself very much like any other insect, except that it is never found anywhere but in the neighborhood of the rata tree, a large scarlet-flowered myrtle, and that it habitually buries itself a few inches underground. Then, when the aweto is fully grown, it undergoes a wonderful change. For some inexplicable reason, the spore of a vegetable fungus, the Sphæria Robertsii, fixes itself directly on its neck, takes root, and grows, like a diminutive bulrush, from six to ten inches high, without leaves, and with a dark brown head. This stem penetrates the earth over the caterpillar, and stands up a few inches above the ground. The root grows simultaneously into the body of the caterpillar, which it exactly fills in every part, without altering its form in the slightest degree, but simply substituting a vegetable substance for an animal substance. As soon as this process is completed, both the caterpillar and fungus die, and become dry and hard, but without shriveling at all. The thing is then a wooden caterpillar, so to say, with a wooden bulrush standing up from its neck. Papier mache, perhaps, would better describe it than wood. It can be taken out of the ground entire, and preserved for any time. Where the aweto is found many specimens can be obtained. It is a light green when alive, and the Maoris eat it in its soft state, when it resembles marrow. When dry, they powder it for use as a flesh dye in tattooing.

It is certain that the caterpillar and fungus were made for each other, as the Hipialis virescens is never found without Sphæria Robertsii growing out of it, and Sphæria Robertsii is never found without this caterpillar with it. Our engraving was made from one by the London Graphic from a sketch by Major-General Robley, and the specimen is in the possession of Comte L. De Jouffroy d'Abbans, French Consul at Zurich.

SCIENTIFIC NOTES.

The mechanical difficulties attending the introduction of the storage battery system are said to have been entirely overcome, and the sole question now to be considered is that of its economy in comparison with other systems of traction.

Henry B. Pierce, Secretary of State for Massachusetts, declares that the Southern iron fields must become the world's seat of that industry, and that the next twenty-five years will witness a development there surpassing alike belief and history.

Domestic electric lighting is being extensively introduced in Philadelphia. One of the many private plants successfully runs a shop and a laundry, as well as a sewing-machine, ventilating fans and a simplex arc light, which is hung over the lawn during the summer to attract the bugs.

The lion tamer has pressed electricity into his service. A light wand has been invented with an insulating grip for the hand, connecting by a flexible wire with a battery, the power of which can be varied at will. By the use of this magic wand the fiercest lion can be reduced to submission.

One of the points especially noted by military observers during the recent maneuvers abroad, where smokeless powder was used, was that in a clear atmosphere, unobscured by the smoke of battle, all bright accouterments were seen at a great distance, thus betraying the positions of the various bodies of troops.

One of the recent improvements in the manufacture of window glass is the introduction of a process of dipping the sheet into a mammoth bath-tub containing a mixture of various liquids. Its results are instantly seen. It removes all dirt and defection, and the glass becomes as clear and pure as it was before it went through the flattening oven.

John A. Enos is urging Congress to appropriate $60,000 to install his patent electric voting machine in the House of Representatives. He asserts that during this session there have been over three hundred roll-calls, each consuming thirty minutes' time, or an aggregate of thirty working days, and he asserts that by the use of his machine twenty-five days would have been saved.

The kitchen is 12x12½ and is fitted with a porcelain-lined sink, a boiler, maple floor and wainscoting three feet high. The entrance to the cellar is from the kitchen, where you find a laundry, coal bins, and a furnace-room.

On the second floor there are three chambers, a sewing-room, a bath-room and closets; the sizes are shown on the second floor plan.

The house will be painted an olive green with trimmings two shades darker. Studs 2x4, 16 inches on centers; joist on first and second floor, 2x10, 16 inches on centers; attic joist, 2x8, 16 inches on centers; roof rafters, 2x4. The shingles will be of the star a star brand, dipped in creosote stain of an olive green shade.

The chimney will be of red pressed brick with a smooth sandstone cap. The entire house is to be piped for furnace and for gas.

The bath-room will contain improved fixtures, with antique oak woodwork, maple floor and the wainscoting four feet high.

The interior finish of this house will be clear pine stained or painted to suit the owner. The trim will be a neat pilaster trim.

The mantel to cost forty dollars, and will be selected by the owner.

GEORGE A. W. KINTZ.

Raised Figures on Soft Wood.

Ordinary molding and stamped work and the papier mache and pressed sawdust embossed work have been on the market for a long time, and but few people mistake them now for hand work. Basswood can be compressed to a very large extent, and will swell out again to its original proportions upon being steamed. This property is utilized in the following manner: A piece of the wood is subjected to great pressure under a die or stamp. This stamp presses down parts of the soft wood, in a more or less elaborate pattern, lower than the rest of the surface. This process can be quickly performed, and the piece of wood is then passed to a planing machine, which in a twinkling planes down the surface of the wood just even with the top of the compressed pattern. The piece is then taken over to the steamer, where the warm, damp vapor soon swells the compressed parts back to their original size. Thus a handsome raised pattern is produced on the planed surface of the wood which can hardly be distinguished from genuine hand-carved work.—Scientific American.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Matheweson & Co's. fine shoes, and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

Reduction in Prices for Cash!

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

AFTER DECEMBER 15, 1890,

The Plainfield Produce Company

Will SELL All Goods Strictly for Cash!

We will present a few reasons for making this change in our manner of doing business. In the first place we have our Hay, Grain and Produce inspected and bought direct from the Producer for Cash. Thereby obtaining better quality, also saving one profit, which would go to the commission merchant if bought from sample the usual way.

In the second place any concern doing an extensive credit business must get larger profits to offset slow and worthless accounts, of which with the greatest care there will be some. And the customer who is ready to pay and does pay his bills when presented, is the one who must pay these larger profits.

By selling for cash we avoid losses from such accounts, and can afford to sell for smaller profits.

We ask for a share of your patronage. Give us a call and we will show you how low we can sell for CASH, instead of how high we must sell for credit.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS.

ANIMALS' TOILETS.

Most of Them Are in the Habit of Taking a Daily Bath.

As a rule, all animals are cleanly by nature. Even pigs will keep clean if they are not confined in a pen or yard. Brushes and combs, says Golden Days, most animals carry with them, and ducks and divers are always supplied with oil in a handy reservoir.

Birds especially are very particular about the quality of their "toilet dust," and equally nice as to the water in which they prefer to wash. Some use water only, some water or dust, others dust and no water.

Partridges are a good example of the dusting birds, and are most careful in the selection of their dust baths. Dry loam suits them best; but perhaps their favorite place is a meadow where a few turfs have been removed. There they scratch out the loam, and shuffle backwards under the grass roots till their feathers are full of the cool earth. In wet weather they find, if possible, a heap of burnt ashes on the site of a weed fire, and dust there.

Sparrows, on the contrary; always choose road dust, the dryest and finest possible. Meadow larks, also, are fond of the road, and dust there in the early morning. But they, too, have their fancy, and choose the dry, gritty part, where the horses' hoofs tread.

Wild ducks, though feeding by the salt water, prefer to bathe in fresh-water pools, and will fly long distances inland to running brooks and ponds, where they preen and wash themselves in the most vigorous and thorough way.

But though passing so much time on the water, ducks seem to prefer a shower-bath to any other; and in a heavy rain they may be seen opening their feathers and allowing the rain to soak in, after which they dress the whole surface with oil from the reservoir which we mentioned above.

Swallows and martins are likewise nice in their choice of bath water; nothing but newly-fallen rain water thoroughly pleases them, and if tempted to bathe, it is generally by some shallow pool in the road which an hour's sun will evaporate.

Cats, large and small, make the most careful toilets of any class of animal, with the exception of some of the opossums. The lions and tigers wash themselves in exactly the same manner as the cat, wetting the dark, India-rubber-like ball of the fore foot and the inner toe, and passing it over the face and behind the ears. The foot is thus at the same time a face sponge and brush, and the rough tongue combs the rest of the body.

TABBY AT HER TOILET.

Sporting dogs, which are used in mud, snow and wet, are strangely clever and quick in cleaning and drying their coats, and it is a sure sign that a dog has been over-tired if he shows any trace of mud or dirt next morning.

Most of their toilet is done with the tongue, but they are very clever at using a bush or the side of a haystack as a rough towel. One small spaniel which was allowed to live in the house was well aware that if he returned dirty he would not be admitted indoors.

About an hour before the close of the day's shooting he used to strike work and begin to clean himself, and if urged to do more, would slip off home and present himself neat and clean in the dining-room.

One day the dog had been left at home, and his master returned and seated himself, wet and with half-frozen drops of ice sticking to his gaiters, by the fire.

Pan ran up and carefully licked off the frozen ice and snow, stopping every now and then to give an anxious look, which said as plainly as possible:

"Dear me! If I don't get him clean quickly, he will be sent to lie in the stable."

CONJURING FOR GIRLS.

How to Conceal Small Coins in the Palm of the Hand.

When you have mastered the art of palming coins other objects will be managed easily. Girls' hands being small as a rule it is better to practice with five-cent pieces. To commence with, turn your right hand palm upward and lay the nickel in the palm (you will soon discover the exact spot), contract or draw the thumb inward till the ball of the thumb holds the nickel between it and that part of the palm in a line with the third finger, and if the nickel is in the right spot it will be a fast prisoner and you can turn your hand over, use your fingers and lift things without any inconvenience or fear of dropping it. Practice this until you feel quite at ease with the coin in your hand, and remember, in practice, to keep the back of the hand uppermost or outwards, otherwise the nickel would be seen by the audience. When you have arrived at this stage you may study one or two "passes." By a "pass" is indicated the apparent passing a coin from one hand to the other, although it does not leave the hand in which it is first seen, and this is effected by palming. Thus, hold the nickel lightly in the right hand between the second and third fingers and the thumb. Draw the thumb quickly out of the way, close the fingers smartly, and you will have the nickel in the right spot for palming; contract the thumb and open the fingers and to any one standing in front of you the hand will appear empty.

Practise this until you can make sure of safely stowing away the coin in a second of time and while the hand is at rest. Next, in front of a looking-glass try it again, while moving the right hand towards the left, which is held open, and which immediately, on the fingers of the right hand touching it, closes upon the coin it is supposed to contain. Let your eyes follow your left hand, for where your eyes are directed those of your audience are sure to follow; drop your right hand carelessly to your side and let it hang as if empty.

Here is another pass which is easier and which is a very good one for coins of smaller size than a nickel. Rest the coin between the sides of the third finger and the first finger, supporting it behind by the second finger and in front by the thumb. Slightly close the fingers, drawing the coin down the inside of the thumb until the joint of the thumb overlaps its upper edge, when the coin will be found to be tightly held between that joint and the junction of the thumb with the hand.—N. Y. World.

HOME OF THE PEAFOWLS.

Birds Which Have a Wonderfully Bright and Varied Plumage.

You would be delighted if you could see our peafowls.

We have many of them, sometimes nearly a hundred, and though we enjoy a fat peafowl for Christmas dinner, we think our chief pleasure in them comes from watching them; sometimes as they strut, again as they walk gracefully along carrying their long trains of feathers just above the grass.

In the springtime when their feathers are of full length, we sometimes see twenty-five or thirty strutting at once, each tail full spread and very rich and beautiful. The peacock, you must know, has a greater variety of colors in his plumage than any other bird. The peahen is dove colored, with a green neck, and has not a long tail.

Peacocks appear vain, and each one has his favorite place of strutting, and there he spends most of his time in the spring; he comes to the same spot year after year to display his beauties. One who spent his time before the sitting-room window was very handsome. Some one caught him and hung a coin by a cord round his neck, and it shone there over his glossy blue breast for years.

We have some who are fond of perching on the gate posts, and we think them handsome ornaments.

They roost up in the tall forest trees, and sometimes in snowy weather do not come down till late in the day. Sometimes when weighted with snow, they sit down, and their plumage freezes to the ground, and if not cut loose they would die.

In summer they do not go to roost till late, and, if rain is coming on, they utter their strange cries at all times of the night. I knew a little girl who said she believed they talked in their sleep, for she thought they could not stay awake to call as steadily as they did. The voice of the peafowl is thought to be harsh, but we like it, for it is to us a home sound.

Their eggs are large. They make their nests in the wheat-fields or orchards, and do not bring their young to the house while small.

In May and June their feathers are ripe for plucking, and after a heavy rain, while they are too wet to fly or run fast, boys catch them and pick out their beautiful tails. As they miss the weight of their feathers, they stagger around and hide in the bushes for a few days.

The peafowl is said to be a native of India.—Anna B. Henderson, in Little Men and Women.

A CONDUCTOR'S STORY.

He Tells How He Came to Be Sympathetic and Soft-Hearted.

"I know," said the conductor, as he finished counting up and lighted a cigar, "that most people consider us a hard-hearted lot, but we've got to be, or at least must appear to be. A railroad company has little to do with sentiment and a great deal to do with business. I can't afford to let people ride at my expense, so what am I to do?"

No remedy being suggested he smoked away in silence for two or three minutes, and then continued:

"I didn't use to have so much heart about it, always excusing myself on the plea of duty; but one night about three years ago something happened which has kept my heart pretty soft ever since. It was on the run out of Buffalo, and when I came to take up the fares I came across a woman and child. She was pale-faced and poorly clad and she had a world of trouble in her face. I saw that in a general way, but it was not my business to pity her. The child with her, a boy of seven or eight, was lying on the seat, with her old shawl for a pillow. She offered me one full fare ticket to a point about forty miles below, but I demanded one for the boy.

"'Please sir,' she said, 'we are very poor and he's only a little chap and I'm taking him home to die.'

"That was no excuse, and I plainly told her that she must pay for him or he'd have to get off. I thought she was trying to beat his way, but in that I was mistaken. It was a dark and rainy night and she'd never have got ready to leave the train at the next stop if she'd had money to pay for the boy. I felt a bit ashamed when I saw her making ready, and it hurt me to see her lean over him and both cry together, but one of our men had been discharged only the week before for overlooking a one-legged soldier who only wanted a lift for ten miles."

"And no one offered to pay the boy's fare?"

"For a wonder, no. There was a full crowd in the car, but all seemed to look upon the pair with suspicion. I hated to put them off, and I was hoping the woman would make one more appeal and give me a show to back water, when the train ran into ——, and she made ready to get off. The least I could do was to help her with the boy. I picked him up and started to follow her out, but I had scarcely taken notice of his white face and tear-wet cheeks when he uttered a shriek of fear, straightened out in my arms, and next instant I knew I held a corpse. Yes, sir, the life went out of him in that cry, and the mother turned on me with a look I can never forget and cried:

"'He's dead! He's dead. And you have killed him!'

"I don't like to think of it," whispered the conductor, after a long silence. "I had my month's wages in my pocket, and I gave her every dollar of it and the passengers raised as much more, and when I left her with her dead at the next station I had done every thing I possibly could, but that didn't clear me. I had been too harsh and cold. She had told me the truth and I had doubted her. She had asked for mercy and I had ordered her out into the night and the storm with a dying boy in her care. She has never forgiven me, and never will, and try as hard as I may I can never forgive myself."—N. Y. Sun.

FEMALE DOCTORS.

They Stand on an Equality With Their Medical Brethren.

A wonderful change in respect to female labor has rapidly developed within the last half century. A vast number of the common schools have passed into the hands of women, with a manifest gain to the cause of education, as well as to that of the sex. Women fill clerkships in almost every department of industry. At least as many women as men stand behind counters. They have largely taken possession of the lighter forms of labor introduced by the utilizing of electricity.

The foundation of colleges for women and the opening to them of some of the older colleges have prepared the way for their introduction into the various professions. We already have successful female lawyers, ministers, artists and especially doctors.

Some of our female doctors stand on an equality with their medical brethren in culture, reputation and success, and the tendency toward this profession on the part of young women now graduating at our higher literary institutions is one to be encouraged.

The natural instincts of women are in this direction. It is this that makes them so much at home in the sick-room, and such angels of mercy in military hospitals. The field for them is broad and remunerative. They need to accompany the foreign missionary everywhere. They are best suited to minister to their own sex and to children generally.

But they must prepare themselves most thoroughly for the work, adding to the discipline of the college the fullest mastery of medicine that can be furnished by first-class medical schools. They can not rely upon any feeling of gallantry here. It must be seen that they are the equals of their brothers.

Further, we are sorry to say, that it is not infrequently the case that members of the medical profession are at present unequal to their responsibilities. It has been too easy to get medical diplomas. School has competed against school, to the injury of the profession and the peril of the sick. Our best medical schools recognize and deplore this condition of things, and are doing what they can to improve it.

We say, therefore, to young ladies, that the field is open to them with the pioneer work already done. But let none enter it who are not suited to the work by native tact, self-reliance, and what may be called physical and moral hardihood.—Youth's Companion.

—Real Economy.—"Three of your sons have already made complete failures in this school, and now you want the fourth one to enter!" "I know, Mr. Professor, but then you know the books have cost so much, and I feel as if somebody ought to be using them."—Fliegende Blatter.

THE WORLD'S COFFEE.

Where It Comes From and What It Is Worth in Cold Cash.

Of the vast quantity of coffee supplied to the United States something like two-thirds of the whole comes from Brazil, which country, it might be mentioned, produces considerably more than one-half of the world's total supply of that article.

Not long since Ceylon was the third coffee country in the world, and promised to be second, but the crop in that country has fallen off from 988,328 hundred weight in the season of 1874-75 to 150,000 hundred weight in the season of 1887-88. Such a sudden and almost complete collapse of a great industry has seldom been known.

The coffee plant itself is best described as a shrub. Its appearance is graceful and attractive, and under favorable circumstances it will attain a height of from fifteen to twenty feet. The seeds are commonly termed coffee beans, not because they resemble beans proper, but from the Arabic word "bunn." The berries are not usually picked until they become fully ripe. It is believed that it is owing to the careful attention to the matter of picking by the Arabs that Mocha coffee, although inferior in size and appearance, commands its high price in the market. Brazilian coffee stands in value much below even the native Ceylon and East India coffees, because of the fact of being carelessly grown, gathered and cured.

The imports of coffee in the United States in 1821 were 19,186,180 pounds; in 1824, 36,301,172 pounds; in 1837, $47,727,902 pounds; from 1821 to 1837, 970,000,000 pounds. The receipts of coffee at all ports in the United States in 1887 were nearly $550,000,000 pounds; considerably more in one year than one-half of the imports of the sixteen years between 1821 and 1837.

We give below some interesting figures of the world's production and consumption of coffee.

The world's present production of coffee:

	Total product. Tons.
Brazil	490,000
Java and Sumatra	60,000
Ceylon	9,400
India	21,000
Central America and Mexico	80,000
Venezuela, Columbia, Peru, Bolivia and Guianas	50,000
Hayti and San Domingo	43,000
Cuba and Porto Rico	35,000
Remainder of West Indes (Jamaica, etc.)	7,500
Arabia, Abyssinia and northeast coast of Africa	35,000
Liberia and west coast of Africa	19,500
Philippines (Manila), Celebras and rest of Eastern Archipelago	11,000
Sandwich and rest of Pacific Isles	1,200
Total	862,700

The value of the world's production of coffee say 17,000,000 hundred weight, would be about $266,000,000 in the wholesale markets.

The world's consumption of coffee:

	Tons.
Europe	430,000
United States and Canada	365,000
Mexico, Central American States and West India Islands	35,500
Brazil, and rest of South American States	41 500
Asia, including India, Java and Eastern Archipelago	40,000
Africa	25,000
Great Britain	14 000
Australasia and Pacific Isles	5,000
Total	856,000

A PANTHER FIGHT.

The Fur Often Flies Until One or Both of the Combatants Dies.

I have often wondered what hindered the cougars from being very plentiful. They are monarchs of the woods, and are very shy, with plenty of game and cattle to live on. This spring I was talking with an old cruiser (a man who hunts for timber and good land claims), who had followed the business for the last twenty years in Oregon and this State. He never takes a gun, but carries only a blanket and a small axe. He related that one night when he was camping in the head of a ravine about dark he heard a cougar scream on one of the ridges, and this one was answered by another on the opposite ridge. They kept working toward the head, until finally they came together some three hundred yards above him in some quaking aspen; and such a row and racket as they made he had never heard before. They rolled down within one hundred yards of him; and he says that he was pretty well scared; but he kept up a big fire and stayed behind that. They quieted down in a couple of hours, and the next morning, when it was light enough, he went on to the battle ground. He found one of them lying there dead, all cut and torn to pieces. It was a very large one. Four days afterwards, as he was coming back the same way, some five hundred yards from where he had found the first one he had stumbled upon the other one, dead. This, too, was all cut and torn as the first had been. At another time, in Oregon, he heard a big fight going on, but did not go to see the results. He was stopping one night with an old Indian, who had hunted and trapped all his life, and was telling him about the fight, when the Indian said that that was the way when two old males met; one or the other was killed, and very often both; and that whenever the male would find the young ones and the mother absent he would kill the last one of them, but if the mother were with them she would keep him off. That must be the reason that the mother goes with the young until they are nearly two years old. They say that all the cat kind will kill their young. We know that this is so with the domestic cat.—Forest and Stream.

LEGAL INTELLIGENCE.

How a Young Sprig of the Law Qualified Himself for the Bar.

Some years ago a young man applied to the district court of Dallas, Tex., to be examined to practice law. A lawyer was appointed to examine the qualifications of the candidate for admission to the bar. The young man was rather deficient in Blackstone and Greenleaf. It looked very much as though he lacked the requisite preparation, and the examining lawyer badgered him until his brow was beaded with perspiration.

"Do you know what fraud is in the judicial sense of the word?" inquired the examining attorney.

"I don't—I hardly think I do," was the stammering reply.

"Well, fraud exists when a man takes advantage of his superior knowledge to injure an ignorant person."

"So, that's it, is it? Then if you take advantage of your superior knowledge of law to ask me questions I can't answer, owing to my ignorance, and in consequence thereby I am refused a license, I will be injured, and you will be guilty of fraud. Won't you, judge?"

The lawyer was very thoughtful for a few moments, and then added reflectively:

"My young friend, I perceive you have great natural qualifications for the bar, and I shall recommend that a large, handsomely engrossed and richly-engraved license be granted you in spite of your ignorance."—Texas Siftings.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

I am glad to testify that I used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic with the best success for sleeplessness, and believe that it is really a great relief for suffering humanity.

E. FRANK, Pastor.

Pleased and Grateful.

New York City, May, 1890.

I express my entire satisfaction with Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son, who is now nineteen years of age, had been afflicted with epileptic fits since he was six years of age. I tried everything that money could purchase, but no permanent relief was effected, now I can cheerfully recommend, and deem it my duty to advise sufferers to at least try Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son has not had any symptoms of the disease since he used the remedy. I am therefore pleased and grateful

IN THE LABOR WORLD

The Federation to Help the Striking Miners.

EVICTIONS IN WEST VIRGINIA.

The Strike in the Monongahela Mines Has Become Alarming.

Paterson Silk Weavers Go Out Against a Reduction in Wages—Trenton Potters Resume Work but are Dissatisfied—Baltimore & Ohio Strikers Defeated—No Change in Clark Thread Mill Strike

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 12.—The Federation of Labor appointed a committee to consider the arrest of the strikers' executive board at Birmingham, Ala. and also pledged aid to the striking miners.

The executive committee will try to prevent workmen flocking to Chicago for the World's Fair and breaking down prices and will also act in the matter of boycotting the Cleveland picture frame factories. The election of officers will occur this afternoon.

The report urging pressure of the eight-hour movement was unanimously endorsed. The striking sawmakers at Beaver Falls, Pa., asked financial aid. The petition from the Woman Suffrage Association was endorsed. A petition favoring the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday found much support.

An attempt to organize the electric workers will be made. The Southern machinists' Union, which bars colored men, was not given a charter. The executive council will appoint a committee to overlook Federal legislation.

THE TRENTON POTTERS.

They Have Resumed Work, but Are Still Dissatisfied.

TRENTON, N. J. Dec. 12.—The trouble of the operators in the potteries continues. They have held a meeting to consider the change in the schedule prices of making the sanitary ware. Manufacturing potters say that the change was made in order to create uniform prices in all potteries. The operators say, however, that the change reduced prices all around.

A committee has been appointed to look over the lists and confer about them. The operators have resumed work. Although they are very much dissatisfied no strike is likely to occur. Yet such action on their part is possible. The operatives say that the men employed on the making of sanitary ware are thoroughly organized all over the country.

STRIKE OF WEAVERS.

Paterson, N. J., Silk Operators Object to Smaller Wages.

PATERSON, N. J., Dec. 12.—Fifty-six ribbon workers employed by the firm of Frank & Dugan are on strike in consequence of a reduction of 15 per cent. in their wages. The firm say that the reduction was compulsory; it was necessitated by the hard times. The weavers say that the reduction in their pay was equivalent to 25 per cent. loss in their income.

Fifty weavers in Medinga mill also struck for a similar cause. It is rumored that other reductions will be made by the other mills and this will probably lead to more strikes. A hard and bitter winter stares the silk operators in the face.

EVICTING MINERS.

The Big Strike in West Virginia Has Become Alarming.

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Dec. 12.—Evictions of striking miners have begun at the Monongahela mines. The strike has become alarming in its proportions.

The men at the Montana and Sheppard works have joined the strikers and over 2,000 men are now out. The strike is against a reduction of five cents per ton.

The mines are controlled by a syndicate in which ex-Senator Camden, Governor Fleming and Senator Gorman of Maryland are largely interested.

Exciting Meeting of Fall River Spinners.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Dec. 12.—The Spinners' Union held a stormy meeting last night. The utmost excitement prevailed over a motion to annul the stoppage law by reducing the weekly benefit from $5 to $4. After a heated debate the amendment was declared carried by one majority, but the vote was doubted, and the meeting broke up with great excitement. The action in reducing the stoppage benefit is taken to mean that the spinners are raising a big fund in case of a curtailment by the local mills.

Railroad Strikers Defeated.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 12.—The strike of switch and yard men on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad is virtually at an end. The railroad company have full crews at work and all of the detained freight has been moved to its destination. The strikers are much disappointed at their failure to win, and are not in a very enviable frame of mind at the officials of their organization for declining to come to their assistance.

Newark Strikers Firm.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 12.—The situation in the big lockout and strike in Clark's Newark and Kearny thread mills is unchanged. No conciliatory terms were advanced by either side in the controversy, which involves the livelihood of 3,000 persons. The striking spinners maintain the quiet demeanor which has characterized them since the trouble began.

A Fishing Schooner Lost.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Dec. 12.—A telegram to George Steele & Co. reports that the fishing schooner Plymouth Rock is a total loss at Cape Negro, N. S. Crew saved. The vessel is ninety-two tons insured for $5,000.

DARING ROBBERY.

Two Masked Men Force a Woman to Give Them $700.

DOYLESTOWN, Pa., Dec. 12.—A daring robbery was committed early in the morning at the residence of A. O. Moyer, near New Plumbsteadville, this county.

Mr. Moyer left for the west a few days ago and before leaving he gave his wife $700, instructing her to send it to a Doylestown bank as soon as possible, but as no opportunity offered for sending the money there she kept it in the house.

Mrs. Moyer states that at about one o'clock she was awakened and found two men standing by the side of her bed. One of them held a pistol to her head and demanded that she give them the money. In great fright she got out of bed, took the money from its hiding place and gave it to the men, who immediately left the house. Both of the men wore masks.

An examination of the premises showed that the burglars entered the house through the cellar window.

It is believed they were residents of that section of the country and were acquainted with the fact that there was money in the house and that Moyer was absent.

WILL FORCE SUPPORT.

The Farmers Will Boycott Newspapers Who Do Not Comply With Their Terms.

SANFORD, Fla., Dec. 12.—President Polk of the National Farmers' Alliance, has named Friday, Feb. 6, 1891, and Washington, D. C., as the place of holding the first meeting of the National Legislative Council, which is composed of the national president and the presidents of all the State Alliances.

An important piece of action taken during the closing moments of the late convention has just come out. It was the adoption of a resolution with reference to the support of all Alliances. The policy of the Alliance will be to withhold all support from newspapers which do not conduct Alliance departments or at least publish Alliance news regularly. It amounts to an absolute boycott of all newspapers which do not come up to the terms of the resolution.

Parnell's Kilkenny Candidate.

DUBLIN, Dec. 12.—At Mr. Parnell's request Mr. John Kelly, who was to have stood for Parliament in North Kilkenny against Sir John Pope Hennessey, has retired in favor of Mr. Vincent Scolly, a wealthy Tipperary landowner, for years a member of the National League, and who recently promised to give a tenth part of his income to the League until an Irish Parliament sits in Dublin. Mr. Scolly has issued an address to the electors, in which he says that though he refused enter Parliament in quieter times, duty calls him now and he hastens to obey.

Glass Dealers Discouraged.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 12.—At the regular monthly meeting of the Flint Glass Association in this city, the reports from the tableware trade were very discouraging. Since November 1st the trade has fallen below par and nine tableware factories in the Ohio Valley have closed down indefinitely. The principal cause, however, was the passage of the anti-lottery bill by Congress, which compelled tea, grocery and other like institutions to discontinue the gift feature of their trades.

Hunting for Prof. Bancroft.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 12.—A party of Brown students who searched East Providence for the missing Prof. T. W. Bancroft, came in last night with nothing new. Later a resident of East Providence came to the college and said he had seen Bancroft Thursday afternoon. This morning 120 students, headed by their professors, started in six divisions to search the East shore of the river and adjacent country from East Providence to Barrington.

A Railroad Superintendent Missing.

BOSTON, Dec. 12.—William H. Clark, a superintendent of the West End Street Railway, has been missing since December 4. Temporary aberration brought on by overwork is the cause assigned by his family and friends for his absence. On a previous occasion he absented himself while suffering from a temporary derangement, but returned apparently fully recovered.

Gen. Wade Hampton Defeated.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Dec. 12.—John Laurens Manning Irby, the young reformer, was elected in the General Assembly to succeed Gen. Wade Hampton as United States Senator. The final vote was as follows: Irby 105, Donaldson 10, Hampton 42. Irby was greeted with loud cheers by the reformers and hisses by the straight-outs and crowds in the galleries.

A Sister's Fight With a Maniac.

TROY, N. Y., Dec. 12.—John Creighton, 50 years old, a patient at the Sisters' Hospital, became a raving maniac, and sought to murder one of the sisters. A desperate struggle followed, and he was with difficulty locked up.

No Chance for Anti-Parnellites.

LIMERICK, Dec. 12.—The Limerick Corporation, by a vote of 14 to 8, has rejected a motion to thank the Healyites for their action in repudiating Mr. Parnell.

TO DECIDE IN CAUCUS

Senators Discussing the Financial Situation.

SEEKING SOME PLAN OF RELIEF.

Possibility of a Measure Being Agreed Upon To-Day.

Action of the House Committee—Talk of Additional Legislation for National Banks—Pennsylvania's War Claims—The Fortification Appropriations Bill Passed—Return of Mrs. Harrison.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The special Senate committee of eleven, appointed at the Republican caucus to consider some measure of relief for the existing financial situation, hold their first meeting today.

The original proposition for a committee of this character came from Senator Plumb, whose caucus resolution contemplated a majority of seven. Mr. Hiscock of New York offered a substitute fixing the number at eleven, to be composed of the six members of the Finance Committee, Messrs. Morrill, Aldrich, Sherman, Hiscock, Allison and Jones, and five others to be selected by Mr. Edmunds, the chairman of the caucus. This suggestion was apparently more in harmony with the spirit of the meeting than the proposition advanced by Mr. Plumb, and it was accordingly adopted.

The five additional, or advisory, members are Messrs. Plumb, Mitchell, McMillan, Hale and Power. Its personnel embraces such pronounced silver men as Plumb, Jones, Mitchell and Power. The anti-silver men, as the representatives of the Eastern thought upon the subject may be termed, are Aldrich, Sherman, Hiscock and Morrill. The balance between these opposing factions is very evenly maintained in the persons of Messrs. Allison, Hale and McMillan, who are known for want of a better term, as moderate silver men.

No one will predict to-day what conclusion the committee will reach. The conservatives will claim that there is no need of legislation by Congress to relieve the financial situation.

It is possible that a plan may be matured at to-day's meeting, but this is unlikely. Should the committee come to some agreement between now and Monday another Republican caucus will be held that evening to secure full party opinion upon it.

WORK IN CONGRESS.

The Fortifications Appropriation Bill Passed in the House.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The Senate passed the bill appropriating $28,000 for a vessel for boarding purposes at Chicago.

A resolution was passed instructing the Postoffice Committee to investigate the subject of postal savings banks.

Mr. Plumb's resolution providing for early meeting and for night sessions was debated until the Election bill was taken up, and Mr. Wilson, of Iowa, and Mr. Frye made speeches on it.

The House passed the Fortifications and Deficiency Appropriation bills, the bill providing for the removal of causes from State courts, the bill to prevent the manufacture of counterfeit dies and the bill to provide a penalty for the alteration of election returns with intent to affect the result.

The bill to indemnify the purchasers of swamp lands was debated without final action.

Proposed Remedies.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The House Committee on Banking and Currency met during the morning and there was a general discussion of the financial situation. There was considerable difference of opinion manifested. Several of the members thought that the great need was a restoration of public confidence, and that with this secured financial affairs would right themselves. Mr. Walker and one or two others of the committee were in favor of additional legislation in the interest of the national banks, and Mr. Walker will draft a bill to meet his views of what should be done to permanently better the financial situation.

Presidential Postmasters.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The President sent to the Senate the following nominations for postmasters:

New Hamshire—Chas. P. Andrews; Great Falls; Fred E. Barrett, Keene.

Massachusetts—Edward S. Merrill, Winchester.

Connecticut—Chas. E. Woodis, Darnelsonville.

Pennsylvania—Jos. A. Thompson, Media; Benjamin N. Jeffries, West Grove; Frank H. Britton, Corry; Jerry Crary, Sheffield.

Found Dead in Bed.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Dec. 12.—Charles Ryan, a lodger at Sullivan's boarding house on Commercial street, was found dead in bed with a bullet hole in his breast. A revolver lay on the floor. Ryan was 35 years old, without friends in the city.

STILL A MYSTERY.

No Clue to the Persons Who Murderously Assaulted Mrs. Beerman.

FAIRVIEW, N. J., Dec. 12.—The mystery attending the murderous assault on Mrs. Beerman remains unsolved and her assailant is still at large.

The injured woman was unconscious most of the day, but at times rallied after she had slept under the influence of opiates. During her delirium she moaned loudly and said: "Why do you hit me!" and called out for her assailant to have mercy on her.

The local police and District Attorney Campbell's officers have been reinforced by two of Inspector Brynes' officers, and the latter went to Guttenburg race-course to find clues by which to track the scoundrel who perpetrated the outrage. They have abandoned the idea that the assault was committed with the intent to rob their victim, as her pocketbook and diamond earrings were found in her possession. They incline to the belief that the assailant's object was a more outrageous one.

The police have followed and questioned several suspicious persons, but none of them were held. Chief of Police Schwartz, of Union Township, found a man who gave a minute description of the assault, and stated that the woman was struck three times. This is corroborated by the injuries found by the doctors.

The Fairview Protection Society, an organization of citizens for police duty, has offered a reward of $200 for the capture of the ruffians who committed the assault.

DEATH BEFORE DIVORCE.

A Woman Takes Laudanum to Defeat Her Husband's Scheme.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Dec. 12.—Mrs. Addie Hill Bates, who left her husband at Asbury Park last summer and, as alleged, went to live with another man at Gloversville, returned here last night. Papers in a suit for divorce, brought by her husband, Joseph Bates, were served upon her during the day, when she immediately attempted suicide with laudanum, and was in the act of taking a second dose when a detective burst into her room at the Commercial Hotel. Physicians were promptly summoned and her life was saved. She had written a letter which read:

"I will say 'Goodby forever' without you getting a divorce from me, which I said you never would. It will save you all expense, and I leave no one to mourn my loss, and it will be better for you, since you have wanted to get rid of me for a year."

Wholesale Murder and Suicide.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Dec. 12.—Charles Joplin shot and killed five persons yesterday at the Jenny lead mine, twelve miles from here, and then committed suicide by shooting himself. Those he killed were John Miller, his wife, his grown daughter, Lou Miller; Dr. Stewart, a prominent physician, and a man whose name is not known. The shooting occurred late in the day and details are meagre. The only clue to the cause of the killing lies in a report that Dr. Stewart intimated that Joplin was the cause of Miss Miller's trouble.

RECEPTION IN CORK

Parnell Joyously Welcomed by His Constituents.

PRESENTED WITH AN ADDRESS.

He Says He is Powerful While His Enemies Are Confounded

The Irish Leader Was Nearly Mobbed While Passing Through Mallow—The American Envoys Issue Another Manifesto—Healy to Stump Kilkenny—Davitt Ridicules Parnell.

CORK, Dec. 12.—Mr. Parnell was met on his arrival here by an enormous crowd, and was welcomed with great enthusiasm.

After receiving various addresses of welcome from committees, Mr. Parnell repaired to the Chamber of Commerce, where a great crowd had assembled. He was presented with an address by the National League, to which he responded at length. In the course of his remarks he said:

"I have come among you with a proud heart, in the belief that while Cork and Parnell are united, Ireland is united. (Loud applause.) I am proud of Cork, which has given me the verdict without even waiting to hear my side. With such men to support me, I need not fear the loss of Gladstone's trumpery bill, which would allow the police to baton us while the landlords desecrated the country."

Mr. Parnell went on to say that never, even in Mr. Gladstone's palmiest days, had he dismissed the idea that Ireland and Gladstone might again be in conflict. Nothing could be more absurd than the fable that home rule was endangered because the Irish were true to their leader. He could not look them in the face if he did not speak true words. Continuing, he said:

"I am powerful and happy, and my enemies are disgraced and confounded. I have been practically called from sickness and pain, but Cork has done more than a physician's medicines. I go forth to battle, confident of gaining a glorious victory."

Mr. Parnell's audience was fully as demonstrative as that which he addressed in Dublin the night before, and the scenes of wild enthusiasm in the streets and everywhere were repeated. The anti-Parnellites made no noticeable attempt at any counter-demonstration.

APPEAL TO IRISHMEN.

The American Envoys Issue a Long Manifesto to Their Countrymen.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—Messrs. Dillon, O'Brien, O'Connor, Sullivan and Gill issued their manifesto on the Irish troubles from the Hoffman House.

In this document the signers review at great length the facts that have led to the present unfortunate state of affairs, and call on all Irishmen at the coming general elections to sustain the course adopted by the majority of the Irish party in Parliament.

They wind up with a touching allusion to Parnell's grand services for the cause of home rule, and promise that all wounds made in the heat of conflict shall be healed by loving hands after the battle is over.

Parnell Escapes a Mob.

CORK, Dec. 12.—Before the train bearing Mr. Parnell left for this city the crowd became very violent and made repeated attempts to enter Mr. Parnell's carriage. The mob flourished sticks in the air and shouted, "Down with the blackguard!" "Down with the libertine!" and similar cries. A banner bearing the portrait of William O'Brien was carried by the crowd.

The Envoys Sail To-Morrow.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—On account of the delay of sailing of the steamer La Champagne, Messrs. O'Brien and Dillon have changed their plans and will sail on the Obdaw for Rotherdam to-morrow. From Rotterdam they will proceed to Paris to meet Mr. Parnell. Timothy Harrington sails for home to-morrow on the Etruria.

Parnell to Extend His Campaign.

DUBLIN, Dec. 12.—Mr. Kenny, Parnell's supporter, said that the Irish leader's campaign would not be confined to Ireland, but that the movement in favor of Mr. Parnell's leadership would be simultaneously organized in America and Australia, and meetings held that would leave no doubt as to the sentiments of the Irish people wherever found.

Davitt Sticks to His Statement.

DUBLIN, Dec. 12.—Michael Davitt is preparing an answer to Parnell's statement that he did not authorize Davitt to proclaim his insiocence in the O'Shea affair. Davitt maintains that Parnell told him "to go to Ireland and tell his friends that he would come out of court without a stain upon his name or reputation."

Parnell Compared to John L.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—Michael Davitt, in an interview, said that Mr. Parnell was received at Dublin like the pugilist Sullivan, by the residium. Mr. Davitt declared that Mr. Parnell well knew that his case was a hopeless one.

Parnell's Crowbar.

DUBLIN, Dec. 12.—Before leaving this city for Cork another raid was made on the newspaper United Ireland and the office was again captured by the Parnellites, headed by Mr. Parnell in person armed with a crowbar.

Burned in Effigy.

WATERFORD, Dec. 12.—An open-air demonstration was held here, during which Timothy Healy was burned in effigy, amid cheers for Parnell.

SAWTELLE'S DEFENCE.

He Will Claim that His Brother Hiram is Still Alive.

BOSTON, Dec. 12.—It is now said that when Isaac Sawtelle is arraigned at Dover, N. H., next week for the murder of his brother Hiram, he will set up the defence that Hiram is alive. This is understood to be the last resort of the wily prisoner and his astute counsel, who have left no stone unturned in their search for something to controvert the extraordinary chain of evidence which the government has forged.

The identification of the body, notwithstanding the fact that the head has never been found, is, however, complete. Mrs. Sawtelle identifies the shoes and clothing found in the grave as these worn by her husband. She recognizes one of the arms by a scar on the left hand, and, besides, identifies the body by the peculiar formation of an ankle joint. In the latter points she is corroborated by the victim's doctor.

The culminating link in the chain of evidence, however, is the positive identification of a cuff button found in the earth covering the body. This Mrs. Sawtelle will swear was Isaac's, and the most remarkable coincidence of all was that its mate was found on Isaac's person when he was arrested.

Not only, therefore, can the government prove that the body was that of Hiram Sawtelle, but it can also prove that Isaac Sawtelle's arms were at the very grave into which his brother's body was lowered.

Isaac's condition is said to be unchanged, though it is admitted that he is growing more and more nervous as the time for his appearance in court draws nigh. The trial will begin on the 16th inst.

SWORE EIGHTY OATHS.

Why a Pennsylvanian Is Serving an Eighty-Day Term in Jail.

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa., Dec. 12.—Polk Wilson, a well-known character about town, was sent to jail by Justice Hamman for eighty days for swearing eighty profane oaths. Under the Pennsylvania "Blue Laws" act of 1824 the penalty for profane swearing is 67 cents for each oath, or in default of payment thereof, one day in jail for each oath.

Wilson would not pay the fine of $67.80 for the oaths indulged in, so he went to jail for 80 days. A conviction under the blue laws is a very rare occurrence in this vicinity.

BY THE WAY.

—Constable Rockafellow is confined to his home by illness.

—Thirty-four was the average attendance of the class in short-hand for the month of November. The class will meet at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-night.

—The public appreciates very much the well-built storm-door vestibule constructed by Whitlock & Hulick at the main entrance to the post-office to-day.

—The silliest of all false rumors started since election, is to the effect that Street Commission Meeker has discharged all of his men who voted for Joseph Cutter.

—Bill Friese the younger slept in the police station last night because Bill Friese the older locked him out of the house for disobediently going to the theatre.

—The attendance at The Crescent last night, when the Holiday Bazar for the benefit of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union building fund came to an end, was gratifyingly large, and the various departments were generously patronized.

—It is seldom that Gavett makes a loud claim, but when he does he has the right to. If you look for yourself at the goods and the figures on them, at 15 East Front street, you will acknowledge that what he tells you is so—he has the finest cut glass goods in this city, the equal of any in New York, and at prices lower. Dorflinger and other celebrated makers sell exclusively to him in this city.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Corporation Counsel Marsh was one of the guests at the third annual dinner of the Union College Alumni Association, at the Hotel Brunswick, New York, last evening. The wittiest speech of the evening was made by the Rev. Dr. A. V. V. Raymond, who kept the assemblage in a continual ripple of laughter. He wanted more loyality shown for Union College. He wanted a fund of $1,000,000 raised to help the Alma Mater, and he wanted the New York graduates to contribute at least half of that sum.

Give Them a Call, at Least.

A new firm of young merchants who present themselves as solicitors for the Plainfield people's patronage, are Hallock & Davis, who have become the proprietors of the old established business of M. Vermeule, 5 West Front street. Both partners are well and favorably known as upright and enterprising men, so their success is assured.

Mr. Hallock's years of experience as a wholesale buyer and salesman, has taught him what the people want and how to buy it at a price lower than anybody else. Mr. Davis for years was Superintendent of the Creston Carpet Mills, and is now the junior partner of the firm of Kline & Co., coal and grain dealers. The new firm are offering just now as a specialty, a fine line of robes and floor rugs in addition to their regular stock of all the latest styles of hats, neckwear and men's fashionable furnishings. And, by the by, you'll never be satisfied until you have Hallock & Davis do your laundry work.

A Prayer and Its Answer.

During his lecture at The Casino last evening, at a point when a pretty summer-house scene with Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, host and hostess of the famous coaching tour, in the centre of the picture, appeared on the canvas, the Rev. Dr. Eaton paused and in a brief impressive prayer invoked the Divine Spirit to restore Mrs. Carnegie from dangerous illness to perfect health. Like a speedy answer to the prayer comes the news to-day that Dr. Janeway, Mrs. Carnegie's physician, has pronounced his patient out of danger.

Murray next Thursday evening, on the subject, "The Land of the Midnight Sun." Admission will be free. All men are invited.

WINDS UP IN THE COUNTY JAIL.

A Tool Thief Who Says He Lives in Plainfield Captured in Elizabeth.

Chief of Police Grant went to Elizabeth, yesterday, to try and place a self-confessed thief who was in the hands of the authorities of that city. The prisoner said he came from Plainfield, but he proved to be a stranger to Chief Grant. The latter thinks his name also is assumed.

Late Tuesday night Officer Elmiger arrested a man on North Broad street, Elizabeth, on suspicion of having stolen a lot of carpenters' tools which he was carrying in a feed bag.

The man at first denied the theft, but Wednesday admitted his guilt to Sergt. Hess, and said he took the tools from a large box on the roadside at Lyons Farms.

Wednesday evening Officer Eckert at the Union depot was approached by two men, who have been at work in this vicinity for the Lehigh Valley Railroad company building bridges and stations on the line of the Roselle and Newark extension. They inquired of the officer if there were any pawn shops in the city, and when further questioned stated that they were looking for some tools, which had been stolen from their chest at Lyons Farms.

From the description of the tools, the officer was satisfied that the men were the owners of the articles found in possession of the prisoner who said his name was Boggs. He arranged to meet the men the next morning and accompanied them to police headquarters where they identified the tools. One of the men was Wm. P. Bright, whose name was marked on several of the tools. The other carpenter was John White. They made complaint against Boggs, who was sent to jail. Bright and White said the tools were kept at night in a large work box, which had been forced open by Boggs. The complaints against Boggs are for grand larceny. It is believed that he has been stealing tools all along the line from Bound Brook to Elizabeth.

The Crescents to Battle with a Stalwart Foe.

The next bowling match of the Plainfield Crescent League will take place on Olympia alleys against the crack team of the Elizabeth Athletic Club, Tuesday evening, Dec. 16. The teams will consist of ten men each. The members of the League will undoubtedly turn out in full force on this occasion to welcome the Elizabeth boys and to encourage the home team. The Elizabeths have not yet been beaten in the Amateur League series. Their record average is 168. They defeated the Jersey City Athletic ten-men team Wednesday evening, although at the beginning of the eighth frame the Jersey Citys led by 120 pins. But the Elizabeths made one of their celebrated spurts, and not only made up the 120 pins in the last three frames, but beat their opponent 50 pins. This is the first game the Jersey Citys have lost on their home alleys in three years.

A Wreck on the Jersey Central.

The Scranton fast freight on the Jersey Central Railroad was wrecked yesterday morning, near Bethlehem, Pa., by pieces of lumber which fell from a passing train. The engine was hurled over an embankment and totally wrecked. Wm. Brinker, brakeman, and Warren Kist, fireman, were seriously injured. They escaped death by jumping into the canal. Brakeman Thornton, with a broken leg, crawled ahead of the wreck and flagged an approaching train, preventing another smash-up. The loss is more than $10,000.

Wonderful Popularity.

The fact that the sale of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets exceeds that of any other pill in the market, be it great or small, is on account of the fact that they are tiny, little, sugar-coated granules, and that in most cases one little "Pellet" is sufficient for a dose; that they are purely vegetable and perfectly harmless; and for biliousness, sick headache and all diseases arising from derangement of the liver, stomach or bowels they are absolutely a specific. A gentle saxative or active cathartic, according to size of dose.

PLAINFIELDERS BOARD A TALLY-HO

And Join Distinguished People on a Famous Coaching Trip.

A cultured audience gathered in The Casino last evening to hear the Rev. Dr. C. H. Eaton, pastor of the Church of the Divine Paternity, New York city, tell the story of the famous coaching trip of Andrew Carnegie, James G. Blaine, and a party of friends, including Dr. Eaton himself, through England and Scotland. This delightful tour took place in the Summer of 1888, and was such a thoroughly charming journey that the telling of it could not be otherwise than entertaining. The evening was therefore very happily enjoyed, though some of the things which may have sounded very well before the Union League Club, where the lecture was originally delivered, might easily have been eliminated for the occasion. An exquisite flavor of romance pervaded the clergyman's talk, which abounded with refreshing bits of description, and which made one eager to renew his knowledge of the historic and poetic spots visited. The lecturer was in the main a highly satisfactory conductor, but a certain tinge of Anglomaniac affectation might readily have been spared, and its banishment might have made more effective the glimpse which the audience had of that air of sweet and modest American simplicity in which the journey was originally taken. Most of the references to reporters were rather unnecessary and somewhat ungenerous. The stereopticon views of Mr. Rockwood, which illustrated the lecture, were in the main excellent, and added much to the enjoyment of the occasion. The lecture was for the benefit of the building fund of the Unitarian church, the pastor of which, the Rev. Hobart Clark, very happily introduced the speaker.

The Burglar Fled Before the Bullets.

A covetous individual slyly pried open a window at The Crescent at a midnight hour this morning, with the evident intent of entering the building and appropriating some of the valuables left from the Bazar of Holidays. Night Watchmen S. R. Hope and Stephen McIntyre were awake to their duties, and had the fellow under cover of their revolvers the instant his head appeared. When they fired two shots into the air the burglarious individual fled in terror down East Fourth street as fast as his legs would travel. He was recognized.

SUES FOR HIS COMMISSION.

Mr. Runyon's Big Claim Against Wilkinson Gaddis & Co.

Orrin E. Runyon, a prominent Newark real estate agent, son of the late J. C. Runyon and brother of Telephone Manager Charles W. Runyon, of this city, has begun suit against Wilkinson, Gaddis & Co., of Newark, for $200,000. The papers have been filed by Counsellor Edward S. Black.

The action is the outcome of negotiations for the sale of the business of the firm to a syndicate of English capitalists about a year ago. Mr. Runyon conducted the negotiations as published in THE PRESS at the time, and an agreement was reached between the syndicate and the firm whereby the latter was to receive $1,800,000 for the transfer of its plant and business. After the death of Elias Wilkinson, the senior member of the firm, Elisha B. Gaddis, the President of the Company, repudiated the agreement and the sale was not consummated. As Runyon was conducting negotiations on commission he had his pains for his trouble and did not receive a cent. He brings the suit to recover the amount of his commission, which would have netted him about $90,000.

"A year ago, when I was negotiating with an English syndicate for the leather factories and business of Newark," said Mr. Runyon yesterday, "Mr. Wilkinson sent for me to come and see him, I did so, and was requested by him to find purchasers for the business of his firm. I communicated with the Englishmen, and they expressed willingness to buy up any business in which more than $1,000,000 was involved. I consulted with Mr. Wilkinson, and he estimated the business to be worth $1,600,000. The Englishmen were willing to purchase at that price The contracts were drawn and signed and were sent to the firm. The latter raised the price to $1,700,000 and then again to $1,800,000, which the syndicate agreed to pay. The contract was drawn up anew and signed by the foreigners. It was then forwarded to me. I placed it before the firm, and it was signed by Elisha B. Gaddis as President, and Alonzo Somerville, as Secretary of the Company. A few days before the death of Mr. Wilkinson he urged me to close the contract Shortly after he died Mr. Gaddis came to me and asked to be placed directly in communication with the syndicate. I did so, and he notified them that the firm would not keep its agreement. I have spent considerable time and money in my endeavor to consummate the sale for which I have received nothing."

Two members of the syndicate are at present in this country. They will remain here for some months. They will produce at the trial the original contracts as signed by Messrs. Gaddis and Somerville.

New Jersey's Best Villa Sites in Suburban Plainfield.

The reputation which Union county has gained by the building of nearly forty miles of county roads is increasing day by day. When a point is sought to be made anywhere in this State in favor of county roads, Union county is taken as the standard and referred to as most exemplary and most progressive, and the Union county roads are pointed out as an expenditure of money that has already enhanced the value of real estate beyond the cost of the roads themselves.

Already good-road advocates are claiming that "for every dollar spent on the roadways property has appreciated at least $5 worth." And yet the greatest benefit to be derived from these roads is still to come. Property has appreciated, it is true, and the roads have practically paid for themselves, in affording market facilities for produce at all times of the year, in affording pleasant means of communication where formerly there were, at some seasons, nothing but great gulfs of mud. But the great demand for country residences has scarcely yet begun. The reputation of these roads has only just commenced. When it has extended thoroughly through New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City and other places, and when the beauty of thousands of villa sites in Union county thus comes to be fully appreciated, then the thousands of acres that front on these elegant roads will be in constant demand, and houses will go up like magic.

What could be more replete with suburban beauty than on the level plains of Plainfield, or at Netherwood Heights, or on the mountain-side? With handsome railway stations so convenient and easy of access as those of Plainfield, the man who has business in the city is not for a moment delayed on the road, but can meet his train regularly as clock-work and be in the city at any hour he chooses.

Few if any counties in New Jersey are richer than Union in delightful locations for suburban residences, and in some places, right along these unsurpassed country roads, are sites that cannot be excelled for picturesqueness and natural beauty.

In good time—comments the Elizabeth Journal—the county roads will bring all these to public notice, and will find purchasers for them; and a few years more, and hundreds if not thousands of new houses in all parts of the county will add to the wealth of this section of New Jersey and will attest the progressive wisdom and judgment that built the county roads.

DR. CARROLL'S RELIGIOUS CENSUS.

The First Bulletin of Church Statistics Soon to be Issued.

The important inquiries being made by the Census Bureau, under the direction of Dr. H. K. Carroll of North Plainfield, in regard to the statistics of religious bodies in the United States, is gradually approaching completion, and in a few days a preliminary bulletin will be issued from Dr. Carroll's office.

The statistics of this preliminary work, however, relate to only a few of the 140 religious bodies, besides many independent congregations. In this pioneer effort the inquires have been restricted to a few questions, the answers to which will show—first, the locations by cities, towns, counties, and States and Territories; second, the number of congregations, (including churches, chapels, missions, and stations;) third, the number of ministers; fourth, the number of church edifices, also the number of halls, schoolhouses, and private houses used as places of worship; fifth, the value of church property, and sixth, the number of members or communicants.

The tables include statistics of the following denominations by counties, and summaries by States: United Presbyterian church of North America, Church of the New Jerusalem, Catholic Apostolic church, Salvation Army, Advent Christian church, Evangelical Adventists, Life and Advent Union, (Adventists,) Seventh-Day Baptists, German Seventh-Day Baptists, General Six-Principle Baptists, Christian church South, Schwenkfeldians, Theosophical Society, Brethren in Christ. The final bulletin will contain statistics of all denominations.

According to the figures at hand, the United Presbyterian church has the largest membership of any in the above list. It is credited with 94,402 members, the Advent Christian church coming next with 25,816 members. The Christian church South with 13,004 comes next, and is followed by the Seventh-Day Baptists with 9,017 members, and the Salvation Army with 8,662. In regard to the Salvation Army, the statistics show that it has 329 organizations in this country, 40 church edifices, 287 halls, with a total seating capacity of 102,261, and that the church property is valued at $37,350.

Few Cosmetics, but Many Poisons.

The agent of the Board of Health has been searching upon and down the State for cosmetic and face washes, and finds that they are a scarce article in New Jersey. A month ago he received notice from the Board of Health of Massachusetts that two brands of facewash, extensively advertised, and manufactured in New York, were full of poison. After reading the analysis and seeing danger ahead for the New Jersey girl, he instructed his deputies to go on a search for these particular washes and to get samples of any others that looked suspicious. Among the cities searched were Trenton, New Brunswick, Plainfield, and Elizabeth. Only two places in the State were found selling the articles. It is, however, found that the sale of opium, morphine and chloral is on the increase, and that these dangerous articles are much used by both men and women as narcotics. Some druggists have been notified to stop their sale at once or stand trial for violating the law.

Half a Million Improvements on Ripley Hill.

How does this calculation strike you? On Ripley Hill, Dr. Ripley is selling 100 acres of land in half-acre lots. On each lot there is to be erected a house and buildings costing at least $3,000. Every acre will thus have improvements on it to the value of $6,000. As the 100 acres are bound to go, if the rapidity of present sales is any criterion, there will very shortly be expended in improvements on Ripley Hill the sum of 100 times $6,000, or $600,000 — more than half-a-million dollars permanently invested in that most desirable of all additions to a town, homes for first-class professional and business men.—Westfield Leader.

A Westfield Physician's Patient Commits Suicide.

Alfred Lister, a prominent citizen of Newark, sailed for the island of Hayti on the steamer Adirondack of the Atlas Line two weeks ago. He undertook the voyage in search of health, and was accompanied by his physician, Dr. Cooper, of Westfield. Yesterday it was announced that Mr. Lister was dead, and it is probable that he committed suicide. Dr. Cooper has sent only meagre tidings of the affair, but it is understood that the patient jumped into the sea when the vessel was two days out from New York.

Use the great specific for "cold in head" and catarrh—Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

STRANGE BUT TRUE.

Story of the First Execution in Glynn County, Georgia.

Glynn County, Georgia, is soon to have a hanging. The Brunswick Times publishes the following bit of history: It has been just seventy-six years since a hanging took place in Glynn County. Yesterday morning I was talking to Coroner Lewis Harris, whom everybody knows by the sobriquet of "Uncle Lewis," and in some way the subject of judicial executions came up.

"It has been seventy-six years since the last hanging in this county," said the coroner, "and it happened just four years before I was born."

Although Uncle Lewis is seventy-two years of age there is nothing about him sage his snow-white beard and hair to indicate it, for, short in stature, with a clear blue eye and healthy color, he's as jovial and jolly as Santa Claus himself.

"Yes, seventy-six years," he continued, in a reminiscent mood, as he ran back over the long stretch of years, "and I can tell you all about it."

I eagerly begged him to do so.

"Well, before I was born there used to be a great hunter in these parts named Findley, a one-eyed man, who was not afraid of the devil himself. One day he was out hunting, about where the old Baptist church now stands, on the corner of C and H streets. As he pushed his way through the heavy canebrake, and almost virginal forest he came face to face with a stalwart, half-savage runaway negro, and, as was the custom in those days, he arrested him and started back to the settlement with his prisoner. Unfortunately for Findley, he wore a very heavy hunting-knife on his blind side, so to speak, and as he and his prize found their way toward clearings, the negro, grown desperate with fear, sprang upon the hunter, and, seizing his knife, cut his throat from ear to ear with one strong stroke of the weapon. When, after some days, Findley was still missing, a searching party was organized, and after a day or two the body was found in a state of decomposition.

"The cut told the story of the crime, and a hunt for his unknown murderer began. The negro was found in the canebrake, and suspicion at once fell on him. He was brought to the settlement and was tried, found guilty and finally executed on a spot between what is now A and B streets, within two hundred yards of where he murdered Findley.

"He acknowledged his guilt on the scaffold, and so atrocious had been the murder that after the execution his head was cut off and placed upon a tall pole by means of an iron spike, where it remained for eleven years. The execution happened four years previous to my birth, but I distinctly remember that horrible, grinning head on top of the pole. The boys in those days would never go near the spot at night, for even in the dark their imagination would outline distinctly that horrible sight. May be that execution, with all its horror, has kept down hanging in these parts, but we certainly ought to have one or two now, for I fear that lesson has been forgotten."

The scene of the long ago murder and execution is now one of the prettiest residence portions of Brunswick, and the spot where the pole stood with its grinning, ghastly head, is covered by the residence of a prominent citizen. Although the crime and its punishment have also been obliterated by the ceaseless wash of the tide of time, there is one mind in which it still lives, and that is the mind of Coroner Lewis. 'Tis a strange, but true story.

A WORKADAY ROMANCE.

Toil and Privation Ennobled and Glorified by Pure Sentiment.

This story was originally told by Spurgeon: A young clergyman and his bride were invited guests at a large party given by a wealthy parishioner. In all the freshness and elegance of the bridal wardrobe, the young wife shone among the throng, distinguished by her comeliness, vivacity and rich attire; and when, during the evening, her young husband drew her aside and whispered to her that she was the most beautiful woman in all the company, and that his heart was bursting with pride and love for her, she thought herself the happiest wife in the world.

Ten years later the same husband and wife were guests at the same house, where there gathered a similar gay company. The wife of ten years ago wore the same dress she had worn on the previous occasion, and, of course, it had been altered and re-made, and was old-fashioned and almost shabby. Toil, and care, and motherhood, and pinched circumstances had taken the roses out of her cheeks and the lithe spring out of her form. She sat apart from the crowd, careworn and preoccupied. Her small hands, roughened with coarse toil, were ungloved, for the minister's salary was painfully small.

A little apart the ten-year husband stood and looked at his wife, and as he observed her faded dress and weary attitude, a great sense of all her loving faithfulness came over his heart. Looking up, she caught his earnest gaze, and noticed that his eyes were filled with tears. She rose and went to him; her questioning eyes mutely asked for an explanation of his emotion; and when he tenderly took her hand, and placing it on his arm, led her away from the crowd, and told her how he had been thinking of her as she looked ten years before, when she was a bride, and how much more precious she was to him now, and how much more beautiful, for all her shabby dress and roughened hands, and how he appreciated all her sacrifice and patient toil for him and their children, a great wave of happiness filled her heart, and light shone in her face so that it gave more than youthful beauty. And in all the company there was not so happy a couple as this husband and wife, their hearts and faces aglow from the flaming up of pure sentiment that transfigured and ennobled and glorified all the toils and privations they had endured, and whose reflected radiance no untoward future could dim.—Good Health.

YOU NEGLECT THESE SYMPTOMS AT YOUR PERIL! Numerous sufferers complain that they are weak, ill at ease and exhausted, that they have a poor or variable appetite, no strength, no nerve; they become irritable, cross, blue and discouraged. In some cases there are pains and aches in various parts of the body, and there is often indigestion, dyspepsia, belching of wind, dull, cloudy head, and general dispirited feeling. Sleepless, restless, wakeful nights follow. The brain tires easily, and there may be a tendency to drowsiness during the day. Neglect of these symptoms results in excessive nervous prostration or paralysis, with numbness, trembling, cold feet and legs, prickling sensation and weakness and weariness of the limbs.

Thousands become prostrated, paralyzed or insane by neglecting the first symptoms, not knowing that the result of such neglect will be fatal.

Look to the danger signals in time, nervous sufferers, to avert the dread results. Remember that it is not only your health, but your life and reason which are at stake. You know that you are weak, sick, exhausted and rapidly running down, and you know, just as well, or you should know, from what you hear and read, that the great nerve cure, Dr. Greene's Nervura, will certainly and positively cure you of these symptoms, and save your health, save your reason, save your life. It is the greatest and most wonderful of Nature's remedies, is purely vegetable, and the best nerve invigorator and health restorer ever discovered.

Dr. Greene of 35 West Fourteenth street, New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write him about your case.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes, and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

Reduction in Prices for Cash!

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

AFTER DECEMBER 15, 1890,

The Plainfield Produce Company

Will Sell All Goods Strictly for Cash!

We will present a few reasons for making this change in our manner of doing business. In the first place we have our Hay, Grain and Produce inspected and bought direct from the Producer for Cash. Thereby obtaining better quality, also saving one profit, which would go to the commission merchant if bought from sample the usual way.

In the second place any concern doing an extensive credit business must get larger profits to offset slow and worthless accounts, of which with the greatest care there will be some. And the customer who is ready to pay and does pay his bills when presented, is the one who must pay these larger profits.

By selling for cash we avoid losses from such accounts, and can afford to sell for smaller profits.

We ask for a share of your patronage. Give us a call and we will show you how low we can sell for CASH, instead of how high we must sell for credit.

A NOVEL RAILWAY.

Its Underground Trains to Be Propelled by Electricity.

An Unique Undertaking Carried to a Successful End—A Railway Running at Great Speed Under the Streets of London.

Mr. J. H. Greathead, chief engineer of the new City and South London Railway Company, was interviewed a few days ago by a reporter for the Pall Mall Budget, and had this to say concerning one of the most wonderful enterprises of the age:

"In the construction of this line we have developed a new system of tunneling which is very safe, and enables work of this kind to be carried out without interfering with the traffic of the streets and without pulling down property in the wholesale way that was done when the underground railways were constructed. At the same time the work can be carried out very rapidly. At one time Messrs. Walter Scott & Co., the contractors, were doing more than 100 feet of tunnel daily, and in one half year did two and one-quarter miles. Near Stockwell we came on a bed of sand and gravel—we were formerly working in clay—and that caused delay, as it necessitated the manufacture of additional plant, but when we got that, and the men became accustomed to work under compressed air, the work went forward very steadily. We had to go through 200 yards of sand and gravel, which was done without pumping the water. Had we removed the water we might have done damage to the adjoining property, and to avoid any risk we decided not to do so, but to work under compressed air. It was the first time tunneling was ever carried out in that way, and to show the value of the method I may say that the St. Clair tunnel has since been constructed in the same way by the Grand Trunk railway of Canada, and the Hudson river tunnel, which was started several years ago on another plan, is also to be executed on my method, and so will be the new Glasgow subway, which will involve four tunnels under the Clyde.

"Electricity is the motive power on the line. The current will be generated at Stockwell, and will be taken by a main conductor through the tunnels both up and down. Connected with the main conductor at each signal-box is the working conductor of steel, which is placed on the line between the rails.

"Each train will be made up of three carriages and a locomotive, weighing altogether thirty tons. A train will be capable of seating 100 passengers. We shall begin with a five minute service, but it is our interest to run a three-minute service and eventually, if required, a two-minute one. For the three-minute service we shall have ten trains. Including stoppages, we expect to maintain a speed of fifteen miles an hour, which is 25 per cent. in excess of the speed on the Inner Circle railway. As the approach to each station is on an incline and the departure on a decline the trains can be stopped easily and get up speed quickly. The Westinghouse brake which has been adopted will bring the train up in five seconds. The passengers will enter by two platforms between the carriages to which there are gates, which open and shut rapidly like a pair of lazy tongs. There is a passage from end to end of the train, and only one class.

"The carriages are cushioned and lighted by electricity, the current being obtained from the working conductor as the train passes along. At each station there are two lifts to raise and lower the passengers. They will each hold fifty persons, so that they can carry a full train-load. As the descending passengers leave one door of the lift those ascending will enter by another, so that no time will be lost. The lifts are worked by hydraulic power, which is generated in the same engine-house as the electric power at Stockwell. The water passes from the accumulator through a pipe in the down tunnel extending to the city. Having done its work it returns by a pipe in the up tunnel to the pumping engines at Stockwell, and is again circulated. The pressure is about 1,200 pounds to the square inch. The lifts are capable of raising 5 tons, but they will not have to raise more than 3½ tons. They will bring a full load to the surface in about twenty seconds."

UNION PRINTERS' HOME.

The Beautiful Building to Be Erected with the Childs-Drexel Fund.

In 1886, when the International Typographical Union met in Pittsburgh, George W. Childs and Anthony J. Drexel each gave $5,000 for the general good of the union, without conditions as to the use to be made of the money. Instead of being placed in the general fund the money was set apart and designated as the Childs-Drexel fund and put in the care of three trustees—Messrs. James J. Dailey, of Philadelphia, August Donath, of Washington, and Frank S. Pelton, of Chicago. The union determined at a later session to augment the fund and use it in constructing a printers' home. To that end it was ordered that annually, on the birthday of Mr. Childs, the printers in the East should set 1,000 ems each, the proceeds to be added to the fund, and that on the birthday of Mr. Drexel the printers of the West should follow suit. Enthusiastic printers have thus donated $6,000. At the session at Atlanta, Ga., last June the union levied an assessment of $1 per capita. The available means now amount to over $53,000.

Austin, Tex., offered a site for a home, but before definite action had been taken on the proposition a site was offered at Colorado Springs that was accepted by the union in session at Denver in 1889. Denver printers had tried to legislate the donation of a tract of land for the purpose; this act, found to be unconstitutional, was abandoned. Then prominent business men in the immediate vicinity of Colorado Springs purchased eighty acres and donated it to the union, the only condition being that within two years the erection of a home, to cot not less than $20,000, shall be begun.

At the Atlanta session a board of thirteen trustees was selected and instructed to obtain a charter and prepare for the erection of the home. Eleven of the trustees met in Chicago a few days ago and adopted the plans of the Denver architects. The exterior shows a large, substantial red sandstone building in the renaissance style, with two corner towers of different construction and porches at either end. Three stories above a high basement it will have a slanting roof, with Dutch dormer windows. There is very little ornamentation save in the form of the entrance, with its pediment, and the corner towers. The building is to be 150 feet long, 40 feet deep and will have a wing 35 by 40 feet. The height of the towers will be 90 and 100 feet above grade. Exclusive of steam plant the structure will cost about $50,000.

According to the general plans the home will contain, besides the usual offices, a composing and press room, smoking-room, parlors, reading-room, library and about forty chambers. An elevator will be added, a feature not provided for by the architects in the original plans.

Since the acceptance by the trustees of the eighty acres parties in Colorado have offered to erect a building at a cost of $50,000 for sixty acres of the land. This proposition was declined by the trustees.

According to Trustee Vaughan the site chosen for the printers' home is one of the most picturesque in the West. It is on a gentle elevation in sight of Pike's Peak, with countless mineral springs all around. It is but seven miles from Manitou springs, whose waters are the only waters yet discovered that spring from the natural rock charged with carbonic-acid gas. The material for building will be sandstone or lava stone. The wonderful quarries in Round mountain are near at hand, and enough granite is still there to build all the great buildings that will go up in the United States for years to come.

SOME ANCIENT COINS.

Pieces of Asiatic Money That Are Older Than Christianity.

Mr. J. A. Brudin, of No. 534 West Thirty-ninth street, has some very rare coins. He is a collector of coins from East Asia and has some pieces very old and interesting.

None are more so than the coin of King Wu Wang (1122-1116 B. C.). It is called Pu, the word meaning cloth made from cotton or hemp. It is made of bronze with raised letters and lines, the characters being in Chinese, but of such ancient date that the modern Chinaman can't make them out. It is still well preserved.

Another is a knife-shaped coin. It belongs to the dynasty of Tsi (387-221 B. C.). It is called Tao, which means knife or sword. It must be very old and rare, because the letters are not raised but engraved, and seem to be gilded.

Mr. Brudin says that the only Chinese coin with gilded letters was coined by usurper Wang Mang (9—22 A. D.), and is called Tso Tas or "gilded knives." Those are, however, quite different from the knife coin here represented.

It is supposed that the Chinese made money about two thousand eight hundred years before Christ. It was then called Kin Wilch, meaning metal or gold.—N. Y. Journal.

THE HOUSEHOLD.

FURNITURE FOR DOLLS.

Pretty Home-Made Bedroom Set for Miss Dolly's House.

The dolls must be cared for as well as their owners, new houses must be had, old ones refitted, and many a small housewife is considering the subject with all the anxiety due to so grave a subject. To mothers who have to cater to the tastes of these little critics we give a few hints which may assist them.

A pretty home-made bedroom set for a doll's house may be made in this way:

Cut out of strong cardboard to shapes each of diagram A and B. Cut one (A) the height of the dotted line. The four pieces form the headboard, footboard and side-pieces of a bed. Cover the pieces neatly with a small-figured calico on both sides, turning in the edges, and overhand stitching the sides together. When the pieces are fitted and stitched together they will form a strong, well-made bedstead with firm legs. Cover the top with a piece of the same chintz as a rest for the mattress; add a little flounce as a vallance to the bed, a hair mattress made of ticking and it is ready for use.

The sides and front and top of the dressing-table simply represent the sides, front and top of a box, and are first covered and put together in the same fashion as the bed, and afterward trimmed. The washstand is made in the same way, without the back and with plainer trimmings. The chairs are very easily made, and the diagram will show the shape of the pieces: No. 1 is the back and back legs; No. 2, the front legs and side pieces (three of these should be cut), and No. 3 the seat after they are covered and stitched together. A flounce gives the chair a pretty finish.

Sets made in this way sell very readily at fairs.—N. Y. Tribune.

WASTE-PAPER BASKET.

A Pretty and Useful Ornament for My Lady's Boudoir.

One whole pasteboard, a half yard of scarlet silesia, a yard of dress binding, a yard and a half of shaded green ribbon, some flowers, needle and thread, a basket of lichens scaled off in as large pieces as possible from old decaying logs or fence rails; with these and two hours of leisure a pair of deft hands can make this pretty, useful writing-desk appendage. Bring the ends of the pasteboard together and secure them in a flat seam. Cut a round piece to fit the bottom of this cylinder, sew on and cover the seam with the binding. Now begin at the bottom, crowd closely together and sew securely round after round of the lichens until the whole surface is thickly covered with them. If care has been taken to put them on smoothly, the result will reward the pains; the blending of color is beautiful. Make the lining, by seaming, and gathering with a little ruffle at the top, and sew it in, so that the merest edge will show. If you have saved from last fall's blooming some bunches of hardy hydrangeas, these, or some modest colored artificial flowers, secured by the ribbon tied in a loose bow at the side, will make a very pretty ornament. It is a beautiful receptacle for tall grasses, if you should wish sometimes to use it as a bouquet receiver in a corner of the room.—American Agriculturist.

Utilizing Cotton Waste.

Until lately cotton waste has been cleaned and reused, but the grease extracted from it has been thrown away. It is now found that the oil thus extracted can be made, after very simple treatment, to yield first-class printing ink. The cotton waste is placed in steam chambers and a solution of bisulphate of carbon is pumped into the vessels. This disengages the oil and grease, which is then passed into a series of heated coppers, from which it emerges as varnish, from which the printing ink is made.

He Should Get the Job.

Mosquito—Don't strike me! I haven't come to bite you, but to ask a favor.

Thespian—What is it?

Mosquito—My season is over now, and yours is commencing, and for the sake of old acquaintanceship, if not friendship, don't you think you might give me a job?

Thespian—As a singer in the chorus?

Mosquito (waving his leg deprecatingly)—Nothing so lofty! But don't you think I'd be a success as a bill sticker?—Harper's Bazar.

Every Thing Fresh and Nice.

"Bill, have you dusted the pies?"

"Yes, sir!"

"Sponged off the candy?"

"Yes."

"Washed the gingerbread and flavored the marshmallows?"

"Dug the flies out o' the lemonade?"

"Ye—"

"Hi la's an' gen'lemen! Yere's yer nice, fresh confection'ry, yer lemonade and yer home-made p-ieee! Yere —."—American Grocer.

HEARD ON THE "RIALTO."

"Young man, they tell me you intend starring next season in a play of your own. Will you let an old stager give a bit of advice?"

"Most cer-r-tainly!"

"Well, then, only strike those towns to play in where eggs are scarce; take the old man's advice!"—The Jury.

Guessed the Wrong Place.

A widow saw her poor, dear, lost husband in a dream.

"How are you, darling?" she asked with the greatest anxiety.

"Bully; I say, I'm ever so much happier than I was during the entire twenty years I passed with you."

The Widow (joyfully)—Then, oh, then, you must surely be in paradise!

"No, you poor deceived one; just the reverse."—Judge.

A Benedict's Opinion.

Yabsley—Prof. Potterby is a little the most absent-minded man I ever heard of. He actually met his own wife downtown the other day and didn't know her at all.

Wickwire—I don't know whether that was absent-mindedness or not. A woman looks a heap different down-town from what she does at home.—Indianapolis Journal.

"Great Cry, But Little," Etc.

Jones was describing a gunning adventure.

"I fired, the animal fell; but it proved to be only wounded. I tracked it with all the tenacity of the sleuth-hound and the craftiness of the North American Indian. Finally I overtook and killed it with the stock of my gun."

Jones had shot a snipe.—Judge.

A Painful Memory.

"Grindstone, were you ever a candidate for office?" asked his friend.

"Yes, I went through a campaign once as a candidate," replied Grindstone, as a look of pain flitted across his face, "but I lived it down, Kiljordan—lived it down."—Chicago Tribune.

CONCEALED FOLIAGE.

The Artist—All finished, sir.

Dewlach—All right. Brush it dry, will you? I don't want to wet such a close cut.—Judge.

Be Fashionable or Die.

Huggle—Wedding rings for men are coming into fashion again.

FIGHTING THE SIOUX

Bloody Encounter Near Pine Ridge Agency.

THE REDSKINS PUT TO ROUT.

Kicking Bear and Several of His Braves Captured by Our Troops.

A Number Killed and Wounded on Both Sides—The Cherry Creek Ghost Dance in Full Blast—Squaws and Children Frenzied—New Rockford Settlers Sleep on Their Arms.

RAPID CITY, S. D., Dec. 13.—A special dispatch by the courier from the camp of the troops of the Sixth cavalry stationed on South Fork, Cheyenne, says a squaw-man named Rider brought the report to the commanding officer that there had been a bloody encounter four miles north of Pine Ridge agency between the United States troops and some four or five hundred Indians under Kicking Bear, and that a number had been killed on both sides. The Indians were put to rout and a large number captured, including Kicking Bear.

A courier from the month of French Creek says that the latest authentic reports from Capt. Wells are that a large party of Indians attacked eighteen men four miles below the creek. Several were wounded, and it is thought four Indians were killed. An engagement is expected with the hostiles in the morning near Battle Creek.

CHEYENNES DANCING.

Squaws and Children Become Excited and Take Part.

PIERRE, S. D., Dec. 13.—Edwin Phelps, a Congregational missionary who is a full blooded Sioux, has just arrived from the Cheyenne Agency and reports the Cherry Creek dance in full blast.

He says the Indians drive stakes in the ground, cover them with their tents, then plaster with mud and build a fire. Stones are heated red hot, and then by throwing water on them they make a rude kind of vapor bath. While perspiring the most they rush out with only a breech clout and join in the dance, and so excitedly do they behave that the squaws and children become frenzied and take part. They jump into the freezing water of the river.

Frightened by Indians.

NEW ROCKFORD, N. D., Dec. 13.—New Rockford people slept on their arms last night. A party of Sioux Indians camped near town and kept up the ghost dance all night. Their whoops could be plainly heard in the city. The Indians stole flour from the mill here until an armed guard was placed in the building. A few cattle were also killed. Settlers are coming in from all directions this morning.

Horrible Murder in the Streets of Paris.

PARIS, Dec. 13.—A workman named Lacassia, who had quarreled with his wife because of the refusal of the woman to live with him, met her on the street, and after a vain attempt to induce her to return to him, Lacassia became violently enraged, and drawing a revolver fired four shots at the unfortunate woman, who at once fell to the sidewalk. Then, as his victim lay helpless at his feet, the murderer drew a knife and ripped open the woman's abdomen. He afterwards attempted to commit suicide, but was prevented by the arrival of the gendarmes, who placed him under arrest.

Shoemakers Will Not Arbitrate.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 13.—The investigation by the State Board of Mediation and Arbitration into the causes of the existing troubles in connection with the shoemakers' lockout was concluded without a settlement of the difficulty having been arrived at. The bone of contention is the fact that the men have pledged themselves to continue the strike until Patrick Cox shall discharge the non-union men in his shop, and Mr. Cox's refusal to do so.

Schooner Abandoned at Sea.

GALVESTON, Tex., Dec. 13.—The captain and crew of the American barkentine Adda J. Bonner, which sailed from Baltimore on November 4 for Rio Janeiro, has just been brought here by the British steamer Unionist. The barkentine was abandoned on November 24 and the crew were picked up by the steamer. The Adda J. Bonner had five feet of water in her hold, and the crew before leaving set her on fire.

Prof. Bancroft's Disappearance.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 13.—The whereabouts of Prof. Bancroft have not yet been discovered, though it is believed from clews obtained that he has gone to Florida. A detective left for New York to look over the week's passenger lists of Southern steamers. The police, from their investigations, are convinced that the professor was in this city as late as 3:30 Monday afternoon.

Koch's Lymph in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 13.—A supply of Dr. Koch's lymph has been received by the University of Pennsylvania commission. The quantity is sufficient to treat between 500 and 1,000 patients. Inoculations will be made at once, and the treatment will be conducted under the personal supervision of the university commission.

New York Banker Fails.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Peck, Martin & Co have made an assignment to George S. Hamlin, with one preference to W. J. Peck of $12,000. They are dealers in building materials and rated at $250,000. The liabilities of the firm are about $300,000 and the assets about $200,000.

THE FEDERATION OF LABOR.

It Adopts Resolutions of Sympathy With the Farmers' Alliance.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 13.—The Federation of Labor Convention received this morning a telegram from the secretary of the New York Socialist Club, stating that they had passed resolutions condemning the attempt of the Central Labor Federation to force its delegate into the convention.

A resolution was adopted instructing the conveyance of a fraternal greeting of the Federation to the International Labor Congress which will be held at Brussels the coming year.

A resolution of fraternity and sympathy with the Farmer's Alliance was also unanimously passed.

The protest of the Federation was recorded against the practice of permitting military and naval bands to enter into competition with private musical organizations, and against the system of farming out criminals by contract to work in mines now existing in Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky and Tennessee.

Samuel Gompers was re-elected president.

The Federation will hold its next convention at Birmingham, Ala.

A BANKER IN TROUBLE.

His Accounts Found to Be Nearly $3,000,000 Short.

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—Curtis G. Goddart, the banker, has been arrested here on a charge of embezzling almost $3,000,000.

The funds it is alleged he has embezzled are stocks and bonds of the Kansas, Arkansas and New Orleans Railroad. He was subsequently released on bail.

Mr. Stoddart was seen at his hotel and said that he had been prevailed upon to float the bonds by President F. C. Rutar of the Chicago & Arkansas Construction Company. Mr. Stoddart is also charged with defrauding the construction company.

Secretary Noble's Brother Dead.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 13.—Henry C. Noble, a well known lawyer of this city and brother of Hon. John W. Noble, Secretary of the Interior, died suddenly last night of heart disease. He was taken sick during the morning, but his condition was not regarded as serious until shortly before his death. Mr. Noble was 67 years of age. He was a law student of Henry Stansberry, who was President Andrew Johnson's Attorney-General. Mr. Noble was a lawyer of marked ability and was one of the most prominent members of the Ohio bar.

Bank Burglars Fight a Watchman.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Three men attempted to force an entrance into the Mount Vernon bank at 3 a. m., but were prevented by the watchman, William Guyon, who attempted to arrest them. The would-be robbers beat Guyon in a terrible manner and left him lying senseless on the sidewalk. Guyon was found three hours afterward and conveyed to his home, where he now lies in a precarious condition. No arrests have been made.

The Poet Whittier's Birthday.

DANVERS, Mass., Dec. 13.—The venerable poet, John G. Whittier, taking advantage of the fine weather Thursday, came to Oak Nolland to pass his 83d birthday. In a letter he says: "It would be great satisfaction to be able to meet all who remember me on my birthday, but my strength is hardly equal to the fatigue and excitement of a general reception. My friends may be assured that present or absent they will be remembered on the occasion."

Strikers Will Retaliate.

LYNN, Mass., Dec. 13.—The morocco workers have resolved that if the manufacturers do not settle the present labor trouble with their employes before January 1, 1891, they, the employes, will use all their power through the trades unions, Knights of Labor, Farmers' Alliance, and kindred organizations and also their committees in Washington, to have repealed the tariff of 35 per cent. on French kid imported into this country.

Shot His Wife and Himself.

DAYTON, N. Y., Dec. 13.—Edward Lawson, while intoxicated, shot his wife and afterwards himself with a revolver. The ball entered his wife's face and caused a dangerous and possibly fatal wound. Lawson shot himself in the right breast and will die. The man is a heavy drinker and when intoxicated is brutal and vicious.

Armenian Weavers Complain.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 13.—Twenty-nine Armenian weavers at the privilege mill of the Harris Woolen Company, Woonsocket, have quit work, the alleged cause being unfair treatment. The superintendent says he can nothing for them. It is understood their places will be filled by some of the weavers who were thrown out of work by the shutting down of the Main street mill.

Injured in a Wrestling Match.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—While engaged in a wrestling bout with Muldoon, at the Eighth Street Theater last night, Ernest Roeber sustained a dislocation of his left shoulder. He was thrown heavily by Muldoon. Roeber did not regain consciousness for several minutes.

THE BILL ACCEPTED

Both Parties Agree on Dunnell's Reapportionment.

PROVIDES FOR 356 MEMBERS.

The Committee Will Try to Get It Before the House on Monday.

Senators Blodgett and Walthall Speak Against the Election Bill—The World's Fair Commission Awaiting the President's Proclamation—Decision in Favor of Fishing Vessels.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The Democrats joined with Republican members of the House Committee on the Eleventh Census in an agreement to report the Reapportionment bill as prepared by Messrs. Frank and Dunnell. It provides for 356 members of the House. Its other provisions have already been outlined in these dispatches.

Judge Holman of Indiana made a stout protest against the representation, arguing that it should remain at 352.

It is likely that the bill will be considered in the House next week and an effort will be made to call it up Monday, with an agreement that a vote shall be taken at a fixed hour on Tuesday. The action of the Democratic members of the Census Committee in voting to report the bill favorably would indicate that the opposition to the bill, if any is made, will be very slight.

The Republican members of the committee are confident that the bill will not be opposed vigorously except by the New York city delegation, the members of which think that the claim of New York city for an increased population should be settled before the apportionment bill is disposed of.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

The Elections Bill Discussed by the Senate—Relief Bills in the House.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The Senate passed a resolution providing that beginning Monday next the Senate meet at 10 o'clock, and that the morning hour conclude at 11 o'clock.

Mr. Dolph's resolution requiring the Committee on Privileges and Elections to inquire whether the right of suffrage is denied or abridged in any State was debated at length, but went over without action.

Mr. Blodget and Mr. Walthall spoke in opposition to the Election bill.

The House passed a number of private relief bills.

Congress of Inventors.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The executive committee of the organization to promote the celebration of the completion of the first century of the American patent system met in the Board of Trade rooms and adopted the drafts of a circular to inventors and manufacturers throughout the country setting forth the object of the celebration and the great importance of having a congress of invention in this city next April. The benefits of the patent system to the agriculturists in the field, the miners in the mine and the mechanic in his shop are eloquently set forth, and correspondence and suggestions are solicited from all who are interested in the movement.

Awaiting the President's Proclamation.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Senator Palmer, president of the World's Fair Commission, called on the President and submitted to him papers showing that the World's Fair had reached that point in organization that a proclamation requesting foreign countries to participate in it should be issued. The papers were referred by the President to Attorney-General Miller to examine as to the sufficiency of the financial guarantees, etc.

Decision Regarding Fish.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The Treasury Department has directed the Collector of Customs at Gloucester, Mass., to admit free of duty fish caught in the waters of Newfoundland by fishing vessels of Gloucester.

Jay Gould Practices Economy.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Dec. 13.—The Union Pacific Railroad office in Buffalo will be closed at the end of the year. The change is in accordance with the policy of retrenchment outlined by Jay Gould immediately after receiving a controlling interest in the road. No reason is given for the change other than that of economy. None of the other Western railroads have announced that they will close their Buffalo offices.

The Delamaters Offer to Compromise.

MEADVILLE, Pa., Dec. 12.—It is said that Delamater & Co., bankers, who recently assigned, would on Monday make a proposition to their creditors to compromise by paying 50 cents on the dollar. The payments will be 20 cents in cash, 10 cents in one year, 10 cents in two years and 10 cents in three years, with 4 per cent. interest. This will undoubtedly be accepted.

BOOTS' SLAYER ON TRIAL.

The Murderer a Member of the Notorious Welch Mountain Gang.

LANCASTER, Pa., Dec. 13.—Amos Bills, a white man, is on trial here for the murder of George Boots, colored. The two men had been warm friends and were members of the notorious Welch Mountain gang. At the time of the murder, which occurred on October 4 last, it was said that the intimate relations existing between Bills' sister and Boots had much to do with the tragedy.

The testimony showed that the two men and a number of companions were walking along a country road. All were drunk. Bills and the colored man were quarrelling, and the latter was heard to say he was afraid of his white companion. Boots struck at Bills with a bottle, when the latter, drawing a large clasp knife, made a rush at him. The negro turned and ran, but Bills followed him and plunged the knife into his side. The thrust caused instant death.

The testimony of the defense is expected to be sensational.

TEN DROWNED.

A Steamer Strikes a Snag and Goes Down in Fifteen Minutes.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 13.—The steamer Baton Rouge, of the St. Louis Anchor Line, while en route to New Orleans at Hermitage Landing, three miles from Port Hudson and 150 miles from this city, struck the same snag which sunk the Paris C. Brown in 1889, and sank in 15 minutes.

The cabin and hurricane deck parted from the hull and floated away. The hull broke in two parts and sank out of sight in a few minutes.

Two deck passengers are known to be lost, and it is believed that eight others were also drowned.

The steamer was heavily laden, and her cargo is thought to be a total loss. She was uninsured, and was built at Jeffersonville in 1882 at a cost of $104,000.

Striking Brakemen Discharged.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 13.—The striking brakemen on the canal division of the New York & New Haven Railroad have been discharged by order of President Clark. The president in his order says that the men made no appeal to the management for extra pay for working overtime, but simply refused to continue at work, and he therefore directs that they be discharged for refusing to do their duty, and also that they be paid a reasonable amount for whatever extra work they performed. The places of the strikers have been filled and trains will be run as usual.

The Kilrain-Godfrey Fight.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 13.—President Fulda of the California Athletic Club states that the announcement regarding the reported matching of Godfrey to fight Kilrain is substantially correct, but that the directors would probably endeavor to arrange that the fight should take place earlier than in March. The winner would be matched, if possible, against Sullivan.

The Reading Brakeman Free.

READING, Pa., Dec. 13.—The jury in the case of Henry C. Kemp, the Reading railroad coal brakemen, charged with criminal negligence in causing the disaster at Shoemakersville, this county, by which twenty people were killed and many injured, returned a verdict acquitting the prisoner. The costs will be paid by the county.

American Securities Advanced.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—J. and W. Seligman ordered $200,000 gold shipped from London to-day. A private London cable says the market for American securities has advanced on buying thought to come from New York. Another London despatch says that £19,000 gold were withdrawn from the Bank of England for export to South America to-day.

Shot and Killed by White Caps.

NEW ALBANY, Ind., Dec. 13.—White Caps visited the house of Thomas Burgess, a farmer living in Meade county, Ky., early in the morning for the purpose of whipping him. MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 13.—The coroners jury has laid the blame for Wednesday's railroad accident resulting in the death of Mr. and Mrs. Todd of Sioux City, and daughter, Mrs. C. E. Slayton of this city, on the engineer of the Omaha train, who admitted that he was running contrary to rules.

This is 1890.

A Wise Choice.

NEW YORK, July 23, 1890.

All other reports on Baking Powders signed by me or purporting to be signed by me are based on investigations made several years ago.

In view of the present controversy as to the purity and wholesomeness of baking powders, I have been requested to make a chemical examination of the leading brands found in the market.

My analysis of Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder verifies the statement on the label, that the only ingredients used are cream of tartar, bicarbonate of soda (both of the highest purity), and a little flour to preserve the strength.

My analysis also shows that "Cleveland's Superior" is free from ammonia, alum, or other substitutes.

Owing to the purity, strength, effectiveness, and constancy of composition of Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder, I have adopted the same for use in my home.

THE KILKENNY FIGHT

The Irish Leaders Now on the Battle Ground.

A BIG CROWD MEET PARNELL.

The Contest for Members of Parliament Very Exciting.

Parnell to Speak To-night—The Country Districts Very Strong in His Favor—The Influence of the Priests Against Him—A Large Anti-Parnellite Demonstration to be Held at New Tipperary.

KILKENNY, Dec. 13.—The contest for members of Parliament is overshadowing all other interests. The influence of the priests is the strongest element Mr. Parnell has to fight. Father O'Halloran prevailed on the League to pass an anti-Parnellite resolution, and got the corporation to rescind their vote of confidence. But the vote of the city is not sufficient to defeat Mr. Parnell's candidate. The country districts are strongly in his favor. Sir John Pope Hennessey is now here, and six anti-Parnellite meetings are to be held to-morrow. Davitt will attend one and Sexton and Healy will address the others.

Parnell's journey to this city was without incident till the train reached Athay. Here a crowd had gathered which hooted and groaned at Mr. Parnell. They shouted "To h—l with Parnell!" gave cheers for the bishop and shouted "Long live Dillon and O'Brien!" At the other stations passed there were knots of people who cheered Mr. Parnell.

Kilkenny was reached at 9 o'clock last night. A torchlight procession, headed by the corporation officials, was in waiting, and upon the arrival of the train escorted Mr. Parnell to his hotel, where he he addressed the crowd briefly, pleading the weakness of his voice as an excuse for not making a longer speech. He promised to address the citizens to-night.

It is stated that the newspaper of the anti-Parnell faction of the Irish party will appear on Monday next.

The Municipal Council of Skibbereen has adopted a vote of confidence in Mr. McCarthy.

To-morrow the largest demonstration yet held against Mr. Parnell will take place at New Tipperary. Several leading McCarthyites will probably be present; among them, it is likely, will be Mr. Davitt.

THE ENVOYS SAIL.

William O'Brien Says He Has Hopes to Patch Up the Irish Trouble.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—This morning William O'Brien, Timothy Harrington and T. D. Gill sailed for Europe. Messrs. O'Brien and Gill went by the steamer Obdam of the Netherlands Line and Mr. Harrington sailed on the Etruria.

The three embarked last night about 10 o'clock, but before doing so they received a great many of their friends at the Hoffman House. The visitors had none but the kindest words for the departing envoys. Mr. Harrington received a delegation of members of the Irish National League that are in sympathy with Parnell.

William O'Brien favored the newspapes with a farewell interview, which was as follows: "Mr. Gill and I leave for France to use our best efforts to secure a reunion of Irish factions.

"Mr. Dillon and Mr. T. P. O'Connor remain in America with the object of continuing our work in the event of our consultation in France proving successful. We do not leave on the La Champagne on account of her accident, and we do not go by the German Lloyd line, for I fear the English authorities might arrest me when the steamer should stop at Southampton, and I think it is best to postpone my arrest until we have completed our work. So we leave on the Obdam of the Netherlands line. She will stop at Bolougne in France and let the party off.

"All our colleagues except Mr. Harrington are agreed as to the object and scope of our mission, and I know that Mr. Harrington wishes us success. The object of our mission is in one word to save the general election without inflicting humiliation on any person. It would not do to expect too much from this trip. We are painfully sensible of the dangers. But we have the strongest reliance in the good will of the two sections of the party.

"Whatever may be said it is certain that the men are all single minded and acting most reluctantly under the painful sense of duty. Everybody knows that any prolonged period of dissension in Ireland would be madness and the only result could be that we should have a triumphant Tory majority over our ruins. Our hope and belief is that the overpowering feeling of Irishmen is a longing for peace."

Mr. O'Brien said that the Paris conference would last but a very few days. He would then go back to Ireland to surrender himself to the authorities. He will probably spend his Christmas in prison. There were some affecting scenes at the parting of Mr. O'Brien and his friends. One of his admirers, a Mr. Brennan, pressed the noted Irishman's hand to his lips, whereupon Mr. O'Brien protested against such an exhibition of devotion.

Davitt's Reception in Kilkenny.

KILKENNY, Dec. 13.—Michael Davitt arrived quite an ovation in this city one faction loudly cheering the one-armed editor, while the other responded with hisses and groans and counter-cheers for Parnell.

The Anti-Parnellites' New Paper.

DUBLIN, Dec. 13.—It is understood that the new paper proposed to be issued by the anti-Parnell faction of the Irish Nationalists will make its first appearance on Monday next.

Jackson Pleads Guilty.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Charles E. Buchanan alias Jackson, who killed Mamie Murphy in "Chris" Johnson's saloon on Sixth avenue on April 23d, pleaded guilty of manslaughter in the first degree. The plea was accepted by the district attorney. He will be sentenced next Wednesday.

ENGAGED FOR TEN YEARS.

Miss Halliday Testifies in Her Breach of Promise Case.

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 13.—A breach of promise case is now occupying the attention of Judge Hall and a jury in the Superior Court. The plaintiff is Mary C. Halliday and the defendant is Daniel C. Howard. Miss Halliday is a daughter of Wilbur H. Halliday, the electrician. Howard is a wholesale grocer. Miss Halliday was the first witness called. She is remarkably pretty and said she was 30 years of age.

She testified that she became acquainted with the defendant twelve years ago and became engaged to him ten years ago. About the time of the engagement Howard failed in business and their marriage was deferred that his circumstances might have time to improve. She encouraged him in saving his money, hoping that he again might go into business for himself. He saved $500, which he placed in bank in Miss Halliday's name.

In the summer of 1888, while Miss Halliday was staying in the Adirondacks, she received a letter from Howard asking her to give him an order by which he could draw the $500 from the bank, as there was a good business opening for him. She sent him the order, besides an equal amount which her parents gave her. In December of the same year Howard informed Miss Halliday that he had become infatuated with another young lady in this city and asked that she release him. This she refused to do. He importuned her time and again to release him from the engagement, but each time she declined. All these years she had remained constant in her devotion to the defendant, often refusing the attentions of other young men on account of her engagement to him.

Mrs. Halliday, mother of the plaintiff, testified that the defendant had admitted to her that his course in paying attention to the other young lady was a mean, contemptible business from first to last, and that he had nothing to say in justification of his conduct. Miss Halliday asks $10,000 damages.

A Poor Man's Panic.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Isador Strauss in an interview published here predicts a poor man's panic. So far, he says, we have had a rich man's panic, induced largely by special efforts to depress securities. Before the situation is relieved the masses are bound to suffer. Mr. Strauss states it as his conviction that factories will shut down or run on short time, wages lowered and an era of hard times experienced.

Agreed to the Plumb Resolution.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The Senate without further debate agreed to the Plumb resolution with an amendment offered by Mr. Hoar providing that the Senate shall meet at 10 o'clock; that the morning hour shall expire at 11 o'clock and eliminating the proposition for night sessions.

The Rev. B. Fay Mills and Mr. Greenwood, have finished their work at Syracuse—which was as gloriously successful as here—and they are now at Amsterdam, N. Y.

Counselor Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth, President of the Board of Directors of the Plainfield Water Supply Company, was in this city to-day in consultation with E. R. Pope.

The Gilbert Dramatic Society, composed of the pick of Brooklyn's amateurs, has been secured by Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum, to play at Music Hall, Tuesday evening, January 20.

"The Plainfield B.-D, L. F. B. L. E. H. A. N. S. and I. Co.", "a story both humorous and thrilling," by T. W. King of Sandford avenue, is announced to be published in The World within a few days.

Mrs. Ollie C. McIntosh, by the unanimous vote of those present, was awarded the title of "Belle of the Ball" at the St. George's Cricket Club's dance, Wednesday night. She was accompanied by her husband. There were over 150 present.

The death of Albert Veilbig, stepson of Joseph Blatz, occurred at Muhlenberg Hospital, last evening, at ten o'clock. He was brought to the Hospital at eleven o'clock, yesterday morning, in an unconscious state, from which he could not be roused. Severe kidney trouble was the cause. He had been seriously ill, however, only a few days.

In commending the wisdom and sincerity of the Methodist people in putting up the Monroe Avenue chapel in just the location they have for mission work, the Rev. Mr. Mitchell's Visitor should not call it an "unchurched district." Mrs. Dr. J. P. Taylor, wife of the pastor of the church of the Heavenly Rest, at Evona, and others of his congregation, have been doing earnest mission work for months past in just that neighborhood, with great results.

But the Plainfield Lodges Do Not Approve.

At a meeting of the Committee of the Grand Lodge of Free Masons on the Masonic Home, held Friday last, at the office of R. W., Julius C. Fitzgerald, at Newark, the reports from the various lodges in the jurisdiction indicated that very nearly the whole amount necessary to the success of the enterprise has already been secured by voluntary subscriptions. A little more effort upon the part of the officers of the lodges between now and the meeting of the Grand Lodge in January next, it is believed will secure the whole amount needed. The effort is one that cannot be too highly commended, and it is to be hoped, for the credit of the fraternity in New Jersey, as it is now confidently anticipated by those having the matter in charge, that the effort will be entirely successful—Elizabeth Herald.

THE HASSELMANN TESTIMONIAL.

Some of the Attractions Promised for Next Wednesday Evening.

The testimonial entertainment which will be given to G. E. Hasselman in the Gesang and Turn Verein Hall next Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock, and half the profits of which are to be divided between the Children's Home and Muhlenberg Hospital, promises to prove a rare treat for all who attend. The programme overflows with attractive features, some of which it may not be out of place to hint at in advance. There will be quartettes by members of the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein; a chorus by the Old Saengerbund; vocal solos by Messrs. Maas, Dresselt, Tonnemann and Holmes; and piano selections by Miss Northrup, and Mr. Hasselmann. Miss Kittie Ferris, of New York, whose delightful recitations in this city not long ago are well remembered, will furnish several numbers, and Mr. Hasselmann will give some of his favorite piano selections, besides a descriptive piece composed by himself entitled "A War Scene." Two dramatic bits will also be seen, one a musical tableau, "The Three Germans," introducing Messrs. Maas, Dresselt and Tonnemann, and the other George Taggart's farce, "A Howling Success," which made such a hit at its first performance recently and which is to be repeated in all its pristine humor and quaintness, by the original players.

VanNest Alleged to be Wealthy.

The New York World, in one of its articles attacking the State Board of Pardons, speaks as follows:

"It is alleged that VanNest, one of the Plainfield fire-bugs whose depredations in that city kept the residents in a panic for months, obtained his release from State Prison chiefly on account of his money. His two confederates were less culpable than he, but one died in prison while the other languishes there. It was shown at the trial that VanNest paid the others money to set fire to the building for the destruction of which he was convicted. He was, according to the evidence, the leader of the incendiary gang, yet he is now at large thanks to an indulgent Board of Pardons."

Each Won One.

The Association is exceedingly fortunate in securing a gentleman of such large experience in voice training, as leader of these classes In payment for their lessons the boys who learn to sing will be expected to sing occasionally at the Sunday afternoon meeting for men.

SPECIAL FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

$27 30 WORTH GIVEN AWAY FOR $10.00.

Alfred Speer, President of the Speer N. J. Wine Co., of Passaic, N. J., the oldest wine grower in this country, and who shipped wines to San Francisco and Sacramento 34 years ago, before California wines were known, offers an assorted case of choice old wines worth $11.20 for $5.00, or a larger case containing thirty bottles, assorted, of twelve varieties of wines, worth $27.30 for $10.00. This offer is only made during the holidays, and only one case to a family. The sacrifice of these goods so far below cost, is made to introduce to appreciative parties the fine character of his wines. Goods will be shipped from the store, 28 College Place, New York city, upon receipt of price. Circulars giving descriptive list of wines, with prices, will be mailed on request by postal card.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

(In Charge of Superintendent of Press Work.)

The little cooks in the Labor Day Booth at the Bazar supplied orders for twenty-five dozen fish-balls the last evening, besides filling the usual demand for molasses cakes, lemon puddings, and cookies. The tomato soup which was served in the cafe was also made by the cooking class. Mrs. Stephen Cahoone, the Superintendent of the Bazar, and chairman of the general committees, of the sub-committees, and of the formation bureau, all combined, deserves a vote of thanks for her patient and systematic arranging of the many screws needed to run the machinery of so large a fair without friction. The demands in our work, pressure of time, often crowd out the expression of appreciation when any of our most busy women fill a position so full of responsibility and care. We realize that few men could have held the chairmanship more acceptably.

AN OLD TEMPERANCE PLEDGE.

The following is a pledge taken from an old almanac of the year 1837:

"Being satisfied from observation and experience, as well as from medical testimony, that ardent spirits, as a drink, is not only needless, but hurtful, and that the entire disuse of it would tend to promote the health and happiness of the community, we hereby express our conviction, that should the people of the United States, and especially all young men, discountenance entirely the use of it, they would not only promote their own personal benefit, but the good of our country and the world.

(Signed)
JAMES MADISON,
ANDREW JACKSON,
JOHN QUINCY ADAMS"

A Clergyman Almost Covetous, and for a Bicycle.

A unique and useful calendar for 1891 is that issued by the Pope Mfg. Co., of Boston, Mass. The calendar is in the form of a pad containing 366 leaves, each leaf containing blank for memoranda, and, as the leaves are only fastened at the upper end, any leaf can be exposed, no stub being left when the leaves are torn off. The pad rests upon a stand, containing pen rack and pencil holder, and made of stained wood, mounted with raised letters in brass, thus forming an ornamental paper-weight. The day of week and the day of the year, together with the number of the days to come, are given, and each slip bears a short paragraph pertaining to cycling and kindred subjects. These paragraphs have been carefully collated from leading publications and prominent writers, the larger number having been specially written for this purpose. Although this is the sixth issue of the Columbia Cycle Calendar, all the matter is fresh and new, comprising notable events in cycling, opinions of physicians and clergymen, hints about road making, and numerous other topics. One of the quotations is from the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis of this city, as follows:

"Blessed is the man who knoweth how to ride a wheel, and thus find enjoyment, oxygen, and power to preach wisely and well. My first course of lessons is not yet completed, and I should be envious when men go crying, 'Hail Columbia,' if the commandment did not say, 'Thou shall not covet.'"

A Flourishing and Influential Society.

A special meeting of The New Jersey Game and Fish Protective Society was held last evening in the Secretary's office, this city, during which matters of interest to sportsmen generally were fully discussed. President Percy C. Ohl occupied the chair, and presented some interesting statistics regarding the protection and propagation of game throughout the State. Treasurer R. M. Stelle reported a handsome sum remaining in his hands On motion of Gen. Wm. H. Sterling, the President was empowered to appoint a committee of three members, to be known as the Legislative Committee, whose duties shall be to look after the interests of the Society and game protection generally at the coming session of the Legislature. Reports were received of numerous arrests having been made the past year, of parties violating the game and fish laws, through the efforts of members of the Society, the membership of which is steadily increasing. The New Jersey Game and Fish Protective Society was organized in 1879, and is today the most influential game protective society in the State.

Against Women Delegates

Every Evening, of Wilmington, prints the vote of the churches in the Wilmington Conference on the question, "Shall women be admitted as delegates to the lay and general Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal church?" The Conference territory is co-extensive with the Delaware peninsula, embracing Delaware and the Eastern shore counties of Maryland and Virginia. The returns are complete except for five Maryland appointments, which, however, may change the result. The voting was close, the total of the Conference districts being: Yes, 2,749; no, 2,964; majority against the admission of women delegates, 215.

Wonderful Popularity.

The fact that the sale of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets exceeds that of any other pill in the market, be it great or small, is on account of the fact that they are tiny, little, sugar-coated granules, and that in most cases one little "Pellet" is sufficient for a dose; that they are purely vegetable and perfectly harmless; and for billousness, sick headache and all diseases arising from derangement of the liver, stomach or bowels they are absolutely a specific. A gentle saxative or active cathartic, according to size of dose.

His Final Condemnation Yet Delayed.

TRIBULATIONS OF COMMUTERS.

Annoyances Suffered by Patrons of Plainfield's Railway Service.

The Central Railway of New Jersey is having hard luck these days. On the New York side only one ferry slip is in use, and has been for the past month, while the other slip is undergoing reconstruction, a state of affairs that has proved of great annoyance to the pilots, and of ineffable exasperation to passengers, who, when they start for home, are in doubt as to whether they will reach there on time or two hours later. One of the recent favorite tricks of the ferryboats has been to miss the slip, and as this operation throws the time of all the following boats out of adjustment, and as only one boat at a time can enter the slip instead of two as formerly, the passenger, eager to reach his home and dinner, is the only one who suffers. Thursday night the boat that left the New York side to connect with the 5:45 Easton express lost her steam fifty yards out in the stream, and had to whistle for assistance.

An obliging tug came along, made fast to the helpless ferryboat, sidled over to the Jersey side, and by dint of punches and shoves, succeeded in a manner so skillful as to obliterate the impatience of the passengers and to arouse their admiration, in putting the boat in its berth. Yesterday morning the engine which draws the Plainfield express also lost its steam at Dunellen and when the 400 passengers who travel by this train daily—accelerated by scores of women bent upon Christmas shopping—reached Jersey City, they found themselves half an hour late. There tribulations did not end here. Half a dozen train loads of passengers were emptied upon the waiting ferryboat—the Plainfield—which started from the pier only to cruise on the North river for half an hour longer in the stiff Northwest breeze. Twice the boat came within stone's throw of the New York docks, only to back water and begin an exploring tour of the North river. For twenty minutes the passengers were in doubt as to whether the boat proposed to return to New Jersey or make a landing in New York.

In the meantime, while the uncertain condition of things exists, nearly all trains are delayed, but the passengers are good-natured over it. Years ago the Central Railroad of New Jersey became famous for its habit of running trains on time; so well recognized was its punctuality that farmers and citizens along the line regulated their watches and clocks from these trains, but nowadays the farmer is willing to walk to Jersey City and procure telegraph time rather than hazard the risk of relying upon the trains, which are decidedly later in the rule than in the observance. In the meantime the passengers are devoting themselves to Job and awaiting the reconstruction of the other ferry slip.

Can't Westfield Have a Bank Without Charley Hyde?

The meeting of certain gentlemen interested in the new bank says the Westfield Standard, was held at the Reading Rooms. There were present Messrs. Henry F. Alpers, Postmaster Whittaker, Charles L. Hyde, W. I. Keeler, W. G. Peckham, Andrew Smith, C. A. Smith, Frederick Pierson, A. F. Grant, Augustus Alpers, W. J. Alpers, W. C. Barton, R. A. Fairbairn, John Ingram, Mr. Harden and others. Mr. Hyde read a large number of figures to prove his assertion that a National Bank might not be able to pay. Others mention the fact that with $200,000 going into new buildings, large sums disbursed in this township for the county roads and considering that large estates and large properties are represented by citizens of Westfield, it would be possible to maintain a National or State Bank that the people have full confidence in.

The sentiment of the trades-people is unequivocally in favor of a National Bank. The difficulties seem to be to raise enough money to found a National Bank without the assistance of Mr. Hyde, or some other wealthy non-resident. It was also stated that if Mr. Hyde should come here with the bank, his friends would furnish money enough to promote various enterprises of much importance to the town. An offer was received from Mr. D. Shepard and others to double their former subscriptions. The alternative was presented of going on in some safe fashion with Mr. Hyde, or, perhaps, of losing the bank altogether for some years to come.

Wants a Fire-Alarm Like the City's.

(From the Fireman's Herald.)

The new stables for stabling the horses of Warren Engine Company, No. 1, of North Plainfield, are about completed, and probably next week the Company will have its horses in the house in case of fire. As soon as practicable, the company's driver, Peter Seeder, will purchase another horse to be used exclusively for driving the hose cart to and from fires, and a new set of snap harness is also forthcoming. Probably in the near future a steam fire-alarm gong will also be put in position, and then, the members of the North Plainfield Fire Department claim, they will be as well equipped to fight a fire as their brethren in any city.

What's Become of That Suit?

Under date of July 28, the following was printed in these columns:

EVERYBODY WILL SMILE AT THIS.

The publishers and editor of THE PRESS were served with papers to-day in an alleged libel suit brought by ex-Captain Carey. Considering the source of the complaint, the public will be able to judge how much of it is 'bluff' and how much because of wounded spirit.

Mr. Meeker is Doing No Better Than His Predecessors in This Respect.

Street Commissioner Meeker is making the rich and poor clean snow and ice from their sidewalks. He has served over 200 notices of warning.

So says The World in its Plainfield correspondence. But, as a matter of fact, the sidewalks in front of some of Plainfield's handsomest residences have not yet been cleared of the ice which formed on the pavements a week ago. Some very wealthy taxpayers have n't yet made any attempt to save people from falling in front of their residences.

AN AFFAIR OF HONOR.

Two Coffee-Colored Gentlemen Fight a Battle on the Sands.

The other day one of the waiters at our hotel made a sudden move in the serving room which brought his elbow against the ivories of another waiter, and the face of the moon was at once covered with blood. Some of us noticed their belligerent demeanor, and now and then we caught such expressions as:

"Yo' ar' no gem'lan, sah!"

"An' yo' is only a nigger!"

"I sco'n yo', sah—sco'n yo' fur low trash!"

"Hu! I'd like to be shet up in a room wid yo' 'bout two minutes!"

We were not, therefore, greatly surprised when we were waited on by a third party, who was a mutual friend, who asked us to arrange a meeting between the hostiles and see the affair through, according to ship-shape rules. It wasn't to be a duel, but a set-to, with gloves, and as we were tired of fishing, crabbing, sailing, and shooting porpoises, we hailed the new departure with glad relief.

"Yo' white folks dun knows all 'bout it, an' yo' go right ahead an' fix it up," said the mutual friend.

We borrowed gloves, bought rope enough for a ring, made stakes, and the site selected was in the sand behind the scrub. The tip was given, and when the hour came about seventy-five spectators had assembled. The rivals were on hand in good time, but it was noticeable that both were trying hard to look pale, and there was a movement of the chin which betrayed much mental anxiety. They were known only as "Jim" and "Tom," and while we were putting the gloves on Jim he arose and called across the sands:

"Does you 'pologize to me, sah?"

"I dun 'pologize if you 'pologize, too," was the reply.

"Den I dun——"

But we stopped him and braced him up, and two or three minutes later they faced each other in the center of the ring. Each man's teeth were chattering, each one's eyes were all white, and there was a wabbling of the knees.

"Look out, now, yo' nigger! I'ze gwine to bust yo' head off!"

"Look out, now, yo'self! If I hits yo' in de lung yo' won't git over it in two weeks!"

"Why doan' yo' hit?"

"Why doan' yo' hit?"

"Yo's skeert o' me!"

"So's yo' skeert!"

They were walking around each other, pushing at arm's length, and it would have stopped there but for the timekeeper, who shouted to them to go in.

"If I hit yo' in de eye look out!"

"If I hit dat nose you'll be dead!"

"I'ze comin' fur yo' purty quick!"

"I'll be right around dar!"

The referee shouted again, and, moved to sudden resolution, Jim flung off the gloves and grabbed Tom by the ankles and lifted him off his feet and dumped him on the sand. Tom's gloves fell off as he rolled over, and he had scarcely struck when Jim made a break through the ring, running like a rabbit. Tom scrambled up with a "Hu!" and broke through the other side, and while one legged it for the hotel the other sought safety behind the sand dunes, and the great match for blood ended in water. As I had acted as Jim's bottle holder, I felt called upon to reproach him that evening at the kitchen door, and he came out into the moonlight and explained:

"Deed, sah, but I didn't dun mean to do it. I meant to stan' right up dar an' fight dat nigger one millyon rounds 'cordin' to Miss Quee'sberry rules, but when I got de gloves on my sand went right away, sah—went right off down de coast a flyin', an' afore I knowed it I was back heah in de hotel a wipin' spoons an' a sayin' dat if I eber caught dat nig ger out in de dark I'd smash him, sah—I'd smash him 'till his own mudder would'nt dun remember his sad remains!"—N. PRISON BRUTALITIES.

Tortures Said to Be Inflicted in the Colorado State Penitentiary.

The Denver News, in an extended exposure of alleged abuses in the Colorado State Penitentiary, describes two methods said to be used to discipline refractory prisoners. The description is attributed to a convict, from whose letter the following is taken:

After supper the unhappy victim is led forth from his cell to the vicinity of the stable and compelled to stand with his back to a post erected for such occasions. Two officers are generally ordered to tie the prisoner's hands behind his back; a strap is then drawn around him, lashing his body to the post.

An officer attired in waterproof clothes now steps behind the post and holds the prisoner's ears, while another stands off about six feet and throws a stream of water in the prisoner's face. There is generally a sixty-pound pressure on the pump, and the water is thrown with so much force that it tears the flesh from the prisoner's face. The force of the water compels the prisoner to open his mouth, and the stream is thrown down his throat until he is almost strangled. He is then granted a respite till he has thrown up the water he swallowed and regained his breath.

This operation is repeated three or four times. Finally, when the guards have had sufficient fun, the water is thrown in the victim's face until he is knocked down.

Another engine of torture is what is known as the urging-up machine. It consists of a pair of handcuffs and a rope. The prisoner is taken to the warehouse and obliged to ascend a platform that is situated in one corner of it. Before adjusting the handcuffs the ropes are twisted so that when the offender is swung from the platform he is whirled in the air at the rate of one hundred revolutions a minute. He is wound off the platform by means of a windlass. When the whirling motion has ceased, the officers propound all kinds of taunting questions to their victim, and if he shows more fortitude than they like to see in an unfortunate man one of them will jump up and swing himself from the prisoner's shoulder in order to increase the pain. The victim is left hanging until non-circulation causes insensibility. It is a frequent occurrence to throw a bucket of water in a man's face and ask him how he likes it.

STRUCK A DUMMY.

The Ludicrous Ending of an Engineer's Harrowing Tale.

"T IS a sad story," said an old railroad man, as he coughed two or three times. The group of his listeners who had been hilariously telling some funny experiences a few moments before quieted down.

"I was runnin' old 142," he continued, "and Bill Sikes—you all know Bill—was firin' We was takin' the flyer west and had orders to run clean through, 'less we was signalled. I think the roadmaster was aboard, and we all knew that if we should pull up without a rattlin' good reason he'd be after us.

"We was runnin' almost full head, I guess, for I know the breeze just hummed when I jogged the cab winder a little. The old engine rocked just like as if it was on the briny deep, only faster. Well, we was goin' lickety split up through the northern part of that town that used to stand by the bend. Bill was shovelin' coal like a good one and I gave the whistle a toot now and then to let folks know we was comin'.

"As I was sayin', boys, we was just scootin' goin' round the curve, too. Just then I cast my eyes as far up the track as I could see, and right then I saw something that brought my heart right up in my mouth. I shook all over. Bill saw the thing as soon as I did, and Bill's eyes bulged and his hair stood right up.

"There was something on the track I could just see a little white sun bunnit and a caliker dress, and a little red ribbon peekin' out from a bunch of as pretty golden curls as I ever see."

The old man stopped. He swallowed mysteriously a number of times and drew his horny palm across his eyes. The group of listeners only moved forward a little and held their breath.

"I couldn't stop, boys. It was no use. The flyer was heavy, and we was goin' nearly sixty miles an hour. When I got strength enough to push in that throttle and slap on the air—we'd struck. We stopped. Bill and me jumped out and shuddered as we did."

The group of listeners turned away sick at heart.

The old engineer went on: "I picked up a wig of golden hair, and Bill two or three pieces of straw and an old sun bunnit.

"Just then a gang of ragged imps stuck their heads from behind an old barn and howled: 'Did you ever, ever, ever git left?'" The group who had listened in horror to the old engineer's sad story looked tired and faded away.—Chicago Evening Journal.

Reduction in Prices for Cash! TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN. AFTER DECEMBER 15, 1890, The Plainfield Produce Company Will Sell All Goods Strictly for Cash!

We will present a few reasons for making this change in our manner of doing business. In the first place we have our Hay, Grain and Produce inspected and bought direct from the Producer for Cash. Thereby obtaining better quality, also saving one profit, which would go to the commission merchant if bought from sample the usual way.

In the second place any concern doing an extensive credit business must get larger profits to offset slow and worthless accounts, of which with the greatest care there will be some. And the customer who is ready to pay and does pay his bills when presented, is the one who must pay these larger profits.

By selling for cash we avoid losses from such accounts, and can afford to sell for smaller profits.

We ask for a share of your patronage. Give us a call and we will show you how low we can sell for CASH, instead of how high we must sell for credit.

"HE LOOSA DA MONK."

How a Light-Fingered Gentleman Lost His Pet.

A Nineteenth Century Fagin and His Pupil—An Artful Dodger of the Simian Race Past in the Clutches of Inexorable Law.

The unusual sight of a monkey appearing as a witness in court occurred in this city recently, says the San Francisco Examiner. "John Doe" was charged with being an accessory to the crime of pocket-picking. The monkey was really the one that was guilty of the more serious charge, but doubtless the little fellow was innocent of any evil intention.

A lady was horrified while passing along Post street to find a monkey perched on her shoulder, and before she could recover from the paralyzed condition, her gold watch and chain were in the monkey's grasp and the little thief disappeared. A number of people saw the theft committed, but all seemed to pay more attention to the shrieking lady than to the thief. When she had been brought out of her hysterical state a thorough search was made for the robber, but not the least trace could be found.

Nothing was seen in the immediate vicinity but a tall, well-dressed man leisurely proceeding down the street. Doubtless he would have continued his stroll had not the officer noticed a suspicious bulging under the right side of his loosely-fitting Prince Albert coat, and he was overhauled. Clinging as closely to him as possible under the coat was found the monkey!

Of course the stranger was indignant at being so grossly insulted, but nevertheless was compelled to accompany the officer to the Central Station, where upon being searched several gold watches and articles of valuable jewelry were found upon his person, not considering the handsome diamonds worn by him. Next morning when the case of John Doe was called in court none of the frequenters showed any particular interest, even when a tall, swarthy man arose in the dock, passed through the little gate in the railing, approached the witness stand and agreed to tell the truth and nothing but the truth. They had often attended murder trials and gloated over the bloodthirsty details recounted by witnesses, and the mere fact of a man being charged with picking a pocket was nothing startling, even though he was tall and handsome. When the witness finished giving his testimony in a foreign accent the majority present felt satisfied that no case could be made out against him, and wondered how an officer could make such a blunder.

"Your honor," said the prosecuting attorney, "I have but one witness to introduce when I am willing to close the case. Call Miss Mono."

Miss Mono was at once brought into court in the arms of a stalwart police officer. Miss Mono was not a young lady, but a South American monkey of diminutive size. Her language could not be interpreted either for or against the witness, as the monkey alphabet has not yet been perfectly translated into English, but her actions could. With a wriggle and a jump the little animal landed plu into the arms of the prisoner, chattering and bobbing about with every demonstration of joy.

John Doe didn't seem to relish such evidence of recognition, and impatiently pushed the gleeful little beast away.

"If the court pleases," continued the attorney, "I wish to prove by this monkey that the defendant is guilty as charged." He then waved his hand at the crouching animal, which regarded him attentively. Another motion made in the direction of the judge caused the chattering little thief to comprehend, and before the court knew what was up his watch and chain were in the hands of the monkey, scampering over to the accused. The latter's face assumed a deep pallor, for he then knew that his former means of living was lost to him and that San Quentin stared him in the face.

HONORS TO COLUMBUS.

Chicago Wants the Earth as Model for a Monument.

Columbus, according to the latest plan, is to be remembered at the world's fair by a monument that is to beat the Eiffel tower all hollow. This project is designed to be worthy of Chicago at all events, says the New York Herald.

It is by a fellow-countryman of Columbus, Alberto de Pallassio, and, as will be seen from our illustration, it is a globe resting on a pedestal or base. The pedestal is of graceful proportions, three hundred feet high. The monument is a globe, whose diameter will be equal to the height of the Eiffel tower. Surmounting the whole will be a full-rigged ship.

The total height of the monument may be put down at about one thousand four hundred feet. At the equator a gallery will run around this globe which will be about two-thirds of a mile in circumference, while on the surface will be marked the continents and oceans, just as on a school globe. From the equator to the north pole, winding round the outside, there will be an inclined railway nearly four miles long.

A large statue of Columbus will stand in the center of the base under the globe, while a Columbus museum and a library devoted to literature in connection with his discoveries and those of other explorers will be established, and restaurants will be placed here and there at more or less elevated positions. An observatory will also be built at the summit of the monument. The cost of construction is estimated at about £1,000,000, while an additional £160,000 will be required for the lifts and other machinery.

O'REILLY'S TOMBSTONE.

Nature Has Provided a Tomb Worthy of the Irish-American Poet.

Nature has provided for John Boyle O'Reilly a tomb worthy of the man. On the highest point of Holyhood Cemetery, Brookline, Mass., there crops out a ledge of rock whose base is in the foundation walls of the earth. Countless æons ago the great glacial plane passed over this ledge, cutting its iron face and leaving a polished surface which the rains and frosts of thousands of years have hardly tinmed. Grinding its way slowly over the reef the mighty glacier left its indelible imprint behind, and left also an equally enduring memento of its passage—a giant boulder of conglomerate rock, fifteen feet high and, roughly speaking, about twelve feet square—seventy-five tons of weather-stained, time-defying, eternal rock. It stands on the crest of the picturesque height, a landmark conspicuous above all else in the neighborhood, solitary, massive, and majestic.

It is to be the tombstone of John Boyle O'Reilly. No mark, save a single tablet on its face, will be allowed to mar the severe simplicity of the noble monolith, which is nature's fitting memorial to God's nobleman. Mankind will honor him by a suitable work of man in the city of his adoption, but this monument will stand for all time, imperishable as the fame of the man who sleeps beside it.—Boston Pilot.

Daughter of Henry Clay.

"Speaking of Henry Clay," said a gentleman to a Cincinnati Times-Star reporter, "reminds me of the fact that he has a daughter buried at Lebanon, O. She died while Henry Clay and his family were on their way to Washington by stage coach many years ago. She was a girl twelve years of age and her loss was a sad blow to her father, who at the time was so pressed with business cares that he was compelled to bury the body and go on to Washington, intending some day to return and move it to Lexington, Ky. But he never did so, and the grave may be seen yet in the old burial ground surrounded by wire fence. The tombstone is one of the flat-tablet style, and relic hunters have so marred it that now it presents a dilapidated appearance. To such an extent was this spirit of relic seeking carried on that the graveyard authorities at last set posts every two feet apart around the grave and wrapped them around with wire strands to the extent of twenty or more, so that it is almost impossible for anybody to climb over and chip off a piece of the gravestone. As the old burial ground is being rapidly abandoned it is only the question of a few years when Henry Clay's daughter will be all that remains of Henry Clay's daughter will be all that remains of her occupant."

FOR SUNDAY READING.

BE NOT THE JUDGE.

I may not judge the erring one
And turn away with scornful mien,
Since I've escaped the crooked paths
That lead from rectitude to sin.

I know not to what depths of vice
His soul has fall'n, yet I hold
That love and Christian charity
Within my creed should be enrolled.

If I am blameless inasmuch
As God has made my duty plain,
What boots my soul's self-arrogance
That I from glaring faults abstain?

I owe it simply to His grace
Who, in His mercy, guideth me
To choose the right, abjure the wrong,
And fight my battles manfully.

Then why should I my neighbor judge,
Though fallen low in sin and shame?
God made us all of common dust
And knoweth well how much to blame.

Oh! let me rather seek to live
An honest, true and faithful part,
Ready to give a helping hand
To every tried and sorrowing heart.
—Clark Walcott, in Germanic

CHOIR PROPRIETIES.

What They Ought, and What They Ought Not, to Be and Do.

In offering some hints on this topic we do not aspire to instruct the artistic choirs who are hired as musical performers in the house of God and are scarcely expected to have any personal interest in a religious service as such. The impropriety in such cases is on the part of the churches that hire such persons to do their praising of God "in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs." Not long ago a visiting minister was preaching in a church whose organist was of this type. The day being oppressively hot, the preacher sensibly shortened his sermon, bringing the service to a close ten minutes earlier than was customary. When he gave out the last hymn an ominous pause followed, then a flutter in the choir, then a flutter in the congregation. It became known that the organist had, as usual, gone out to escape the sermon, and couldn't be found. Somebody started the hymn with a wrong tune, and the service ended humiliatingly. There certainly is an eternal unfitness in putting the music of a Christian church into unchristian hands. There are plenty of religious men and women who can play and sing, and if a higher artistic skill is found in irreligious persons, the lack is made up by expression and sympathy and devotional influence.

Taking it for granted, however, that the choir is composed of persons who respect the house of God and mean to aid in its worship, there is still much room for greater care on their part as to things they ought to do and not to do for the best fulfilment of their best intentions. First of all, they should recognize that their function is subordinate; they are to follow the directions given them, not themselves to direct. It was only a somewhat extreme expression of a not uncommon spirit when a certain country choir handed to the "supply" for the day a list of the hymns they had chosen, and asked him please to make the sermons appropriate! Self-effacement is one of the chief rules of good manners for every body; for choirs it is of supreme importance. Having the honest purpose to do the most they can for the service, and attract attention to themselves the least they can, the members of a choir will observe decorum and reverence in their behavior. There will be no rustling of leaves in prayer time; the consulting about tunes, the marking of places, the assigning of parts will be done in advance. Whispering, giggling, napping, reading and other similar abominations will not be tolerated in a choir who respect themselves and have a right idea of what they are for.

As to the singing itself, we may perhaps suggest that it is highly proper to sing the words so that they can be understood. Happily this is coming to be considered essential to artistic excellence; certainly it is indispensable for the real enjoyment and profit of the congregation. Time should not be consumed with long organ preludes and interludes. The most valuable work a choir can do is to train and lead the people in singing. Sometimes, instead of trying to do this, they seem to regard any participation by the people as an annoyance. A choir master said once to his pastor in reply to some modest expression of preference about the musical part of the service: "Oh, if you want to do that we might as well give up and have congregational singing." It would generally be better if they did. A well-selected introductory chant or anthem, and another of helpfully devotional character before the sermon, may very suitably be given by the choir alone, but in the rest of the music, so far from being jealous of congregational singing, they should do all in their power to encourage it.

Where there is responsive reading, the choir, whether placed at the front or at the back of the house, can do a vast deal to make it successful. We know one model choir in this city who lead in the responsive reading with the happiest effect. We know many more who ignore it entirely. The same ideal choir have the excelent custom of singing beautifully some simple piece while the people are leaving the church This has the advantage of checking the burst of talk that often smites the still air as the solemn benediction ceases. Harmony, in the fullest meaning of the word, should be the aim of every choir. When it is, and when the pulpit and the pew do their part, the church atmosphere will calm and gladden and uplift the souls of all who enter it.—N. Y. Examiner.

SUBJECT FOR CONVERSATION.

What the Heart Believes Let the Lips Utter.

Talking seems to be one of the things that many people do not consider themselves responsible for. But if our Saviour was right when He said that "every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment," it certainly behooves us all to see that at least our words are not idle words. How often do we meet people whose principal theme of conversation is themselves! It is what "I have seen," or what "I have done," continually. If you have seen any thing wonderful, they match your story with something far more wonderful. If you have had a narrow escape, they were once in a worse predicament. You can not excel them in any thing, even in misfortunes. Their children are brighter than other children, their physician the most skillful, and their wife the best housekeeper in town. The fact is they have fallen into the unfortunate habit of thinking more highly of themselves than they ought to think. Now it matters not how good or clever any one may be, he can not afford to praise himself. It is disagreeable to his friends, it injures his influence, and it is a fault for which there is no excuse whatever. The Christian, then, should cultivate the spirit of modesty in all his conversations.

And to modesty let us add kindness. The Gospel forbids our entertaining ill-will towards any one, even our enemies; much more does it forbid our expressing that ill-will in words. But there is a great deal of conversation among Christians which, though it may not be prompted by ill-will, is yet just as damaging as if it were. How easy it is for some to believe evil of others! How ready they are to repeat any bit of scandal! If we must speak of another's fault, let us do it as if he were our own brother or sister, remembering the words of Paul—"Charity envieth not, . . . thinketh no evil, rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth."

Still another quality of conversation that becometh the Christian is sincerity. It is no credit to a man to be skilful in concealing his opinions, in making people believe what is not true. Let us rather cultivate frankness, openness of heart, which is not afraid to have any one look through you, for the simple reason that you are what you appear to be. None of the little deceptions which the world practices are allowable to the Christian. He is to give no invitations that are not sincere, to bestow no praise that is not genuine. He will aim to be like Nathanael, a man "without guile." Closely allied to sincerity in statement of fact is sincerity in expression of opinion. How many there are who sanction evil by a culpable silence! How many abuses are tolerated in every community which would be crushed by the weight of public opinion if you could only get an expression of opinion! And why is it not as much one's duty to express an opinion in favor of right as it is to have one? Henceforth let our lips declare what our hearts believe. David's two prayers are models for all Christians. The one shows how anxious he was to serve God by his conversation—"Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in Thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my Redeemer." The other hints at the dangers of evil speech and the need of divine grace to restrain one—"Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth; keep the door of my lips." If we would begin each day with these two prayers, we should surely honor God with our lips, and men would bless us for our golden words fitly spoken.

And to go one step further, ought not Christians to talk more than they do about distinctively religious topics? How seldom does one hear the subject broached in public places like a drawing-room or at a dinner party, even when a majority of the persons present are professing Christians! The conversation grows heavy, drags and dies for want of a subject, but no one ventures to suggest a religious topic. If he does, it seems to throw a restraint over the company and is quickly dropped. On the other hand, how refreshing it is to meet one who is evidently in the condition of Peter and John, who said: "We can not but speak the things which we have seen and heard." How much might be accomplished by each of us if our hearts were warm and glowing with love to Christ, and our minds on the alert to improve every opportunity that God sets before us.—Rev. W. H. Pope, in The Golden Rule.

WISE SAYINGS.

—Faith is putting your hand in God's hand.—Standard.

—A really good man never wants to climb a tree to be looked at.—Ram's Horn.

—We should take a hopeful view of life; it is good for us, and it enables us to work with vigor and efficiency.—United Presbyterian.

—The dark cloud of trouble may hover over us, but the cross of Christ will be the lightning-rod that will take the bolt out of it.—Talmage, in N. Y. Observer.

—Some one has said that the habit of Christian people is to think of God as a "bundle of attributes" rather than as a living and loving Father. Do we not all need to study more what is meant when we say "Our Father?"—Christian Inquirer.

—It is often true of human characters that they are reduced in our estimate upon an intimate acquaintance with them. It is not so with Christ. The more we know of Him the more sacred, wonderful, peculiar, lovely, attractive and divine He appears. He becomes more precious to the heart as acquaintance and experience more and more disclose Him to the eye of faith. Such is Christian experience on earth, and doubtless such it will be in Heaven.—N. Y. Independent.

—The expression is often heard: "I am not a church member; if I was I would do differently." That is no excuse. God does not limit His commands to church members, but "to all men everywhere," to respect and serve Him. The command "thou oughtest," rests upon every soul. It is the great duty of non-church members and church membership to do their whole duty to God and man; and the fact that a man is not a church member, so far from palliating a life of sin, only adds one more to the catalogue of offenses. "I was not a church member" will be a sorry plea to make to the Supreme Judge on the day of final account.—Christian at Work.

I am glad to testify that I used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic with the best success for sleeplessness, and believe that it is really a great relief for suffering humanity.

REV. FRANK, Pastor.

Pleased and Grateful.

New York City, May, 1890.
I express my entire satisfaction with Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son, who is now nineteen years of age, had been afflicted with epileptic fits since he was six years of age. I tried everything that money could purchase, but no permanent relief was effected, now I can cheerfully recommend, and deem it my duty to advise sufferers to at least try Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son has not had any symptoms of the disease since he used the remedy. I am therefore pleased and grateful.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

A BRUTAL MURDER

Camden, N. J., Police Have Another Mystery to Solve.

HORRIBLE WORK OF A FIEND.

Mrs. Flemming's Dead Body Found on a Railroad Track.

It Was at First Supposed She Had Been Killed by a Train—An Examination Indicated Foul Play—Her Skull Crushed in and Many Bruises on Her Body—No Clue to the Murderer.

CAMDEN, N. J., Dec. 15.—The police have another murder mystery to solve. Developments of the past few hours show beyond a doubt that Mrs. Bridget Flemming, whose body was found on the railroad track at South Camden, was brutally murdered. She had been assaulted.

Mrs. Flemming, who resided at No. 680 Mount Vernon street, was last seen alive late Friday night, while she was on her way to her home. It is supposed that as she was crossing the track of the West Jersey Railroad, near Seventh street, she was attacked by her assailant, and that he killed her to prevent his identity from becoming known, and placed her body on the railroad track so that it would be struck by a train.

The body was found lying across the rails in such a position as to indicate that it had been placed there. The scene of the tragedy was not far from the South Camden station.

The woman's skull was crushed in and there were many bruises on her body. It was at first supposed that she had been killed by a train, but an examination of the body indicated foul play. The woman's skull has the appearance of having been crushed in with a blunt instrument, probably a stone.

The police have been at work on the case all day, but so far as known they have no clue to the murderer.

DRIVEN TO DEATH.

Sad Story of the Suicide of a Young School Teacher.

HOPESVILLE, Pa., Dec. 15.—Shortly after 9 a. m. the sharp report of a pistol rang out from what is known as "Thompson's Bend," a block of tenement houses on Clark street. Mrs. Wolf, who occupies the center house in the row, appeared at an open window and implored the neighbors to come quick. Reaching her apartments Mrs. Wolf was found kneeling over the lifeless body of her daughter Emma, who had just committed suicide by shooting herself through the head. A six-shooter lay by her side. The bullet entered just over the right temple.

The circumscances of her tragic death are sad, and due directly to her father's intemperance and abuse. George Wolf is a prominent shoe dealer. Emma was his eldest daughter. Mrs. Wolf told the following story of the trouble that led to her suicide: "My husband is a slave to drink. During the past week he was drinking heavily and was very abusive. He went away about 8 o'clock and returned shortly after that hour in the morning. Emma sat down to breakfast as he entered. He was unusually ugly and angry. Emma wore a gold watch and chain, a present from a young man she was to marry about Christmas. Without saying a word, he seized the watch and chain, and dashed them against the stove. While I was remonstrating with him for this, Emma quietly left the table and went up stairs. Twenty minutes later we heard the fatal shot."

Emma Wolf was in her 24th year. Four years ago she was elected principal teacher in the public schools.

People Mowed Down by Hundreds.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 15.—Among the arrivals on the steamer San Juan was Joseph McMullin, a newspaper man from New York. The republic of Guatemala, he said, was besieged by smallpox. He says that in sewen weeks there were 1,200 deaths throughout the country, and the death rate at last accounts was on the increase. Few sanitary precautions were taken when the disease first appeared, and the result was that the people were being mowed down by hundreds. The hospitals are crowded and the physicians are not numerous enough to attend to all the cases.

Another Tascott Arrested.

PORT HURON, Mich., Dec. 15.—The police have arrested a young man who gave the name of John Bradley. The officers think they have caught Tascott, the murderer of Millionaire Banker Snell of Chicago. He agrees with the description, including a scar on the hip and elbow. The Chicago officials have been notified.

Mrs. Lippincott in Jail Again.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Dec. 15.—Mrs. Julia C. Lippincott, indicted on one charge of forgery in this city, was brought from Camden by Sergeant Jesse Leeds, of the police force, and being unable to furhish bail she was taken to the May's Landing jail, where she was incarcerated, awaiting trial.

Railway Men Will Strike Next Sunday.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—The Scotch railway men have decided to go on strike next Sunday for shorter hours. The prospect is that the railways will be tied up at the very time when such an event will be most exasperating to the public, as the Christmas week travel will be interfered with.

Both Legs Cut Off.

SCRANTON, Pa., Dec. 15.—Michael McCormick, in attempting to board a moving train here, fell between the cars and had both legs cut off. He will probably die. He is a son of ex-Chief of Police McCormick, of Dunmore, and is but 22 years old.

KNIGHTS STRIKE BACK.

They Issue a Secret Circular, Attacking the New York Central Road.

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 15.—The Knights of Labor have sent out a secret circular to the different local and district assemblies throughout the State. It is aimed principally at the New York Central Railroad Company, which defeated Mr. Powderly's organization in the recent strike. The circular calls upon every branch of the order in New York to select delegates to attend a convention, which will be held in Pythian Hall, Albany, on January 13.

It tells those to whom it is addressed that the object of the convention will be the advancement of the Knights of Labor, "political and otherwise." It then goes on to inform them that the convention will take such steps as may be necessary to secure the passage of a number of labor bills in which the organization is interested.

The first thing mentioned is an amendement to the weekly payment law. The Knights want the Legislature to amend it so that it will apply to every steam, cable, electric or horse railroad in the State.

Then the Legislature will be asked to enact a law which will forbid corporations hiring Pinkerton men or armed bodies of men during strikes. This is aimed at the New York Central Railroad. The paragraph that follows says that the organization will take steps to secure a law which will compel that corporation to return to the State "the property which it holds illegally." What property the Knights refer to is not mentioned.

RAILROAD PRESIDENTS MEET.

Considering the Formation of a Gigantic Association to Control Rates.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—The presidents of the railroads west of Chicago met at the house of Banker J. Pierpont Morgan this morning for the purpose of considering the formation of a gigantic association to control railroad rates and divide up competitive business.

This meeting has raised different emotions in different minds. Western grangers see in it nothing more nor less than the construction of an alliance to destroy them by means of enormous tariffs on their produce. Stockholders look on it hopefully as a step in the direction of increasing the value of railway property and the price of whatever stocks they possess. Freight managers who have been able to build themselves brownstone houses out of the manipulation of rates are not likely to regard the conference with favor.

Banker Morgan declares that the proceedings to-day will be in the nature of a preliminary discussion.

MAY RESUME OPERATIONS.

The Locked-Out Threadmakers Hopeful of a Settlement.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 15.—The strike and lockout at the Newark and Kearny mills of the Clark Thread Company may soon be settled.

The Clarks called in a dozen carders and framers who have large families and gave them light work in clearing up the rooms. The employes are much pleased over the prospect of an early resumption of work at the mills.

Anthony Moore, Secretary of the National Association of Mule Spinners, has had two formal conferences with the Clarks, which lasted each time for half an hour.

Treasurer Clark will consider the grievances of the spinners this afternoon and afterwards will confer with their representatives. Mr. Moore says that if half of the spinners' complaints are true they have just cause for their action and that they would be supported by the National Association during the strike, which he had no doubt would be ended soon.

The Lymph in Demand.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—All the hospitals in this city now have a large number of patients who are being treated with the lymph, but scientific results cannot be expected sooner than three to four months. In none of the hospitals so far has there been any unfavorable developments resulting from the experiments. The hospital superintendents say that they are overrun with applications by consumptives. Many are from New York and vicinity, and letters are pouring in from Western States.

Editor Fleming Dying.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 15.—Hon. John Fleming, a well know editor, with whom Congressman Phelan had the celebrated controversy, which ended by his sending a challenge to the editor to fight a duel, is lying very ill at his hotel in this city, with poor chances of recovery.

Stabbed to Death.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 15.—James Johnson, a colored barber, was stabbed to death by John Robert Washington in a saloon at the corner of Mulberry street and Larew alley. The men were throwing dice and the murder was the result of a fuss over the game.

Report of a Fatal Wreck.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Dec. 15.—A wreck is reported on the Georgia road. It is said that four persons were killed and many injured.

WASHINGTON TOPICS

Work for the Senate and House This Week.

REPUBLICAN CAUCUS TO-NIGHT.

Two Important Propositions to be Discussed and Probably Decided.

A Plan to Lay the Elections Bill Aside and Take Up Financial Measures—The Apportionment Question to be Settled in the House—Dr. Billings Recommended for Surgeon-General.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—The course of the Senate this week will be mapped out at the caucus of Republican Senators to be held to-night.

At present, the order of business agreed upon is for the Senate to meet at 10 o'clock each morning, to begin the consideration of the Federal Election bill at 11 o'clock, and to remain in discussion of this measure until the hour of adjournment, which will be probably 5 or 6 o'clock. This is the programme to-day, but the caucus to be held to-night will perhaps alter this programme entirely.

There are two propositions before the caucus. One is to change the rules of the Senate in order to establish a method of closing debate so as to bring the Elections bill to a vote. The other is to lay aside the Elections bill for the purpose of taking up financial measures.

A committee appointed by the caucus is considering financial measures with a view of reporting on the advisability of laying aside the Elections bill temporarily during the week. It is not likely that this committee will be able to agree upon anything by the time the caucus meets, although it is possible that a proposition will be laid before the caucus, coming from the President, to pass immediately the bill to purchase the 13,000,000 ounces of surplus silver now on the market. This measure or some other financial measure is likely to displace the Elections bill during the week. If the Elections bill be laid aside temporarily, the general belief is that it will not come up again. There seems to be little hope of its passage at this time.

BILLS IN THE HOUSE.

The Apportionment Question Will Probably be Settled This Week.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—The Apportionment question will probably be settled, so far as the House is concerned, this week. Mr. Dunnell, the chairman of the Census Committee, has been assured by the Committee on Rules that he will be given time for the consideration of the Frank bill and unless something unforseen should happen he will call it up before Saturday. There is but little disposition among the Democrats to make a fight against the measure.

The Composite Subsidy bill adopted by the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries is also on the programme for this week and an effort will be made by its supporters to have two days set apart for its consideration. The Committee on Rules, however, may grant one day only.

After to-day the week will be consumed in discussing the Army Appropriation bill, the bill for the retirement of national bank circulation, aimed to relieve the financial situation, and probably the District of Columbia Appropriation bill.

Billings May Become Surgeon-General.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—The President is considering the appointment of Dr. John S. Billings as successor to the late Surgeon-General Baxter. Dr. Billings is indorsed by Senators Hawley, Aldrich, Spooner and other members of both houses of Congress. The President received from Oliver Wendell Holmes a very strong letter advocating the nomination of Dr. Billings.

The Lymph in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Dr. Koch's lymph cure is now being tried on five patients in various stages of pulmonary tuberculosis at Garfield Hospital in this city. The first inoculation was made several days ago, and the results are watched with great interest by the hospital physicians and the doctors of the city. So far in none of the cases has the patient grown worse under treatment.

Reckless Fighting Among Themselves.

RAPID CITY, S. D., Dec. 15.—A soldier from Captain Well's camp reports that the Indians in the Bad Lands have begun fighting among themselves. The news was brought in by scouts. The battle took place in Grass Basin. Two Strikes and his followers and Short Bull and his followers engaged in a very lively scrimmage. Each leader is bound that his supremacy over the whole band shall be acknowledged.

Gen. Miles Starts for the Front.

CHICAGO, Dec. 14.—Gen. Nelson A. Miles, accompanied by Capt. Marion P. Maus and the general's private secretary, left here for St. Paul last night. Just before leaving the general said he should remain at St. Paul a cotiple of days and go thence to the Northwestern Indian country.

The Lutheran Clergymen Discuss Mrs. Wuchter's Case.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Dec. 15.—Controversies between physicians, clergymen and lawyers in this part of Pennsylvania regarding Mrs. Wuchter, the "involuntary faster," are going on here. The Lutheran clergymen of this section met in a body and at their meeting discussed the case. The conference has a large membership, and a "charm" used by a witch doctor was exhibited by Mrs. Wuchter's pastor. It was a small bag containing a little book, on whose pages were scribbled forward and backward various German sentences, calling upon the evil spirits to leave the woman and abjuring them to cease their persecutions. There were meaningless acrostics in bad Latin and other scribblings.

The case is assuming a more interesting phase daily. Dr. C. W. Sieger is the attending physician. When seen by a reporter Mrs. Wuchter was resting quietly and breathed with considerable difficulty. She lay on her bed apparently lifeless until her husband brought her water mixed with vinegar. When the mixture touched her lips she went into the most violent convulsions, which lasted fully four minutes, during which she appeared to endure excruciating pain. After her convulsions she spoke to the correspondent in English as well as in Pennsylvania Dutch, and said that during her convulsions she sees heaven. Its beauty, she said, it was impossible to describe. During the last six weeks she seems to be getting stronger, but cannot account for it, as she asserts that not a morsel of food nor ten drops of liquid have been swallowed during 245 days. She furthermore says that were it only possible she would eat and drink.

A DEFAULTER SUICIDES.

His Employer Caught Him Drinking Champagne and Investigated.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 15.—One of the firm of P. A. Gross & Co., wholesale milliners, while dining at a restaurant Saturday night last, was surprised to see their bookkeeper, Emil Wulff, drinking champagne at one of the tables.

As Wulff's salary did not warrant such luxuries, an investigation of his accounts was begun yesterday morning, and soon after a shortage of $50 was discovered. Wulff said he could easily explain the discrepancy and went out to hunt up one of the customers, but never returned.

Further investigation revealed a shortage of $3,000. Nothing more was heard of Wulff until 6 a. m., when he was found dead in an outhouse at his boardinghouse with a bullet in his right temple and the revolver clenched in his hand.

A Ship Riveter's Good Luck.

CHESTER, Pa., Dec. 15.—Moses H. Devey, a riveter in Roach's shipyard, is one of three heirs to $5,000,000. Recently he received a letter from the Probate Court of England, stating that there was an unsettled estate in Staffordshire, and that they would like him to forward such evidence as to his parentage that he possessed. The evidence was sent and Mr. Devey received word last week from the court officers, stating that his claim had been received, and also giving assurances that the prospect of his receiving the money was very good.

The Westinghouse Deal.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 15.—The main topic in financial circles here is the attitude of the local banks toward the Westinghouse Electric Company. It is again hinted that if the banks loan the half million asked, some very important changes in the electric company management must be made. It was reported that General Manager Byellesby had tendered his resignation. This is denied. A conference on the deal will be held this afternoon.

The Ice Harvest Begun.

CATSKILL, N. Y., Dec. 15.—Several of the smaller ice houses in this district have been filled with prime pure-water ice from 8 to 13 inches in thickness. There is general activity on all sides, the larger houses being busily engaged staking off their ice fields for the harvesting, which will be general this week. Labor appears to be plentiful and wages, it is expected, will not exceed, even if they average, those of last season.

Committed Suicide at Sea.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—The steamship Trave has arrived after a very rough passage from Bremen. Among her second cabin passengers was Mrs. Ida Oelering, aged 27, whose husband lives at either Chicago or Green Bay, Wisconsin. On December 12 the woman was missed. It is supposed that she committed suicide by jumping overboard.

KILLED BY APACHES.

Two White Men Shot by a Band in the Guadaloupe Mountains.

TOMBSTONE, A. T., Dec. 15.—Information has just been received here that two white men, Jack Bridges and Burk Robinson, were killed by Apaches in the Guadaloupe Mountains. Bridges discovered some freshly killed meat and went to Hall's ranch to notify the men there. Then, in company with Robinson and another man they went to the place where the meat was found to investigate the matter. They had just arrived at the spot when they were fired upon by the Indians. They returned the fire and attempted to escape, but were surrounded and two of them soon fell. The other man escaped after being grazed by a bullet, which made a slight scalp wound, and reported the result.

A courier was sent to this city for help. Sheriff Slaughter telegraphed to Fort Huachua for government assistance and made preparations for immediate departure. The fight took place in the Guadaloupe Mountains, east of the San Bernandino ranch, near the Mexican line. Five Indians were seen, but it is impossible to know how many were present, but the fact that the party was surrounded shows that there were more than five there.

BLACKTHORNS USED

The Tipperary Campaign Opens With a Fight.

PARNELL GROWS VERY VIOLENT

He Denounces the Seceding Nationalist Members as Guttersnipes.

Police Had to Interfere to Prevent Trouble—Clergymen Preach Against the Irish Leader—Parisian Bankers Hold on to the Nationalist Funds—McCarthyites Say They are Satisfied.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—The wave of reaction against Mr. Parnell is becoming more pronounced. The influence of the priests is rapidly making itself felt. In the churches everywhere, but especially in Kilkenny, the clergy urged openly upon their hearers the duty of following the advice of the bishops, and striking a blow at immorality in high places by voting against Parnell.

The Bishop of Cloyne has requested the members of the League in his diocese to withdraw from the present organization, controlled by Mr. Parnell, and to form a reorganized League, free from alliance with the discredited leader. The East and South Down branches of the League has stopped remitting to the League treasury in Dublin until the right to dispose of the general fund is made more clear.

Lively Times at Tipperary.

The scenes at the Tipperary meeting yesterday are regarded as a prelude to a campaign of violence that may reach a degree little short of civil war before the question at issue is finally decided by the Irish people. A gang of 40 roughs captured the meeting temporarily, and carried everything for Parnell. But the contingents of country people from a radius or 20 miles around came in, and the situation was speedily changed. After a series of lively scrimmages, the anti-Parnellites got control of the meeting, and the most violent of the partisans of Mr. Parnell were expelled. The latter had come to the spot armed with heavy blackthorns, and there is no doubt that they had premeditated violence.

Such events go far to sustain Davitt's assertion that Parnell's following is made up of the riff-raff of the cities, or as he puts it, the "residium."

Mr. Healy's statement to the effect that he and Biggar at one time contemplated strangling the Parnell-O'Shea connection was the subject of severe animadversion by John O'Connor, one of Parnell's supporters, who said to a correspondent that Biggar especially had no right to reflect upon any private affairs of Parnell, having been himself the paramour of a woman by whom he had a child, to which child and mother he bequeathed nearly all his property, and none to the National cause. Mr. O'Connor said that these facts did not derogate from Mr. Biggar's services to his country, and he did not believe that Biggar had ever joined in any reflection upon Parnell.

The salaried members of Parliament opposed to Mr. Parnell are already in serious pecuniary embarrassment. It is reported that two of them have applied to and received temporary assistance from Mr. Gladstone.

William Redmond scouts the reports that Mr. Parnell is mentally unbalanced. "The same has been said," he remarked, "of Cæsar, Napoleon and every great man in the critical moments of history, when their extraordinary efforts were too great for the comprehension of ordinary critics."

HEALY'S HARSH WORDS.

He Refers to the O'Shea Case Several Times in His Speech.

KILKENNY, Dec. 15.—In his speech here Mr. Healy said: "Parnell wanted to make men like Dillon, O'Brien and Sexton a holocaust on the altar of his lusts. He boasted that he would expel the 53 Justinians (McCarthyites), but he had undertaken a big contract."

Mr. Healy then accused Mr. Parnell of prostituting the fund for evicted tenants to employ hireling boys to break his opponents' skulls.

Parnell was showing wonderful zeal and activity now, but where had he been the last five years? [Laughter.]

A voice—"With Kitty." [Laughter.]

Mr. Healy declared that Parnell's statement that he would have retired had Mr. Gladstone asked him earlier, was an absolute lie. Mr. Gladstone, he said, could not find Parnell. Me applied to Mr. McCarthy, who told Parnell, though the latter denied it. Mr. Healy challenged Redmond and Kelly to produce Parnell's letter declaring his innocence of the O'Shea charge.

Trouble Over the Funds.

DUBLIN, Dec. 15.—Both sides in the Irish fight are anxiously awaiting the decision of the French courts as to the right of Mr. Parnell to draw the funds, some $110,000, deposited with the Munroes, the Parisian bankers. The funds are liable to be locked up until a legal action decides the right of the several parties.

Succi Feels Good.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—Succi entered on his fortieth day at 8:10 last night. A big smile illuminated his face, and he said: "Me doa forty-five day; yes, fifta day." He looked well, and his medical examination showed him to be in good condition.

Italians Suspects Reindicted.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 15.—The new Grand Jury reindicted all the Italians under arrest, charged with complicity in the murder of Chief of Police Hennessy.

An Insurance Agent Disappears.

BRAMPTON, Ont., Dec. 15.—W. D. Hunter, insurance agent, has disappeared. His cash is short $3,000.

EXCITING MURDER TRIAL.

The Most Famous Criminal Lawyers in Paris Engaged in the Eyraud Case.

PARIS, Dec. 15.—The trial of Michael Eyraud and Gabrille Bompard for the murder of Toussaint Augustin Gouffe, which is to begin in this city to-morrow, promises to be one of the most sensational causes celebres ever tried in France.

Scarcely an element of the grotesque, the horrible or the romantic is lacking in the story of this hideous crime, and, aside from the tragedy itself, the scientific world takes eager interest in the defence put forth by the woman that she had been hypnotized by the strangler and acted under the influence of his superior will when she held the arms of her lover during the savage struggle that ended in his death.

It is not yet certain that the court will permit this plea to be raised publicly, and indeed three medical experts have prepared a report affirming that while her mental condition was such as to render her liable to hypnotic influence, she was responsible for her actions. On the other hand, a physician of Nancy, who examined Gabrille in prison, considers that she was an irresponsible agent at the time of the murder, entirely under the control of Eyraud.

There are nearly 50 witnesses to be examined, one of the most important of them being the dealer who sold the trunk in which Gouffe's body was carted away. Gabrielle's chief witness is M. Garanger, for whom she left Eyraud in America. His evidence will prove how Gabrielle came to give herself up to the police, and upon it will depend the finding in her favor, if such a result occurs. The most famous criminal lawyers in Paris are engaged in the case. The Public Prosecutor is Quesnay de Beaupepaire. Eyraud will be defended by Maitre Decori, and Gabrielle by Maitre Henri Robert. Neither of the two prisoners is without friends.

Eyraud has passed his time in prison in writing a biography of himself. There is a great demand for admission to the court, not only from all Paris, but nearly all the newspaper reporters and artists and a large number of the medical profession of England and the Continent. A thousand francs have been offered for a single ticket.

WEALTHY WOMEN FIGHT.

Fierce Encounter in a Barn at Egg Harbor, N. J.

EGG HARBOR CITY, N. J., Dec. 15.—This place has been greatly excited by a fist fight in the heart of the city between two prominent women, one being the wife of Councilman William Heitz and the other Mrs. Charles Christ, who is wealthy and resides on Philadelphia avenue.

Both women were arrested and given trial before Justice of the Peace Breeder. The woman appeared before the justice much scratched up. Many witnesses were called and the excitement became so great between the friends of the two women in the justice's chamber that another encounter was imminent.

After hearing the evidence the justice held the women in $100 each to keep the peace for six months, which was furnished.

The fight occurred in Mr. Christ's stable. For many years Mrs. Christ has not lived with her husband, on account of his drinking habits. They are a wealthy couple and lived in luxury. Mr. Christ has a fast horse, which he keeps in a stable back of his wife's residence. He passes most of his time at Heitz's Hotel, and sent Mrs. Heitz to his barn to feed his horse.

While doing so, Mrs. Heitz was surprised in the barn by Mrs. Christ, who angrily inquired:

"What are you doing in here?"

Mrs. Heitz replied:

"None of your business."

Words soon came to blows, Mrs. Heitz giving Mrs. Christ a stinging one on the cheek, and in return receiving a hot one on the nose. The women clinched and fought desperately for some minutes, pulling each other's hair and scratching each other's face and eyes. Meanwhile they exchanged a torrent of abuse.

They finally attracted the attention of passers-by and were separated. This was done with difficulty.

PARNELL QUITE VIOLENT.

He Refers to the Seceders as Miserable Guttersnipes.

KILKENNY, Dec. 15.—Mr. Parnell and a party of his adherents went from here to Tullyrone in a brake and attended a meeting there. Mr. Parnell made a speech which was a brief repetition of his former addresses at other points. The audience was with him, and the names of Healy and Hennessy were greeted with profane derision.

Mr. Parnell afterward addressed a meeting at Freshford. He was quite violent, and referred to the seceders as miserable guttersnipes, who had been dragged from obscurity by himself.

He said that after winning the contest at Kilkenny he would traverse Ireland and ask the support of the people. At this point there was great confusion, the opponents of Parnell shouting, "To hell with adulterers," and indulging in other offensive cries. The police intervened and prevented further trouble.

The Big Fire in Providence.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 15.—Thousands of persons flocked around the scene of Saturday's half million dollar fire. This afternoon the Westminster street wall and parts of the other sides which remain will be blown up with dynamite. Fireman Mowry and the others who were injured by falling walls are doing nicely at the Rhode Island Hospital. The J. W. Barnaby Corporation hired new quarters and will open next Saturday. Requisitions have been made upon the branch houses in Boston, New Haven and other cities to provide goods for doing this.

McCarthyites Satisfied.

KILKENNY, Dec. 15.—The McCarthyites are well satisfied with the progress of their campaign in Kilkenny. They have 15 Members of Parliament addressing the electors to-day.

ALL FELL IN A HOLE.

Big Excitement Over a Little Fire.

The residence of Wilson Fiske, on Woodland avenue, near Broadway, was damaged by fire to the extent of probably $100, Saturday evening. The house was unoccupied and was undergoing reconstruction for Mr. Fiske's occupancy. All day Saturday the workmen had a hot fire blazing on the brick hearth in the kitchen, to dry the new plastering. The flue must have been defective, and sparks must have crept through the brick-work to the wooden clapboards, for an hour after the workmen left, when it was rapidly growing dark, Mrs. Potts, a neighbor, saw flames issuing through the boards and enwrapping the wood-work of the rear porch. Quite a blaze was in progress when the alarm was given, but buckets of water judiciously applied put an end to the incipient conflagration. The services of the fire engines were not required, though half a mile of hose was stretched to be used if necessary. The hook and ladder men tore down the ceiling in the kitchen, and chopped away the wood in other suspected places, to be certain that the fire was all out; and everybody fell off the back steps of the house, in the darkness, into a deep hole in the ground, and, after groaning awhile from the resultant aches, succeeded in limping homeward. The fire occurred at what housewives consider an unfortunate hour, for the men who ran to see the blaze kept the table waiting, and many dinners were spoiled. The loss of the fire is covered by insurance.

Governor Noble and His Wife and Daughter. All Dead Within a Few Weeks.

Less than two months ago, there was published exclusively in THE PRESS an account of the death of ex-Governor of Wisconsin, Butler G. Noble. He died at his home in Williamsburgh, from the effects of a fall down the basement steps. He left behind at that home a wife, a daughter and the latter's husband, Frank M. Underhill, son of Samuel B. Underhill, of East Fifth street, this city.

Yesterday morning this wife and daughter both died suddenly of pneumonia. Mrs. Noble was 65 years of age, and Mrs. Underhill was 30. The latter had written but a few days ago to her husband's relatives in this city, inviting them all to spend Christmas with her. The funeral services of both will be held at Christ church, Bedford near Division avenues, Brooklyn, to-morrow afternoon at one o'clock.

Saved from a Frightful Death.

The lives of at least a score of people were saved Saturday night by the presence of mind of Rowland Smith, night baggage man at the North avenue station. Forty or more passengers were crossing the track to board a late train for New York just as a Washington express came rushing towards them. No whistle or other alarm was sounded, and the people were unaware of their peril, but Mr. Smith, at the baggage car of the train from Somerville, saw the express approaching, and at the risk of his own life ran along the track and with violent shouting and in some cases using physical force, drove the people beyond the danger-point just as the train whizzed by.

Plainfield against Elizabeth.

The following is the Crescent League team that under Captain Van Emburgh will bowl against the Champion Elizabeths this city, to-morrow evening:

HID HER LOVER IN A CLOSET.

But Her Husband, Unexpectedly Home from Church, Yanked Him Out, and Drove the Faithless Wife Away.

A sensational story of domestic faithlessness and scandal, involving a Plainfield man who is connected with prominent families, comes from Somerville, where a once-happy home has been visited with disruption, and is threatened with divorce, because of a wife's duplicity.

The injured husband in the case is a Somerville merchant who attends church Sunday evenings because of a professional position he holds in the musical department of the services. His wife never would accompany him to the Sunday evening meetings, always giving some excuse which on careful analysis seemed insufficient to the suspicious husband.

One Sunday night, two or three weeks ago, the husband slipped out of church as soon as the opening hymns had been sung and went quietly homeward. The gleam of a light in his wife's apartment upstairs came to him from the curtained windows. The doors downstairs were all locked, and the windows were fastened, so he rang the bell. His wife, bewitchingly attired in a new gown of rich material, which she stammered was a gift from "a friend," and which he had never before seen, answered the ring. She was greatly surprised to see him.

"I thought 'twas some neighbor's child,"—she said—"come on a brief errand."

The husband told her he had returned for something which he had forgotten, and which was upstairs. She followed him tremblingly, and paled perceptibly when he went direct to the clothes closet of her bedroom and tried to open the door.

"It's locked,"—she said—"and I've lost the key."

To burst open the door was but the work of a moment, and the husband dragged forth from his place of concealment a well known Plainfielder. The scene that followed can be as well imagined as described.

The upshot of the affair is that the husband refuses to permit the wife longer to remain beneath his roof, and she has taken refuge at her father's home. A petition for divorce, it is said, is being prepared, and further developments may soon be expected. Out of regard to the families involved THE PRESS for the present withholds the names of the guilty parties.

The neighbors of the injured husband say that they long knew of the Plainfield man's secret visits to his home. His wife first met her paramour at a place of public entertainment, three or four years ago, and the present denouement is said to have been developing ever since.

A PLAINFIELD DOG THAT CANNOT BARK

Its Master Dosed It for Consumption, and Its Voice Vanished with Its Cough.

Robert C. Dingee, of East Fifth street, owns a dog which is so strangely afflicted that a correspondent of The Tribune has succeeded in getting the animal's story into print. The dog has lost entirely the use of its voice, and is so dumb that for barking and other obstreperous purposes he might just as well be an oyster. A big savage-looking Newfoundland, the Tribune man describes the brute. It is chained to a kennel at the side of the house. Tramps think twice before attempting to enter by the gate, and on second thought generally decide to call elsewhere for cold victuals. Although it cannot bark or growl Mr. Dingee's pet is a first-class watcher, and by showing two rows of gleaming teeth, and by excited rushing to the length of its chain limits, generally frighten intruders away.

The handsome brute has not always been dumb. Until a few years ago it howled its midnight answer to far-away dogs in stentorian tones of no mean calibre. But one unusually hard Winter it caught a severe cold and nearly died. Dog doctors are an unknown luxury in Plainfield, and Mr. Dingee was at a loss to know how to treat his consumptive pet. He is a man of action; and one, too, of genius, in certain lines. He argued that what was good for a human cough must also necessarily be good for a canine cough. Accordingly he procured from a druggist the best bottle of rock and rye in the market and prescribed liberal doses of this, of quinine, and of other drugs, to the dog. The animal at once felt the soothing effects of the medicine, which, by the way, it was not loath to take, and rapidly recovered. As the cough left the animal so did its voice. This new complication was more than Mr. Dingee could master, and during the intervening years perhaps the only dumb dog in New Jersey has lived a not unhappy, though perhaps somewhat uncomfortable, life.

Mr. Dingee still lives in Plainfield and thinks a deal of his dog. When he comes home every night his pet welcomes him with a rattle of its chain, and on occasions of unusul joyfulness it indulges in a wheezing sound, which is no more like a dog's bark than is the noise made by escaping steam.

An Old Settler's Third Paralytic Stroke.

David Gardner, father of ex-Councilman Wm. E. Gardner, was stricken with paralysis, while seated at the breakfast table, yesterday morning, and is so completely helpless that he cannot even speak or move a muscle. He is one of Plainfield's oldest settlers, and is now in his seventy-ninth year. This is the third paralytic stroke he has suffered during his life. He lives on Somerset place with an unmarried daughter.

The New Year Will Bring a Fire-Alarm that Can be Heard.

The new fire-alarm gong is to be placed in position above the roof of the Plainfield electric light station this week. The work of constructing the new fire-alarm system is well under way. Wires are being strung, and the entire apparatus will be working by probably January 1.

Another Score of Converts.

Thousands Suffering from La Grippe.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 15.—This city is struggling with la grippe. Dr. L. F. Salomon, secretary of the board of health, estimates the number of people sick with the disease at from 20,000 to 30,000. Many business firms are seriously embarrassed by the absence of their employes.

Invested a Dollar and Realized a Million.

Brown and his friend Perkins were talking about investments.

"Once I invested $1,000 in real estate," said Perkins, "and doubled it in less than six months. That was the best investment I ever made. Pretty good, wasn't it?"

"I've done better than that," said Brown. "Two years ago I was told by all my friends that I was going into consumption, and I thought they were right about it. I had a dry, hacking cough, no appetite, my sleep came by fits and starts, and seemed to do me no good, and often there was a dull, heavy pain in my chest. I kept growing weaker and weaker, and at last night-sweats set in. I thought it was all up with me then. I had consulted two doctors and taken quarts of their medicine, and received no benefit from it. One day I happened to read something about Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and I made up my mind to give it a trial, but I didn't expect it would help me. I invested a dollar in a bottle of it, and it helped me from the first dose. It helped and it cured me, and when I compare my present good health with the miserable health of two years ago, I think I am safe in saying that my investment was a much better one than yours. You can't reckon health by any measure of dollars and cents; if you could I should say that I had realized at least a million from my $1.00 investment." The "Golden Medical Discovery" is guaranteed to benefit or cure in all diseases for which it is recommended or money paid for it will be refunded.

A MEMORABLE COMMUNION SABBATH.

Ninety-four New Members Admitted to One Church, the Largest Single Accession in Plainfield's History.

The largest number of communicants ever taken into one church at one time in the history of Plainfield were received into the fellowship of the Trinity Reformed church yesterday, when ninety-four new members were admitted—eight-six on confession of faith and eight by letter from other churches. Thirty-five of the converts were baptized by the pastor, the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, previous to the ceremony of welcoming the new comers into the Christian fold.

The spectacle was a most impressive one as the new members, nearly a hundred strong, stood before the pulpit and received the right hand of welcome. There were two rows of the people, extending from one side of the church to the other, besides a shorter row behind these. The gathering presented a grand sight to the eyes of the congregation, and the hearts of the pastor, his office-bearers, and his people generally, were truly thankful to God for this great ingathering of precious souls.

At the communion service of the morning the church was crowded, and many hundreds partook, with the new members, of the Holy Sacrament. In the evening Mr. Schenck reached a strong sermon especially to young converts, explaining their duties in a clear and powerful manner. His text was the sixth verse of the second chapter of Colossians—"As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him."

A Chance for Sewell Yet.

(From the Newark Journal.)

If by any possibility the election of the Democratic Senator in Somerset county could be invalidated and a Republican take his seat, the outlook for a Republican United States Senator in 1893 would be improved, granting that in the meantime no changes shall be made in the territorial representation in the Senate. The Democratic majority this Winter would be reduced to five, and the calculations for a Democratic Senate in 1892 and 1893 would have to be modified.

Notice of a contest for the seat of Senator-elect Keys of Somerset, on the ground of his ineligibility, has been served upon him by his defeated Republican opponent, Chas. A. Reed, of North Plainfield. Mr. Keys has said that he has n't voted outside of the State within the limit of four years fixed by the constitution, and his statement carries due weight. The Republican State Committee apparently think that it will do no harm to make a contest, and hope to develop something by an investigation. It is a desperate chance, but chance are everything in the game of politics.

The Gentlemen Were all Accompanied by Their Wives.

Through the zeal of the Rev. Dr. Reilly, pastor of All Saints' church, Fanwood, the attendance at the Sunday evening services has greatly increased. Dr. Reilly has adopted a novel feature. At each Sunday evening service he has arranged to have some layman address his congregation from the foot of the chancel steps. Last evening Mr. Sille, of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, addressed the congregation, and, although a young man of but 25 years, he held the attention of the church members and their friends for a half hour, and all expressed themselves as desiring his re-appearance at All Saints.

One remarkable feature, in the face of certain remarks made about Fanwood people, is the fact that the gentlemen last evening were all accompanied by their wives. Among the prominent residents present were Col. C. K. Moore, Abner P. Downer, R. P. Moore, and Assemblyman-elect George Kyte.

And the Rev. Mr. Richards Indorses Him.

Dr. Francis S. Patton, President of Princeton College, who preached at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church in this city yesterday, caused a sensation by a sermon delivered at Philadelphia, Thanksgiving Day, on the text, "Righteousness exalteth a nation." During his discourse he gave a glowing description of the splendid material resources and advantages possessed by our country. Reaching his climax, he paused an instant and then, lifting his hands said: "And yet, in spite of all this, we lift our hands and pray—McKinley, protect us!"

Mrs. Opdyke and Sister Charlotte Speak.

Mrs. G. F. Opdyke, of this city, and Sister Charlotte from the Florence Mission, New York, delivered addresses in Reform Hall, last evening, before a deeply interested audience. The thrilling accounts given of human degradation and misery, caused principally by intoxicating liquor, were heart rending, and the fervent appeals made for individual labor and greater zeal in the Master's work betokened the true Christian spirit.

Boys, Attention!

The class in penmanship taught by Ezra Loomis, will meet at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-night. Boys too young for membership in the Association will be eligible to the privileges of the class on payment of the Association membership fee, two dollars.

Serious Results of a Fall.

Samuel Hudson, of 294 Somerset street, an old resident of North Plainfield, fell on the ice near his house, last Wednesday morning, and received severe internal injuries, besides fracturing a rib. Dr. O. L. Jenkins is in attendance.

DEVIL-TAKE-THE-HINDMOST INSURANCE.

Something About the "Progressive" Associations That are Tempting Plainfielders Also.

The attention of Superintendent of Insurance Maxwell of New York, was first directed by persons in Syracuse to the business being fraudulently done in that State by a host of associations organized outside his department, but properly under his supervision. The ruling of Attorney-General Tabor that these organizations are amenable to the insurance laws and must shut up shop is the result of this notice on the part of Superintendent Maxwell. Extraordinary interest has been taken in these concerns by people throughout the State, but in central New York in particular there has been a veritable craze to participate in the shadowy benefits of the "endowment" or "progressive" systems of insurance.

The associations have organized by filing certificates as mutual benefit organizations with the Secretary of the State, thus eluding the restrictions of the Insurance Department. It is estimated that within the last six months 200 of these concerns have been organized. Several of them have opened offices in Syracuse, Auburn, Rochester, Binghampton, and other places, where they do business, but for the most part the work is done by lawyers and real estate agents as side issues. The general illusion which they present to their patrons is that they operate on the basis of the insurance tables used by the old line companies—the idea that a considerable percentage of persons taking out policies allow their policies to lapse. On the theory of the inconstancy of man the progressive and endowment associations promise the holders of their certificates returns of from $300 to $1,000 on monthly investments of perhaps $150 to $500. These are about the proportions that are promised, the certificates to be liquidated in the order of their issue as fast as the dues paid in place funds at the disposal of the officers. Naturally the incentive is to keep organizing new associations in order that the originators may issue to themselves the first certificates. At the same time every holder of a certificate becomes an active agent of the concern. He joins with the object in view of hurrying the payment of his own certificate.

As transparent as this fraud is, it has prospered everywhere, hundreds of business and professional men of good standing being induced to accept office in the concerns to give them character. In establishments where there are employed large numbers of hands, shrewd men have launched such enterprises with profit to themselves by making the fees and the certificates small. Of course, in the end, now in sight in New York through the interference of the State officers at Albany, the number of persons who will be out of pocket is only to be guessed at. One of these concerns was recently projected by the policemen of Syracuse, but, before it was incorporated, it was interfered with by higher officials to whose notice the matter was called.

The progressive and endowment societies have been happily dubbed "devil-take-the-hindmost" associations. Both the old line and co-operative insurance organizations have been arrayed against the new device, and had not the Attorney-General ruled against it, legislation would have been asked at Albany this Winter to exclude it from recognition by the Insurance Department. There is no telling what hardship the collapse of hundreds of these fraudulent concerns will work, as thousands of people in every city of considerable size in central New York are interested in them.

A Short Legislative Session.

The feeling among Democrats is that the Legislative session this Winter should be as brief as possible. With a two-thirds vote in both houses the majority will have no opposition of any importance to its measures, and they can be put through in short order after a reasonable time for debate.

The most essential work of the session is already outlined, and will be in good shape when the Legislature convenes. The Governor will indicate in his message what measures will take precedence in legislation. If they are introduced and taken up at once, the minor business introduced can afterwards be sifted to get the wheat from the chaff, and nothing will stand in the way of an early adjournment.

Long legislative sessions are not popular, and they are too apt to be attended by scandals. The people would like to see a short, energetic business session, with the calendar cleared of every important bill before the hour of adjournment. It is in the power of the Democratic majority to give just such a session and thereby make an excellent impression upon the people of the State.

Ripley Hill and Ripley Till.

Plainfield real estate agents and owners will do well to follow the example of Chauncey B. Ripley, whose advertisement of "Ripley Hill," at Westfield, is rolling the dollars into the Ripley till at a rapid rate.—Central N. J. Times.

Quite right, esteemed contemporary, but real estate agents and owners in Westfield say that the merits of the property itself, together with the low prices, have largely to do with the rapid sale of lots on Ripley Hill.—Union County Standard.

Do not hesitate, when you have taken a cold, to get a bottle of Hires' Cough Cure. It may save you dire consequences. Make a note of it, so as not to forget it.

FLORAL JEWELRY.

Enameled Flowers Are All the Rage at Present.

Mrs. Whitney's Exquisite and Costly Orchid Pins—Edelweiss Blossoms Beautifully Enameled—A Charming Trefoil Pin.

EDELWEISS.

AS EVERY scholar knows, the word "gem" comes from the Latin gemma, a bud, and Plato and the old philosophers believed gems to be the flowers of the mineral kingdom. Could they glance into my lady's jewel casket to-day they would be convinced that they were right and that the buds had burst into blossoms of purple and gold. Gold jewelry, says the New York Journal, is no longer fashionable, and the only kind of jewel that is considered good form is a dainty of a flower.

Enameled violets and pansies have been favorites for several years. Last spring every bride wanted her favorite flower used in every way on the wedding-day. Not only the gown and vail must be embroidered in the flower, but the groom's gift must be her favorite flower in enamel, set in a pin or bracelet, and the gifts to the bridesmaids and ushers must be miniature pins made of the bride's flower. This demand caused flower jewelry to be made in endless variety.

ORCHID BROOCH.

The most beautiful and expensive flower jewels are orchids, copied in emeralds, diamonds, topaz and rubies so carefully that the tints and shades do not vary from the real flower.

Mrs. Whitney has two of these orchids, one set as a hairpin and the other as a lacepin.

Mrs. Adolph Ladenburg has an ornament which is the envy of all her young friends. It is a wreath of green enamel maiden-hair fern diamonds, frosted, and her bewitching face gains an added charm from her unique coloring.

Miss Camilla Moss has elected the delicately pink wild rose as her chosen flower, and she has a lace pin, necklace and comb set with wild roses, which are absolutely perfect in shape and coloring. Each has a tiny diamond dew-drop in the center, and nothing is lacking, not even the perfume, for in the roses set in the bracelet are the tiniest of gold scent-bottles holding only a drop of attar of roses. The diamond dew-drop is the stopper of the fairy-like scent-bottle.

EDELWEISS.

Edelweiss blossoms, enamelled in a grayish white, and exactly the size of the natural flowers, are among the most popular of the newly imitated flowers. They were first made in June for a bride who had gathered the edelweiss in Switzerland for her bridal bouquet, and wanted the pins for her bridesmaids.

The brightest-colored flower pins are just exhibited. They are sprays of autumn leaves, and the color and shape of maple leaves is exactly reproduced. On one leaf gleams a diamond dew-drop. None of the flowers are complete without one diamond, and many of the exquisite pansies have every petal outlined with diamonds. Morning glories in pale pink and blue, and pea blossoms in reddish purple are made the size of the natural flower, and are much worn by the pretty rosebuds who will not come out for another year.

TREFOIL PIN.

One of the quaintest new designs is a pea blossom and a green enamel pea pod, opened wide enough to disclose five little white pearls, which are good representations of peas.

Irish trefoil, or our three-leaf cover, is one of the most popular designs in enamel; it comes in green, or black, or white, and has a long, graceful gold stem. A trefoil pin that is especially noteworthy had three superb pearls in the center; one white, one black and the third pink.

Dissolution of Stones.

It is stated that a Bohemian has discovered a combination of chemicals, by the use of which the hardest stones can be dissolved and molded into any shape, "the cast being as hard as flint, translucent, and capable of taking on a brilliant luster." Very beautiful colors are said to result from the process, which the inventor has so much belief in that he is endeavoring to get some capitalists to back him to float a company to carry out the invention on a large scale. It is claimed that while in the fluid form the dissolved stone can be used for coating any thing having a hard or glossy surface.

To What Base Use!

Benevolent Lady—Poor fellow, and so you are very hungry! Well, here is a cake that I baked myself.

Saggs, the Tramp—Thanks, maddim, thanks! I may not be able to eat it, but I will use it to kill the next dog that attacks me.—West Shore.

No Admission.

"Plucky man, Policeman Knox! He drove away two burglars who were trying to break into his house."

"Humph! Did you ever know a policeman who would admit any thing when it was against himself?"—Puck.

The Little Red School-House.

These be degenerate days. An Ohio poet recently wrote a poem about the little red school-houses in that State. But some heartless gradgrind went to work and investigated the color of the school-houses, and he found that out of one hundred and thirty-two only two were red. The poet, however, was not entirely annihilated, for he said his "poem was read if the school-houses weren't."—Philadelphia North American.

In Case of Fire.

A grim stroke of humor is being attributed to the Marquis of Ailesbury in Wiltshire. A large supply of hand-grenades for extinguishing fire had been ordered for the mansion at Savernake. After all the corridors had been sufficiently supplied there were still six of the grenades over. A servant asked the Marquis what should be done with them. His lordship reflected a moment, and then replied:

"I think you had better put them in my coffin."—Foreign Letter.

OVER TRAINED.

First Sportsman—What did you do with that setter pup of yours, Tom—the one you were going to train?

Second Sportsman—Oh, he got trained a little too heavily. He got upon the railroad track just as the express came by.—Munsey's Weekly.

A Regular Beat.

Debtor—You can't collect that from me, sir.

Collector—No?

Debtor—No, you can't get blood out of a turnip.

Collector (in disgust)—Apparently not; neither can I get money out of a beet.—Texas Siftings.

Trifles Light as Air.

Mrs. Slimdiet—I'm very sorry you want your breakfast at 7:30, but I really can not serve it before eight.

Dashaway—Oh! that's all right. We won't quarrel about such a little thing as that.—Jury.

Plans and Estimates.

Inquiring Son—Pop, is an architect an artist?

Pop (who has just had a new house built)—I guess so. They say artists are perfect children about money matters.—N. Y. Weekly.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes, and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

AFTER DECEMBER 15, 1890,

The Plainfield Produce Company

Will Sell All Goods Strictly for Cash!

We will present a few reasons for making this change in our manner of doing business. In the first place we have our Hay, Grain and Produce inspected and bought direct from the Producer for Cash. Thereby obtaining better quality, also saving one profit, which would go to the commission merchant if bought from sample the usual way.

In the second place any concern doing an extensive credit business must get larger profits to offset slow and worthless accounts, of which with the greatest care there will be some. And the customer who is ready to pay and does pay his bills when presented, is the one who must pay these larger profits.

By selling for cash we avoid losses from such accounts, and can afford to sell for smaller profits.

We ask for a share of your patronage. Give us a call and we will show you how low we can sell for CASH, instead of how high we must sell for credit.

RIDING THE PILLION.

Revival of an Old and Picturesque Custom.

The Very Quintessence of Horseback Riding for Ladies—How Our Forefathers Rode and Carried Their Wives and Sweethearts.

Do any one of our readers recall the articles printed some time ago on the much-vexed question as to whether women should ride astride or not? Those who did follow that interesting discussion were doubtless divided into two camps—believers and non-believers in the new school of riding. To the non-believers the announcement that pillion riding has been revived will prove extremely welcome. For with pillion riding we return to the very quintessence of modesty in riding. It is a mode of carriage that flourished when the mere idea of a woman seated astride of a horse would have been considered heathenish and grossly immoral. In those days husband and wife or brother and sister rode together, as shown in our sketch, and the effect was very charming. Pillions are all made on the same principle—a cushion covered with buckskin and quilted, with a handle at the back, which can be put up or down, working with a hinge, the whole having attached a cover with large flaps made of drab-kerseymere to keep the lady's dress from the horse's side. The cover is also often quilted and bound with ornamental braid. There is, besides, a small footboard suspended by leather straps. Our larger sketch, which includes some interesting outlines of the pillion, might give the impression that the old method of riding was not altogether safe. But the seeming contretemps only displays the result of unfamiliarity with the pillion. At present Mr. R. S. Wilson, an English gentleman, is the only person who has carried the crusade as far as practical experiment, and, of course, his labors alone could not make good pillion riders. It will only be when the idea has been widely taken hold of that it will be worked out with perfect success. Writing from Mr. Wilson's country place, a correspondent says;

"Mr. Wilson was as anxious to exhibit as I was to witness pillion riding, and a young cart horse was especially caught for the service. There were plenty of girls about ready to mount the pillion, and a young farmer turned up who at once volunteered to mount the horse. The young farmer duly donned an old cocked hat and buckled on the belt. He was soon in the saddle and rode up to the "upping stone," where a young lady mounted behind him in orthodox fashion. It was a picturesque sight and made one's imagination wander to bygone times. The young cart horse had not stepped many paces when he began to plunge and kick, but the young farmer stuck to him well. The young lady screamed, but held tight by the handle of the pillion with her left hand, while her right clutched the belt round the young farmer's waist. The horse soon quieted down and was put through his paces."

How it would enliven the appearance of Fifth avenue or some of the paths in Central Park if our riders were to sally forth mounted on stout horses with their daughters snugly bestowed upon pillions!

TRICYCLE COACHES.

An Idea of What These Quaint Conveyances Look Like.

The coming introduction of tricycle coaches upon the streets of our city has met with the hearty approval of a long-suffering public, whose hopes are now raised that the new conveyance will be some relief from the present slow-going street cars. The organization of the new company will in all likelihood be completed within a day or two. A manager for the new company has been already selected and every thing is progressing in a quiet, rapid and successful manner toward the incorporation of the Tricycle Coach Company. The promoters of the new enterprise have been running a sample of the new coaches for several weeks with a view to testing its adaptation to their requirements. The coaches which are to be used here, however, will be twice the size of this one, carrying sixteen passengers while this one carries but eight.—Detroit Free Press.

An Advocate of Reciprocity.

PRINCESS BISMARCK.

The Lovable Wife of the Distinguished German Statesman.

The wife of Prince Bismarck has been rarely mentioned in the chronicles of the German court because she seeks to avoid any thing like publicity, but for all that she has been of great assistance to the man whose name is so closely linked with the progress of the fatherland in the last thirty years or more. The Princess is a member of a distinguished German family. She married when her husband was little known. She has always been a believer in the greatness of her spouse and has devoted herself to making his home life as peaceful as his public career has been full of acrimony. Her tact has had much to do with smoothing away in social intercourse asperities created in the course of political controversy. It is said of Princess Bismarck that she is happier, now that she and her husband are permitted to live quietly upon their estates, than she has been at any time since the King of Prussia made her husband his ministerial representative. In this connection the story is told that once in company, Princess Bismarck expressed a longing for the life of a plain German gentleman's wife, when the Prince said, in a manner at once grave and gay: "That time will come, my dear, when, grown old, the Nation will have no more use for us." If there is regret in the Bismarck mansion that the day of retirement has arrived it is not harbored by the wife.

A CATHEDRAL CAR.

Bishop Walker's Unique and Elegant Church on Wheels.

A cathedral on wheels was recently built by the Pullman Company for Bishop William D. Walker, of the Episcopal diocese of North Dakota, who will travel in it from one little town to another along the different railway lines up there and give the settlers the advantages of church services.

"When I began my labors in the diocese of North Dakota six years ago," said the bishop, "I saw what a useful thing a car like this would be, and so determined to have one. It is the only thing of the kind in the world, I suppose. There are very many little towns along the railroads in which it would be a waste of capital just now to build churches. I shall travel through those towns, stopping a day or two at each one, and giving the people—not only Episcopalians, but of all denominations—a chance to go to church."

The exterior of the car looks like that of the ordinary Pullman sleeper, except that it has a Gothic projection on each side to make it look something like a church. The car is sixty feet in length and of the ordinary width. At one end is an apartment about ten feet in depth, used by the bishop as a robingroom, and immediately adjoining it is the raised platform serving as a chancel, at the right of which is the passage-way.

In the center of the platform stands a richly-carved altar bearing on its face the words "Agnus Dei." At the left is the bishop's chair surmounted by a mitre and ornamented on the back with a sunken cross. At the right is a lectern of rich design, bearing a large and richly bound Bible.

The altar is the gift of the Episcopal church at Summit, N. J., and nearly every thing else in the car was contributed by church or individuals in different parts of the country. The organ was the gift of the young ladies of the Church of the Heavenly Rest in New York. The communion service was given by Mrs. James H. Walker, of Chicago, who is the bishop's sister-in-law.—Chicago News.

Romance in Royal Circles.

A romance in real life and in royal circles has for its heroine the late beautiful Princess of Thurn and Taxis, born Princess Helen in Bavaria, who was accounted until her last illness the most handsome and intellectual woman in Europe. As is the custom in royal families, she was betrothed in childhood, and to the present Emperor of Austria. Before the marriage was celebrated the faithless lover fell violently in love with her younger sister, and insisted on making the sixteen year old girl his wife. The Princess Helen, though proud and ambitious, as well as deeply in love with her fiance, accepted the situation bravely, and allowed her sister to marry the man she loved and wear the crown she coveted with no complaint, acting through all the festivities of the wedding and the subsequent years of life the part of a loving sister rejoicing at her sister's good fortune. But it is said, although she married the Prince of Thurn and Taxis, who worshipped her, she never professed any affection for him, and retained throughout her life an air of intense but patient sadness. She was a skilful musician, an artist of considerable skill, and a woman of profound charm.

AN INDIANA GIANT.

He Tips the Scale at Nine Hundred and Seven Pounds.

John Hanson Craig, Said to Be the Largest Man in the World—His Phenomenal Gain in Flesh—His Ancestry and Childhood.

Indiana boasts of having within its borders the largest man in the world.

This person is John Hanson Craig, now a resident of Danville, a town of 2,000 inhabitants, nineteen miles west of Indianapolis on the Big Four railroad, and the county seat of Hendricks County.

John, who was born in Iowa City, Ia., in 1855, soon moved to the blue grass region of Kentucky.

At birth he weighed eleven pounds. He grew so rapidly that at the age of eleven months he had seven pounds of flesh to show for each month of his existence, weighing seventy-seven pounds.

From this time on his gain in flesh was phenomenal, and he was the talk of the community.

When he reached the age of two years his weight was 206 pounds. When he was three years old, in 1858, P. T. Barnum inaugurated a baby show in New York, and his parents, hearing of this, resolved to enter him in competition with the other contestants. He was awarded the prize offered for the largest baby present, $1,000.

At the age of five years his weight had increased until he weighed 302 pounds. His weight the next six years kept on increasing until he registered 405 pounds.

The next eight years his weight increased 196 pounds, making his total weight 601 pounds. He made it 725 pounds when he was twenty-five years old.

During the next two years he only increased his weight to 758 pounds, but the next year he gained thirty-four pounds, making the total 792 pounds at the age of twenty-eight.

From that time his weight has been gradually increasing until at the present time, when he is only thirty-five years old, he tips the scales at 907 pounds. Judging from the past he has not stopped accumulating flesh, and although he has not weighed himself very recently, it is said he believes he is still increasing in size, and will continue to grow for some years to come.

This immense amount of flesh is not caused by an extraordinary appetite. Mr. Craig, on the contrary, being a very delicate eater, is not addicted to the use of intoxicants, and does not use tobacco in any form. He suffers no inconvenience from his very heavy weight, and was never ill a day in his life.

He stands six feet five inches in his stocking feet, and measures eight feet four inches at the hips. The cloth in one of his suits of clothes will serve to make several suits for ordinary men, it requiring forty-one yards to make him a full suit—coat, vest and pantaloons—and it takes three pounds of yarn to make him a pair of stockings.

He laughingly says that the cows always smile when they see him going to a shoe shop to leave his measure for a pair of boots, as it will take a whole side to make him a pair, No. 13 being the size he wears.

The father of Mr. Craig was a very small man, weighing about 115 to 120 pounds. His mother was also a small woman, not weighing over 110 to 115 pounds.

His great-great-grandfather on his mother's side was Governor Chittenden, the first Governor of Vermont, whose birthplace was Ireland. Dr. Hason Catlet, his grandfather, was Assistant Surgeon-General of the United States for thirty-five years and died in the Government service at East Liberty, Pa. He was born in England.

On his father's side Mr. Craig's grandfarher was a native of Scotland, and his graudmother a German, having been born in the city of Frankfort. Mr. Craig is a first cousin of William P. Hepburn, at the present time solicitor for the United States Treasury.

A few days ago Mr. Craig's home was brightened by Mrs. Craig giving birth to a girl baby. This is the only child they have, and both are very joyful over the event. Mrs. Craig's weight is about 130 pounds.

A Singular Experiment.

According to the English papers, a singular experiment recently took place in Palestine to test the accuracy of Dr. Colenso's statement that the people of Israel assembled in the valley between Mount Ebal and Mount Gerizim could not hear the curses and blessings delivered from the heights above them. A party, it appears, was traveling in the neighborhood of these mountains, and two Scotchmen ascended Mount Ebal and two Welshmen Mount Gerizim, while the rest of the party remained in the valley. One of the Scotchmen read the curses, and from the opposite mountain a Welshman read the blessings. Both were easily heard below, where the party added the amens. Both readers were perched upon natural platforms near the summits.

Miss Amy—Oh, what a delightful place to elope from!—West Shore.

A CHARMING WOMAN.

Mrs. Edith Kingdon-Gould, Jay's Lovable Daughter-in-Law.

If every marriage between professional and non-professional people resulted as happily as has the union of Edith Kingdon and George Gould the gossips would be deprived of one fruitful source of comment, for so far as the world knows there is no happier wife and mother than the former stage favorite, and certainly the husband gives every indication of contentment with the life of a benedict. Mrs. Gould won quite a reputation as an amateur actress in Boston, where her parents, who were in moderate circumstances, resided, before she adopted the dramatic profession, for which her beauty and talent admirably fitted her. She was a member of Augustin Daly's company when the eldest son of Jay Gould first saw her. He was not long in becoming a warm admirer of Miss Kingdon and sought her acquaintance in a straightforward and business-like manner. When the couple married the bride was cordially received by her husband's parents, and she was affectionately regarded by the elder Mrs. Gould up to the day of the latter's death. George Gould is a quiet, unpretentious business man, who divides his time between his office and his home, eschewing clubs and gay companions. By many he is regarded as his father's superior in business matters, and for several years he has been "the wizard's" confidential adviser. The home of Mr. and Mrs. George Gould is close by that of Jay Gould, which is at the corner of Forty-seventh street and Fifth avenue, in New York. Part of each summer is spent in a log cabin in the Adirondack mountains.

MRS. EDITH KINGDON-GOULD.

THE RUSSIAN WAY.

How Baby Gets His Bath in the Land of the Autocrat.

The Russians have a way of bathing their very young babies that is unique and most comfortable. A large log hollowed out as deeply as possible serves as a bath-tub, and is placed on two cross-stick uprights. A small blanket is laid at the bottom of the bath, together with a little pillow of folded flannel, just high enough to lift the tiny head above the water. King baby is then laid comfortably down, as if on a bed, to kick and splash without let or hindrance—and he does so enjoy it, the bonny wee man! After a good bath he is taken out with the blanket wrapped about him as described above. This seems a very practical way of bathing, as there is no strain in the position as there is where the head is held up with the hand.

The Artistic Empress of Russia.

The Empress of Russia is the instigator and inspirer of the advance made in art throughout the Empire, which is one of the most conspicuous features of the present Czar's reign. The Empress herself is an accomplished artist, having been carefully educated by her father, the King of Denmark, who, before his accession to the throne, earned his living by teaching drawing and painting. Her style is delicate and finished, her favorite subject the sea and her favorite artist Meissonier, whose two masterpieces, "Porte Drapeau" and "Fumeur," she spent some hours daily for fourteen months copying. Her former master in art, now King of Denmark, has one daughter, this Princess Dagomar, wedded to the Czar of all the Russias; another daughter, the Princess Alessandra, the wife of the Prince of Wales, heir of another empire, and a son George, who is King of Greece.

Leaders in Professional Education.

In the matter of the higher education of women, says the New Orleans Times-Democrat, the Southern universities are taking the lead. A letter from Miss Marion L. Baynes, of the Hollins Institute, Virginia, ought to make New York colleges ashamed by the contrast of their backwardness. And at Baltimore the trustees of the Johns Hopkins University have accepted a fund of $50,000 on condition that women are to be admitted to the medical school. Mrs. Douglas Gordon, Mrs. Henry Winter Davis and Miss Mary Garrett were mainly instrumental in carrying the acceptance of this fund. An effort is to be made by Southern women to accomplish the same results in New York colleges of medicine, and its success may be discounted, for the Southern ladies who have undertaken it are famous for their persistence and enthusiasm.

A Fine Chance for the Girls.

SITTING BULL DEAD

The Great Chief Killed Near Standing Rock.

SHOT WHILE RESISTING ARREST.

Several Indian Police and Sitting Bull's Son Also Killed.

Bloody Fight With Braves—They Fought Hard to Free the Sioux Chief—Gatling Guns Turned on the Warriors—The President Hopes the Trouble is Now at an End—More Alarming Dispatches.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Dec. 16.—Gen. Miles has received dispatches, stating that in a fight near Standing Rock Agency at daylight Sitting Bull and a number of Indian police had been killed.

The first dispatch was from Pierre, S. D., stating that Sitting Bull and his son had been killed, but giving no other particulars. The other dispatch was from Standing Rock Agency, S. D., and stated that the Indian police had started out to arrest Sitting Bull, having learned that he proposed starting for the Bad Lands at once. The police were followed by a troop of cavalry under Captain Fouchet, and a company of infantry under Colonel Drum.

When the police reached Sitting Bull's camp on the Grand River, about 40 miles from Standing Rock, they found arrangements being made for departure. The cavalry had not yet reached the camp when the police arrested Sitting Bull and started back with him. His followers quickly rallied to his rescue and tried to retake him. In the fight that ensued, Sitting Bull is said to have been killed. Five of the Indian police were also killed. One of the police rode back to the cavalry and infantry, and, after telling them to hurry up to the support of the police, hurried on to the Agency with the report of the battle. No later particulars have been received, but the death of Sitting Bull and of at least five of the Indian police seems undoubtedly true.

THE NEWS IN WASHINGTON.

The President Hopes Sitting Bull's Death Will End the Trouble.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The following telegram was received at Army Headquarters from General Miles:

"Sitting Bull was arrested at daylight by Indian police. Friends attempted his rescue. Fight ensued. Sitting Bull, his son, Blackbird, Catch Bear and four others were killed, also seven Indian police. Captain Fouchet arrived just in time with troops. Hotchkiss and Gatling guns drove the Indians away and secured the body of Sitting Bull."

When the above telegram was shown to the President he said that he regarded Sitting Bull as the great disturbing element in his tribe, and now that he was out of the way he hoped that a settlement of the difficulties could be reached without further bloodshed.

MUST FACE THE REDSKINS.

Pipes of Peace Thrown Into the Air and Shot to Atoms.

BISMARCK, S. D., Dec. 16.—General Brooke must now face the reds in war paint. The peacemaking Sioux whom he sent to the Bad Lands to bring in the hostiles were very roughly used and when they offered pipes of peace the war-painted bucks threw them into the air and shot them to atoms. This is the news which has been wired from Pine Ridge Agency.

General Miles has ordered the Sioux to be surrounded at once, if possible; at any rate, they are not to be permitted to escape without a fight. That they are bent on fighting now appears to be evident.

Already Brooke has sent forward the Seventh and Ninth Cavalry Regiments, while the Eighth and Sixth are now advancing from the Black Hills.

The escaped Sioux are bold and defiant. Couriers are dashing in all directions, and miles of camp fires were seen during the night—a sure sigh of trouble. There is much anxiety here over the situation.

MARKED FOR ATTACK.

Agent Loomis is Afraid the French Will Retaliate on American Interests.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—F. F. Loomis, commercial agent of the United States at St. Etienne, France, says in a letter to the State Department that the French press is trying to incite its leaders into a state of revengeful fury over what it calls the injustice of the McKinley Tariff act.

"This sentiment is not, it is true, strong enough at present to be formidable," says Mr. Loomis, "but if a continuation of this press fanning be kept up, no one can say what its ultimate development may be.

"The cry for specific retaliation was raised by the Memorial, an influential paper published here and circulating in a laboring community of 200,000 souls. The American interests which have been marked for attack by the papers are those represented by United States insurance companies doing business in France. The volume of business of this sort transacted here amounts to $30,000,000 annually, so that the American interests threatened are very considerable, and I thought it well to make this report."

THE SPINNERS SNUBBED.

Poor Prospect of a Settlement of the Thread Mill Lockout.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 16.—The expected settlement of the strike at the Clark Thread Works did not take place. When the committee appointed by the Spinners' Association appeared at the firm's office they were refused a hearing and told that if the firm wanted a committee to wait upon them they would select the members themselves. A statement of grievances was also refused.

The committee reported back to their association and the strikers were very indignant, because the firm had assured Secretary Moore, of the National Board, that a fair investigation of the trouble would be made.

Before the appearance of the committee the firm held a conference with Superintendent Welmsley, who is the cause of the trouble.

The hundreds of girls and men, who have been thrown out of work, feel greatly discouraged and disappointed over the turn affairs have taken.

CRUSHED IN A WRECK.

Several Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Employes Seriously Injured.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 16.—A bad wreck occurred just south of this place at 6:30 o'clock a. m., on the Baltimore & Ohio road. The night crew was doing some shifting. Several cars were left standing on the main track while they went into Uniontown, and as they returned they ran into the cars. The tank on the engine was driven through the cab, pinioning the engineer, fireman, conductor and brakeman, who were all on the engine.

The conductor had a leg crushed so that amputation was necessary. He cannot recover. The engineer's feet were crushed and he may die. The fireman, brother of the engineer, was badly cut and bruised. The brakeman was severely bruised. But one car was wrecked.

SENATORS IN CAUCUS

Nothing Final at the Republican Meeting.

SEVERAL TEST VOTES TAKEN.

The Majority Opposed to the Two Per Cent. Bond Scheme.

Difference of Opinion on the Proposition to Purchase Silver—The Elections Bill and the Rule for Declaring the Previous Question Not Touched Upon—Another Meeting to be Held To-Morrow Night.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The Republican Senators met in caucus at the residence of Senator McMillan last night and remained in session for more than three hours. They adjourned to meet again to-morrow night without coming to a definite conclusion on any of the propositions under discussion, but after indicating the probable fate of several of them.

Senator Sherman laid before the caucus the proposition of the caucus committee and the proposition of Secretary Windom. The caucus proposition included a provision that the subsidiary coin now in the Treasury shall be recoined, and a further provision that when silver shall have remained at par for a year, any holder of silver may bring it to the mint and have it coined into silver dollars at the expense of the government.

The discussion turned on the proposition to issue $100,000,000 of two per cent. bonds. The committee proposition differs from the proposition of the Secretary on this point, in that the Secretary wishes the bonds to be made interconvertible, while the proposition of the committee is that these bonds be used for the retirement of bonds now in circulation. It was stated that the Secretary would be willing to accept a 15-year bond or a 30-year bond. Arguments were made against the proposition to issue bonds on the ground that their issue would in no way relieve the situation. On the other hand, it was said, the proposed issue would increase the national debt $25,000,000.

There were several test votes taken on motions associated with the bond clause which indicated very clearly that a large majority of the Senators present were opposed to the issue of any new bonds.

There was a difference of opinion when the caucus adjourned as to the probable fate of the proposition to purchase silver. One free-coinage Senator said that there was little doubt that if anything was agreed to it would be the purchase of 12,000,000 ounces of silver, while another free-coinage Senator said that he believed the caucus would agree to increase the regular monthly purchases. It was argued by the silver Senators in the caucus that the Senate must eventually come to free coinage, if not at this session, then at the next session of Congress, and they urged that the Senate accept the inevitable and agree to free coinage now. There seems but little doubt that the proposition to purchase silver and issue Treasury notes on it to replace the national bank notes retired will be agreed to, and also to have free coinage if silver remains at par for a year, although the advocates of free coinage say that the latter proposition is of value only as indicating the sentiment in favor of free coinage. They say that if free coinage is had it will be by direct legislation.

The caucus did not get down to the discussion of the question of laying aside the Elections bill, and the rule for declaring the previous question, which was under consideration when the last caucus adjourned. The was a full attendance.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

The House Calls for Information About Government Depositaries.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—In the Senate the bill giving settlers opposite unsurveyed land the privilege of taking up an additional 160 acres of it was passed.

The bill to adjust and pay Indian depredation claims was passed.

Other bills were discussed, but none received the two-thirds vote necessary to suspend the rules and pass them.

Facilitating Foreign Mail Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The Postoffice Department sent Mr. William Potter to confer with the postal authorities of Great Britain, France and Germany, with the view of facilitating the mail service between those countries and the United States. A plan has been agreed upon by Germany, whose representatives, A. Sachse, Ministerial Director, and H. Petzold, Oberpost Secretary, will complete the arrangement to-day, by which mail clerks will hereafter distribute and assort all mail destined for points in either country, so that immediately on the arrival of the steamer the mail can be put on the trains and forwarded to the addressee. This will make the time of transit 12 hours less than under the present system.

THE BANK WRECKERS.

McSenator Macfarlane Tired of the Role of Fugitive.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 16.—The trio of alleged wreckers of the Bank of America and American Life Insurance Company, George F. Work, Louis E. Pfeiffer and James S. Dungan, are still in Moyamensing, and will remain there until their hearing to-morrow before Magistrate Pole. They are each held in $20,000 bail, and find this amount difficult to raise. Ex-Senator John J. Macfarlane is still free, but it is understood that he will join the others to-morrow and be given a hearing with them.

Friends of ex-Senator McFarlane say that he has been ready for some time to surrender to the officers of the law and stand trial on the charges against him. He is tired of the role of fugitive, and would like to have the suspense over. If he does give himself up, he is expected to make a clean breast of the whole affair, and some very interesting developments are then expected.

It is also thought that Dungan may conclude that it will be best for him to tell the whole story and throw himself on the mercy of the court.

SUICIDE IN A CEMETERY.

A Father Dies at the Grave of His Loved Ones.

WARE, Mass., Dec. 16.—A unknown man, about 60 years old, was found dead in Aspen Grove Cemetery here. A postal card was found on his person, addressed to "William Barth, care of Ware & Pratt, Worcester." The man's throat was cut, and a razor was found lying alongside of the grave on which the body lay. The headstone on the grave bore the name of Barth.

Some persons remember a man named Barth, who lived here about 25 years ago, and who buried his two children in the grave on which the body has been found.

It is the general opinion that the suicide is Mr. Barth, who came to die at the grave of his loved ones.

CAPTURED HIS CASH.

A Miner's Housekeeper Disappears With His Savings.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., Dec. 16.—Miss Jones, the housekeeper of a German miner named Adams, in Everson, has disappeared, taking with her $320 in money. It has just been discovered that she also carried away $1,000 in notes payable to Adams.

Miss Jones had been transacting all of Adams' business and financial affairs, and it is believed she has taken advantage of him by collecting the amounts on the most of the notes as they became due.

The missing housekeeper was seen by an officer at the mining town of Moyer, but he declined to arrest her, because she threatened to fill him with bullets.

AFFAIRS IN IRELAND

Parnell and Davitt Address Exciting Meetings.

BOTH SIDES TAUNT EACH OTHER

Tenant Farmers Present Parnell With an Address of Confidence.

Dillon Issues a Manifesto—He Says Parnell's Policy Will Create Insurrection—Irish Clergy Give Healy a Hint—McCarthy Leaves for Dublin—A Galway Meeting Captured by Parnell's Friends.

KILKENNY, Dec. 16.—Mr. Parnell drove during the morning to Rathdowney. Messrs. Davitt and Tanner followed with the intention of confronting Parnell publicly.

Mr. Parnell was waited upon at the Ossory Hotel by a deputation of tenant farmers from Aghadore, Galway, who presented him with an address of confidence. Mr. Parnell responded that he was rejoiced to see the farmers rallying to his support. The seal of approval, he said, would be put by Kilkenny upon his 16 years' work.

Mr. Matthew Harris, M. P. for Galway, also spoke, expressing regret that Mr. Parnell's opponents should stoop so low as to indulge in foul abuse and hurl a woman's name at their former leader. (Cries of "Shame," "Dirty Tim Healy," etc.)

During the Parnellite meeting at the hotel, Messrs. Davitt and Tanner arrived in the village. Mr. Tanner, speaking in the market square, pointed to Mr. Parnell leaving the hotel, and shouted: "He is clearing out now. Tally-ho, the Fox, has got away." (Laughter and cheers.)

As the Parnell party were passing through the village of Durrow, the peasants raised a cheer for O'Brien, whereupon Mr. E. Harrington called for cheers for Dillon. These were given, but there was no response to the proposal for cheers for Parnell.

DILLON'S MANIFESTO.

He Says Parnell's Policy Invites the Irish People to Insurrection.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16—John Dillon, who since the return to Europe of William O'Brien has assumed the latter's place here, has given out a manifesto referring to the present troubles in Ireland.

It purports only to give his own view of the situation, and in it he attacks the methods pursued by Mr. Parnell in unmeasured terms.

While granting all the praise due to the latter for his services to Ireland, he says that Parnell is not only responsible for the present trouble, but that if he met the deposed leader he would have no hesitancy in telling him so. Further, he would tell him that if his course is not very much altered Parnell would, "apart from English politics, be no fit leader for a nation aspiring to be free."

In an interview after he had given out the statement, he said that Parnell's policy invited the Irish people to insurrection.

William O'Brien's Paper.

DUBLIN, Dec. 16.—The managers of Suppressed United Ireland have issued a four-page half-penny paper, with the subtitle, William O'Brien's Paper. The leading article, which is headed "Desecration," says: "It would be unjust to the Castle to compare its fiercest attack upon Mr. O'Brien with the cowardly stab dealt at him by treacherous friends. That Leamy should have helped to stab this brave, tender heart we would not have believed if an angel from heaven had foretold it."

Surprised the Clergy.

DUBLIN, Dec. 16.—At Galway, a meeting called by the clergy, for the purpose of denouncing Mr. Parnell, had a result that was entirely unlooked for by its promoters. The supporters of Mr. Parnell turned out in force. They filled the hall, occupied the platform and passed resolutions supporting Mr. Parnell. They also passed a resolution, calling upon Mr. J. Pinkerton, Member of Parliament for Galway city, to resign his seat.

Hint to Healy.

KILKENNY, Dec. 16.—It is alleged that Healy has been requested by the clergy to moderate his tone and not introduce so much billingsgate into his stump speeches against Parnell. The priests deprecate the employment of allusions to the O'Shea case in the discussions.

THE IRISH FUNDS.

The Envoys Issue a Circular to American Contributors.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—The following circular has been issued to all treasurers of Irish funds in this country:

"In view of the recent unhappy circumstances in Ireland, we think it desirable to communicate with you in reference to any funds in your hands in connection with our mission. Before we left Ireland a clear understanding had been arrived at with Mr. Parnell and with the Irish Parliamentary party as to the purposes to which the fund to be collected in America should be devoted. It was agreed that it should be used for the support of evicted tenants in Ireland, and chiefly for the support of those tenants who had been evicted in connection with the agitation of the last four years, and by whose loyalty and sacrifice the Irish cause has been most signally advanced.

"Dr. Joseph E. Kenny, M. P., and Alfred Webb, M. P., the gentlemen who were appointed by us in consultation with Mr. Parnell to act as treasurers of the fund, have taken opposite sides in the controversy, and in any case we are quite confident, if the money is sent to them, it will be honorably applied to the purpose for which it was subscribed.

"We would, therefore, earnestly request you to forward any funds in your hands to Dublin by draft, payable to the join order of Dr. J. E. Kenny, M. P., and Alfred Webb, M. P. When forwarding draft, kindly send a memorandum to us. Fifth Avenue Hotel, Madison Square, New York."

The above is signed by John Dillon, Wm. O'Brien, T. D. Sullivan, T. P. O'Connor, T. Harrington and T. P. Gill.

A DENTIST'S ADVENTURE WITH A WOMAN

Just as Things Looked Most Suspicious the Wife Appeared, and It Took Three Men Fifteen Minutes to Explain.

What threatened to place one of Plainfield's most reputable professional men in a highly embarrassing predicament happened in a well-known dentist's office a day or two ago. The doctor of dental surgery was alone in his office when a good-looking young woman entered, threw herself into the operating chair, and gasped out that she wanted a tooth pulled, and that as she did n't want to be hurt she wished to be rendered thoroughly unconscious with an anæsthetic. No sooner, however, did she see the dental instruments in the dentist's hands than she fainted in an agony of apprehension. The forceps-plier grasped the opportunity by the forelock and yanked the offending tooth from the maiden's gums. The pain of the operation revived the girl from her swoon, and although the dentist had not given her any drug whatever she let her imagination have full sway, and, believing that she was under the influence of the powerful anæsthetic for which she had asked, and of the results of which she had heard so much, she rushed frantically about the room, screaming "You've poisoned me! You've poisoned me!" The dentist sought to allay her excitement and fears, caught her by the arm and asked her to listen to reason. "Don't touch me!"—she shrieked—"You've poisoned me, and I'm going to die." Springing to the front of the building, she threw up a window, leaned forward over the sill, and shouted "Murder! Murder!" The dentist dragged her back, using only such gentle force as was absolutely necessary, and slammed the window down. The girl was still struggling in his arms when a physician and a druggist who had heard the cries rushed in, and stood for a moment aghast, mistaking the meaning of his embraces, then as the girl cried "Take him away! He's poisoned me! I'm going to die!" they seized the dentist and released the girl from his grasp. In an instant, however, they themselves had to make the woman a prisoner, for she began to smash the furniture and to tear her garments into shreds, in the violence of her hysteria. All sorts of cries she uttered, and continued to struggle and to scream till, well-nigh exhausted, and considerably en deshabille, she flung herself on a sofa and sobbingly ran over a list of treasures which she wished to bequeath to certain loved ones. Then she became more quiet, and breathed heavily, and sobbed now and then, and wondered why she did n't die. The physician sent the druggist out to get a prescription filled, and had himself stepped out of the room for a moment when the dentist's charming young wife, who had been unconscious of all that was happening in the office, chanced to enter. What she thought when she saw her husband bending eagerly over the sofa and seemingly caressing a pretty young woman, she will never tell, since she has had the matter satisfactorily explained; but for an instant she was speechless with amazement, and it took the three men, dentist, doctor and druggist, what seemed to the dentist an interminable while, to smooth over all the details of the story and to disabuse the grieved and sobbing wife of the idea that her husband had not been discovered in a compromising situation.

While the clouds of threatened domestic discord were being dispersed the dentist's fair patient was recovering, and by the time all other difficulties were arranged she arose, pressed the dentist's hand, said "That was an awful ugly tooth, and I'm glad you got it out, though I was such a goose over it," and with her cloak wrapped carefully about her entered her carriage, which had just arrived.

The dentist followed her ruefully with his eyes. "I have many kinds of customers,"—said he—"but I never had a harder one to manage than that one, and I never found myself in a more delicate position than to-day." And then the dentist and the doctor and the druggist lighted their cigars and spent an hour or two swapping deliciously exciting experiences.

The men all agreed, as a result of their exchange of confidences, that it was within the power of a woman to blast forever the reputation of a professional man who was in reality the soul of honor. A physician, a dentist, or even a druggist, is such an intimate adviser of individuals that they experience many adventures spiced with sensational excitement which the outside world might easily develop into a scandal.

Another One of the Household Dead.

In speaking of the death of the Noble family, as told exclusively in THE PRESS of yesterday, the New York World of this morning says:

Ever since the death of ex-Gov. Noble, Mrs. Noble and her daughter have been on the decline. Mrs. Noble contracted a severe cold a short time ago, which developed into pneumonia, while Mrs. Underhill also contracted the disease. The attending physican was Dr. John Schnapps. Mrs. Noble and her daughter grew worse, and at 7 o'clock Sunday morning the former died. Mrs. Underhill was not informed of the death of her mother, and arrangements were being made to have the funeral services conducted without her knowledge. Two hours later, however, the daughter died. The latter's four-year-old child is now down with the same malady, but the physician has hopes of her recovery.

This is not so about the child. It is well and in this city. But its nurse was summoned to Williamsburgh, this morning, by a telegram stating that her sister, who was the cook in the Noble family, had just died.

FIRED THE "GENT" DOWN STAIRS.

Plainfield Would n't Swallow "A Bold Mountaineer," so "de Profesh" Takes His Talent to Somerville.

"A theatrical gent from New York"—so read his greasy and well-thumbed business card—visited Plainfield a few days ago, and sought to induce various of the local societies to engage the company he represented to produce "A Bold Mountaineer," in all its glory, before the dazzled eyes of the populace. He was an extremely persistent fellow, and dogged the officers of the societies about with a faithfulness that would have done credit to a cause of national importance. The Plainfielders stood his presence with a patience that was admirable, but when the agent followed some of them into their lodge room and began to dilate, before the astonished brethren of the order, on the virtues of "The Bold Mountaineer" as a dramatic attraction, he was unceremoniously ejected and thrown headlong down an extensive, hard and lofty flight of stairs. He did n't stop tumbling till he reached the middle of the street, when he gathered together his bruised body and his torn and rumpled garments, murmured, "This is no town fer de profesh," and began to count the Central Railroad ties in the direction of Somerville.

An Incident of Christmas Time.

An very pretty incident that was replete with the true flavor of Christmas tide was witnessed by a reporter on Park avenue this morning. A little girl had been sent to a coal office to order a ton of coal for her mother, a poor widow, but on reaching the place the child found that on the way she had lost her pocket-book. A benevolent-hearted, prosperous merchant who advertises in THE PRESS, but who is too modest to have his name mentioned in this connection, overheard her story of the loss, and promptly started a subscription, among the people on the spot, to make good the missing money. He subscribed a dollar himself, and in a moment the entire amount was raised. "And if you find your purse"—he told the little girl—"you can keep this money anyhow," to which the contributors all nodded assent. And the child, her face wreathed in smiles of gratitude, ordered the needed coal, and tripped blithely homeward; and everybody who helped to turn her sadness to joyousness felt happier in giving than if they had doubled the money to their own profit.

A Bright Little Woman Smashes Hearts and Ten-Pins.

A merry party of ladies and gentlemen held possession of the bowling alleys of the Fanwood Club Saturday evening. Some of the scores on the board were as follows:

Mrs. Force	93	Mrs. Miller	96
Billy She	111	Miss Hamlin	17
Geo. R. Brown	79	Miss Clark	93
Ruth	200	Olga	208

Both of the ladies having the highest scores were warmly complimented on their skill and proficiency. Olga's exquisite methods were especially admired. This famous Russian actress, whose histrionic genius is soon to win the plaudits of the American people at a prominent theatre of the metropolis, is spoken of as a most charming little woman, one of the most popular that Fanwood society has ever known. She is thorough master of billiards as well as of bowling, and is smashing the hearts of the gallant swains of Quality Hill as skillfully and sweetly as she smashes the frames of ten-pins to pieces.

Mr. Gardner's Third Stroke Fatal.

David Gardner, who was stricken with paralysis, while seated at the breakfast table, Sunday morning, and rendered so completely helpless that he could not speak a word or move a muscle, as reported exclusively in yesterday's PRESS, died at his home on Somerset place this morning, without recovering a particle from the shock. He was in his seventy-ninth year, and was one of Plainfield's oldest settlers. This was the third paralytic stroke he had suffered during his life. He leaves an unmarried daughter, with whom he lived at the time of his death, another daughter who is the wife of John Darling, and a son, ex-Councilman Wm. E. Gardner. Announcement of the funeral services will be made later.

The Official Cause of the Fire.

Though the flue of the chimney in the kitchen of Wilson Fiske's house, on Woodland avenue, that was damaged by fire Saturday evening, was so defective that one could put a hand through some of holes, the cause of the fire was because of the bricks on the hearth becoming overheated from the workmen's fire, and communicating with the wood-work, and not because of any passage of sparks through the defective spots. This is the official declaration of the fire department, as a result of careful investigation.

Thanks to All.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—The ladies of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union wish to express through your columns their thanks to all who aided toward the success of the "Bazar of Holidays," held Dec. 9, 10, and 11; to the ladies who assisted in the booths, to those who donated fancy articles or provisions, to the carpenters for their moderate charges and to the public for its patronage.

In behalf of the Union,

ROXBURY, Mass., Dec. 16.—A slight fire at 386 Parker street resulted in the death of an old man named James Simpson, the occupant of a room in the house. He was asleep when an overheated stove set fire to the bed clothing and he was asphyxiated by gas.

The Barge Utica Probably Lost.

SOUTHPORT, Conn., Dec. 16.—Fears are entertained here that the steam barge City of Utica, of New York, bound for Westport, Conn., has been lost with all on board. Wreckage bearing the vessel's name has been washed ashore here. The Utica left New York Thursday afternoon last.

Railroad Strike Settled.

NEW HAVEN, Dec. 16.—The strike on the Canal divison of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad is settled. A number of new brakemen have been engaged, and many of the old men, except the leaders, have been taken back. It is understood the company will pay for all time over 13 hours.

Anxiety Over the Pope's Health.

BERLIN, Dec. 16.—A despatch from Rome to the National Zeitung says there is extreme anxiety at the Vatican over the Pope's condition. His Holiness is very much affected by the cold weather, and Dr. Ceccerelli, who is in attendance, has intimated that the worst must be prepared for.

An Old Woman Assaulted.

ALTOONA, Pa., Dec. 16.—Mrs. James Lewis, aged 67 years, was assaulted and fatally injured in her house, a few miles from here. She was alone in her house and lived only a few hours after she was found. There is no clue to the identity of her assailants.

Secretary Tracy's Sister Dead.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Secretary Tracy has left to attend the funeral of his sister, Mrs. Matilda Dodge, who died very suddenly yesterday while visiting her son at Brooklyn. Mrs. Dodge was 72 years of age, and she resided at Owego, N. Y.

Extending the Bonded Period.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—The bill offered by Representative Flower of New York to extend the bonded period of the tariff law from February 1 to July 1 of next year, will be reported favorably by the Ways and Means Committee.

Invested a Dollar and Realized a Million.

Brown and his friend Perkins were talking about investments.

"Once I invested $1,000 in real estate," said Perkins, "and doubled it in less than six months. That was the best investment I ever made. Pretty good, wasn't it?"

"I've done better than that," said Brown. "Two years ago I was told by all my friends that I was going into consumption, and I thought they were right about it. I had a dry, hacking cough, no appetite, my sleep came by fits and starts, and seemed to do me no good, and often there was a dull, heavy pain in my chest. I kept growing weaker and weaker, and at last night-sweats set in. I thought it was all up with me then. I had consulted two doctors and taken quarts of their medicine, and received no benefit from it. One day I happened to read something about Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and I made up my mind to give it a trial, but I didn't expect it would help me. I invested a dollar in a bottle of it, and it helped me from the first dose. It helped and it cured me, and when I compare my present good health with the miserable health of two years ago, I think I am safe in saying that my investment was a much better one than yours. You can't reckon health by any measure of dollars and cents; if you could I should say that I had realized at least a million from my $1.00 investment." The "Golden Medical Discovery" is guaranteed to benefit or cure in all diseases for which it is recommended or money paid for it will be refunded.

TOM'S TEACHERS.

What Bishop Vincent Tells the People of St. Paul About the Boy.

Bishop John H. Vincent, D. D., LL. D., formerly of this city, gave a most interesting lecture the other evening at the People's church, St. Paul, Minn. Bishop Vincent is known the world over as a popular educator and the founder of the C. L. S. C. He is not an entire stranger to St. Paul audiences, having lectured or preached in the city several times. The audience which greeted him was from the most refined and cultured people in the city, and he held the rapt attention of his hearers during the entire discourse. The subject of the lecture was "Tom and His Teacher." After greeting his audience the speaker said:

Who is Tom? Who are Tom's teachers? What shall Tom's teachers teach Tom? These are the questions which I shall consider.

Tom is the average American boy. Whether rich or poor matters not to him. Whether clad in homespun or broadcloth matters not him, so he has a good time. Whether he was born on American soil or not is no matter to me. I have no sympathy with the narrow-mindedness which says only those born on American soil are Americans. So the boy or man has American ideas and the spirit of American institutions is sufficient to make him an American.

Next, who are Tom's teachers? I am not now going to consider professional teachers. There is a great army of those, but it is not my intention to speak of them. I mean the great mass of unprofessional teachers, who have more influence upon the boy's life than the professional teachers. The tone of voice in which the father complains of his underdone or overdone steak has an effect upon Tom. The way in which the mother gives her commands to the servants also has its effects. Tom is influenced by the remarks of the fellows on the street corners. He is influenced by the pictures on the bill boards. The time is coming—I see it has not yet arrived in your city—when the women of our cities will convene, and they will take effective means to demand of the authorities that these vile caricatures shall no longer be flaunted in their faces from every dead wall and every other available spot where they can be placed. [Applause.] Tom is also influenced and educated by the arrangement of the school room; by the grounds about the building; by the daily paper, by the news which creates an excitement, and about which people talk on the streets. All of these things have part in moulding Tom's character, and are counted among his teachers.

Next I come to consider the question, "What shall Tom's teachers teach Tom?" As preliminaries I want to mention three things that I consider should be taught to Tom. He should be taught to think on his own account. It is not enough to be able to transfer the printed pages from the book to his brain, and then to repeat them to his teacher; in short, to make an echo of the boy. Some fellows will stand up before their teachers and repeat correctly what the printed page contains, and the teacher, listening to the boy and looking at the book, will tell him he has done very well, and he will be promoted, and after a while a diploma will be given to—a tarred stick. Parents should at the table put to their boys all sorts of possible exigencies, and ask them how they would get out of the difficulty. They will thus become trained to use their judgment. I do not deprecate book knowledge nor undervalue training the memory, but I do exalt that which trains the judgment.

Your son should also be taught to speak with accuracy. He should be trained to tell with accuracy and fidelity to truth what he sees. He should also be trained to express himself in good English. Train the boy to habits of careful observation, and to be truthful about the minutest details. That is the only scientific way of study and expression.

Tom should also be trained in ethics. I am not over-particular about religious services in business houses, nor in railroad depots, nor in the public schools. But I insist that it should be given in the home. The children should be taught to distinguish between the right way and the wrong way. They should also be taught to be considerate of the happiness and comfort of others.

But there are more important things in which Tom should be trained. He should be taught to consider himself as a person and not as a thing; a cause and not an effect. There is a vast deal of nonsense taught about heredity and circumstances and habit. I want Tom taught to overcome inheritance, trample circumstances under foot, and break the power of habit, and stand as a man, and not as a thing.

He should also be taught that he is a power and not an effect; that, being the centre of power, he is independent. I detest tramps, whether rich or poor. I honor the boy who works his way. The man who learns the value of money will respect all who have to earn their living by hard toil. There are no classes here, except those formed by culture and refinement.

I would not have Tom forget the law of independence. Therefore I believe in the public school. It puts every candidate for citizenship alongside of his fellow citizen. Thus he is trained in independence, responsibility and individuality. I suppose this is the reason of some opposition to the public school system. The more ecclesiastical is this opposition the more dangerous it is. But we will teach them that in this country the public school will continue to exist, and withered be the hand that tampers with it. [Applause.]

Lastly, never give Tom up. He may be dull; but do not use sarcasm or speak with contempt. A teacher who will so treat a pupil ought to be discharged forthwith. And never give him up mor lly. And though he be wayward, kindness and gentleness and prayerfulness will some day have its reward.

The lecture abounded in apt illustrations and touches of humor which added largely to its interest.

At the close a reception to the speaker was given in the church parlors, which was attended by most of those present at the lecture.

NOT "LIQUOR IN A CLUB CAR."

It Was David Prescott Hall's Tin Cup Rolling Upon the Floor That Produced the Laugh.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I have just read a copy of your issue of the 11th inst. Will you permit me the use of your columns to reply to an item contained in that issue under the heading "Liquor in a Club Car"?

On Monday, the 8th inst., I left New York on the seven minute boat for the 5:15 train. Until the arrival of the last boat there were only three persons in the rear portion of the Club Car Fanwood besides myself. In extracting a paper from my hand-sachel, a tin cup which I had bought for use in the kitchen rolled out upon the floor and produced a laugh.

It is a demonstration that the item referred to was written or inspired by one of these three persons. Two of them are friends of mine, and I have every reason to believe that neither of them had any share in its preparation. The third member of the group was one who, on the way out to Fanwood, took occasion more than once to express his determination to get even with me for my share in the defence of a recent suit, and I have no manner of doubt but that the item in question is the commencement of his efforts in that direction. I have also reason to believe that it will be followed by others.

DAVID P. HALL.

A careful search through the columns of THE PRESS of the 11th inst., fails to discover any reference to the correspondent above, either by name or inference, unless it is wherein the following intimates that he is not admitted to practise at the New Jersey bar. The article Mr. Hall objects to is this:

LIQUOR IN A CLUB CAR.

It has always been supposed that the Fanwood Club Car was governed by similar rules pertaining to the Howard Club Car of Plainfield. In the case of the Howard Car no intoxicating liquors are permitted, but last Monday evening, while hurriedly opening his satchel on the Fanwood Car, a prominent lawyer of Scotch Plains—who, however, does not practise in New Jersey—let fall on the floor a very suspicious utensil which in the eyes of the initiated resembled a most important adjunct to a whisky bottle. When asked to explain he remarked "I am a gentleman and above reproach."

Certain too personal references in Mr. Hall's communication, have been eliminated. No attack of the sort has ever been made upon him or anyone else in these columns, and neither he nor anyone else can attack others herein.

An Important Notice to Parents.

The Young Men's Christian Association are most fortunate in having secured as leader of their boys' singing class E A. Embury of Washington avenue. Mr. Embury, who was formerly a pupil of Dr. Messiter of Trinity church, New York, is a teacher of over ten years' experience in the training of male choirs.

The class which will meet in the afternoon will be taught to read music and will receive the most careful instruction in voice culture. The conditions of membership in the class will be as follows:

1.—A suitable age.

2.—A sufficient voice to warrant a good result from training.

3.—A written assurance from parents that they desire their sons to join the class and that they will encourage them to attend regularly and promptly.

4.—A promise that the boys when advanced shall in return for their instruction impart the benefit they have received by singing at the Y. M. C. A. meetings when so requested.

Boys under twelve years of age who are interested are requested to meet Mr. Embury at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, Wednesday afternoon, at 4:30.

STEPHEN CAHOONE,
Chairman Committee on Boys' Work.

A New Tooth Powder.

IN THE PRESS to-day Dr. Chas. R. Thiers advertises a tooth-powder especially prepared for children, but suitable as well for adults. The formula was prepared by one of the most eminent and leading dentists of New York city. The preparation fully meets all requirements of a tooth-powder, and is claimed to be one of the best preparations for the mouth, teeth and gums on the market. A box of this powder will be given to all school children who will visit the doctor's office to have their teeth cleaned. The box is oval, made of one of the most beautiful composition, in two parts, which fit together. In a deep box below, the bulk of the powder is kept; and in a shallow tray above, a small quantity of powder is placed for immediate use, thus always insuring a fresh and clean supply in the bottom box, and keeping the powder for use in the best form of box for taking it with the brush.

—Young men who would like to join a free singing class should apply at the Y. M. C. A. rooms.

INVISIBLE CAMERA.

Necktie Furnished with a Complete Photographing Outfit.

We have all heard of the photographic opera-glasses and hat; but here we have something more cunning. It is a necktie provided with a pin. The latter is an objective, and the necktie is a camera. When any one approaches you and speaks to you at a distance of two or even three feet, you press a rubber bulb concealed in your pocket, and you have the portrait of your interlocutor. This ingenious little apparatus, with which also general views may be taken, was devised by Edmond Block, a Frenchman.

Fig. 1 represents the photographic necktie, and Fig. 2 gives a front view of it as it is to be worn by the operator, the metallic camera, which is flat and very light, being hidden under the vest. Fig. 1 gives a back view, the cover of the camera being removed to show the interior mechanism, comprising six small frames which are capable of passing in succession before the objective, and which permit of obtaining six negatives. The instrument may be constructed with twelve or eighteen frames.

The apparatus is operated as follows: The necktie having been adjusted the shutter is set by a pull upon the button A (Fig. 1, No. 2), which passes under the vest. In order to change the plate, it is necessary to turn from left to right the button B, which has been introduced into a button-hole of the vest, and which simulates a button of that garment.

This button must be turned until the effect of a locking, which occurs at C (Fig. 1, No. 1) is perceived, and which puts the plate exactly before the objective. In order to open the latter it is necessary to press the rubber bulb, D, which has been put into the trousers pocket. The rubber tube E, passes under the vest and serves to transmit the action of the hand.

In order to charge the apparatus it is opened at the bottom by turning the small springs; the sensitized plates are put into the frames and the springs are turned back to their former position.

The apparatus is scarcely any thicker than the ordinary necktie. The six frames are carried before the objective through an endless chain, as shown in the figure.

MADAGASCAR NATIVES.

The Sakalava Warrior a Type of the Various Tribes.

The Sakalava warrior is a typical specimen of the dark-skinned tribes of Madagascar. These tribes are very numerous, and people the entire west coast region and sections of the interior. They are separated from one another by forests, mountain ranges, extensive plains, rivers and other natural boundaries, but are constantly engaged in petty international fighting. A Sakalava ablebodied man would never think of venturing out of his own village unless fully armed, as here shown, with an old flint-lock over his shoulder, one or more spears in his hand, a shield, a powder flask, and last, but by no means least, strings of beads and charms around the neck or tied around the wrist. The charms are most essential, and are supposed to render the wearer invulnerable. The Sakalavas are slaves to superstitious fears, and regard one another with great suspicion. If stories are to be believed, they are so full of mistrust that they dare not wash both sides of their face at one time lest some foe should take them unawares. First one half of the face is rubbed and then the other, a method that admits of watchful observation by the eye left free. Of course, this is a story told in derision, and must be taken cum grano salis; but that they are completely victimized by ignorant belief in fetishes is quite notorious.

SAKALAVA WARRIOR.

Opera Glass Handles and Cases.

Opera glass holders are now considered a necessity for the article. They are of gold, silver, aluminum, pearl and shell. The folding handles are not so convenient as the straight ones, which also admit of the choicest engraving. Opera glass cases of fine undressed kid or chamois are lined with bright satin, and some are embroidered with silver threads. In the lining is a place for the holder, handkerchief, etc. The chatelaine opera glass cases are of plush, with a silk cord handle finished with a silver ornament or clasp. They are in sections, each tightly closed with a spring catch, intended for the glass, tickets, handkerchief, bon bons and smelling bottle.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Herrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

Reduction in Prices for Cash!

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

AFTER DECEMBER 15, 1890,

The Plainfield Produce Company

Will Sell All Goods Strictly for Cash!

We will present a few reasons for making this change in our manner of doing business. In the first place we have our Hay, Grain and Produce inspected and bought direct from the Producer for Cash. Thereby obtaining better quality, also saving one profit, which would go to the commission merchant if bought from sample the usual way.

In the second place any concern doing an extensive credit business must get larger profits to offset slow and worthless accounts, of which with the greatest care there will be some. And the customer who is ready to pay and does pay his bills when presented, is the one who must pay these larger profits.

By selling for cash we avoid losses from such accounts, and can afford to sell for smaller profits.

We ask for a share of your patronage. Give us a call and we will show you how low we can sell for CASH, instead of how high we must sell for credit.

WITH FIRE-EATERS.

Tricks of Professional Siderographists and How They Are Done.

Swallowing Flames for a Living—Latest Wrinkles in the Craft, Including Uses of Chemistry and Electricity—Behind the Scenes.

At the present time in this country there are a half dozen men and women who go about from dime museum to variety hall and from variety hall to a "store show" and astonish the natives. All these people do seemingly the most wonderful things in that line, and as the business is difficult to learn their numbers are limited.

The present corps of fiery entertainers have, however, been lately augmented by a brother and sister, whose ability in that line puts every thing in the shade ever seen here. They are known on the bills as Earle and Ollie Salambo, and are further dignified for show purposes as the "Human Electrical Dynameters." The Salambos touch each other with their fingers and produce sparks; they open their mouths and a stream of flame two feet long issues from them if they but touch their lips with the ends of their fingers; they swallow boiling wax and blow sparks—showers of sparks—from the end of hollow glass tube; they take a gas pipe with four gas jets on it, and by the simple process of putting an end in the mouth and drawing their hands across the gas jets, four good-sized flames burst into brilliancy. A tallow candle is held in the air and Miss Ollie draws a digit down her brother's arm and a spark leaps from there to the candle and ignites it. They dip the pipe into a bowl of soapsuds and blow a bubble from it, which when touched by the other ignites and bursts; and, in short, they do half a hundred things by the means of fire that seem positively marvelous.

WHERE THEY APPLY THE COATING

Fire-eaters always had a fascination for me, and I was always curious to know how they managed to masticate so much flame and escape without seared and blistered mouths and lips; and every time that I saw one of these people perform I hovered round and questioned them to get at the means of doing the trick if possible, and found after all that it wasn't so very wonderful.

It was only steady practice and constant coating of their mouths and hands and soles of their feet with a solution, and the business was comparatively easy, and they really did not swallow any thing at all. Each performer has his own recipe for the solution he drinks and rinses his mouth and hands with, but the principal ingredients of it in each case remains the same. They are sulphur and alum. When the mouth is rinsed out in that it forms a sort of an artificial skin or film that it takes a little while to destroy, and as long as that coating remains there is absolutely no danger, and the rest of their wonderful tricks are nothing but a delusion and in most cases sleight-of-hand.

There is one performer who is known in museum circles as the "Human Lamp," and he makes lots of money by doing this act. He drinks some kerosene oil in view of the audience, puts a wick in his mouth, lights the wick with a match, puts a lamp chimney over the flame and burns merrily away. He is such a simple fakir that I feel it my duty to tell just how he does it. On his stand is a lamp half filled with oil. From time to time he pours what purports to be oil in the lamp. It is not. It is water, and of course the oil already in the lamp floats on top of the water; then he lights the oil, to prove what he poured out was oil. He gravely drinks from the oil can, puts a wick saturated with sweet oil in his mouth, lights the wick and there you are. Very simple, is it not?

Now there is another gentleman who walks on red hot bars, and seizing a horseshoe heated red hot in a forge near by bites the heated ends off and pretends to swallow them. He is not so much of a trickster as the "Human Lamp," and really earns all the money he gets, for although his bare feet are coated with a sulphuric solution and his mouth and lips well plastered with the same, it is real hard work to bite pieces of iron in halves even if the heat makes them soft and pliable, and if they are kept in the mouth too long, in spite of the film, they are very hot and uncomfortable indeed. This gentleman calls himself St. Elmo, and another part of his performance is to take oakum balls saturated with blazing pitch in his mouth, a half dozen in rapid succession, and that trick gets more applause than the biting of the horseshoe, but it is very easy of accomplishment, because the very minute you put fire in a place where there is no air it immediately goes out, and so the instant St. Elmo closes his mouth the fire is quenched in the blazing ball, and all there is about that is the disagreeable taste of the oakum ball and a little warmth, which may not be pleasant but can be borne for fifty dollars a week.

There is a companion performer to the "Human Lamp" known sometimes as "Natural Gas," or the "Human Gas Well." He gets more money than the man who drinks water for oil, and deserves too. What he does is precisely the basis of all the work done by the Salambos.

Instead of eating cotton and pitch and wax when heated he coats his mouth with his own private solution and unseen stoops down and picks up a round worsted ball saturated with gasoline. Now gasoline is very volatile, and when mixed with air forms a vapor that is easily ignited and gives a very fierce and blue flame. A gasoline ball held in the mouth and blown steadily through; the vapor goes through the gas tube and is ignited, and that's all there is to the "Human Gas Well."

The Salambos, who do so many wonderful things in this line, are tricksters, just like the rest of the profession, but they are entitled to credit because they have combined in their act all the improvements known, and taken advantage of electricity, and withal made a very effective and picturesque and entertaining exhibition. The way they produce sparks from each other and ignite the gas flame is as simple as A B C.

Behind the scenes there is a battery, and to Miss Ollie's body is attached a very thin silk-woven wire, and to her brother's a similar wire. It's easy enough to understand then that with considerable current on when they touch each other a spark is generated, and whether they place a flower, a piece of see, a metal point or a silk handkerchief, or the tip of your finger or any thing, in fact, which is a conductor of electricity, the spark is bound to come. And naturally if the gasoline vapor is in its vicinity it ignites. They coat their mouths with the solution the same as the rest do, but claim they do not use sulphur, but a better substance. That may easily be, because Mr. Earle Salambo is the son of an electrician and a chemist, and it is quite possible he has discovered something in chemistry which takes the place of sulphur and alum for that purpose. But it is gasoline he uses on the little saturated balls in spite of the fact of a very vigorous denial on the part of his sister.

Miss Ollie is a humorist, and when I asked her if that was not gasoline I smelt she gravely said: "No, but the peculiar odor was electricity." She also claims that her brother and herself charge themselves with the negative and positive current to the extent of twelve hundred volts apiece before going on the stage, but I think that she has taken advantage of my guilelessness, because twelve hundred volts is usually considered fatal, and on the stage of the theater, where they did their act, I saw the little wire connected with their bodies from the battery behind the scenes. And because she insisted that they did not use gasoline or a solution to coat their mouths with during their act, I show the back of the pretty little centerpiece of their stage setting.

Rejoice for Small Favors.

"I see Congress is over and the members have left Washington."

"Yes," said the old mugwump, "I'm glad they've left something."—Life.

AN ILLUSTRATED LECTURE

Three Tall Americans Return an English Lecturer from Business.

Mr. Robinson, six feet high, builder of Tremont Temple, and Rev. Phillips Brooks, six feet two inches high, both of Boston, and Rev. Dr. McVicker, six feet four inches high, of Philadelphia, in company made a trip over the water.

En route they determined that when they should arrive on the other side they would travel apart, lest three such tall men in company would provoke remark. But, arriving at Leeds and learning that a lecture was to be delivered to working-men on America, our friends determined to hear the lecture.

Entering the hall separately they took seats apart. As the lecturer proceeded his utter ignorance of America soon became manifest to the three Americans. Finally, however, a statement concerning the size of Americans was too absurd to be endured in silence. The speaker had barely time to conclude a sentence asserting that Americans are proverbially short of stature, never exceeding at the utmost five feet ten inches, when Mr. Robinson arose and said: "My friends, I am an American, and, as you can see, I measure fully six feet. If there is any other American in the house I request him to stand up." An expression of surprise was followed by roars of laughter as Dr. Brooks arose and said: "I am an American, and my size, six feet two inches, occasions no particular remark in America. If there is any other American in the house I in turn request him to stand up." After a lapse of a few seconds, in order to give the lecturer a little time to recover himself, Dr. McVicker slowly raised his majestic figure to its full height of six feet four, and began: "I am an Am—" But he got no further. The audience had lost all control of themselves, and the speaker's disappearance from the stage brought the entertainment to a close.—Christian Nation.

HOW THESE GIRLS LOVE ONE ANOTHER.

Winifred (insinuatingly)—Mr. Randolph comes to see you every day, doesn't he?

Julia (with the sailor hat)—Oh, yes: but he's very easily entertained.

Winifred—He must be.—Life.

An Unfailing Remedy.

Mr. Shoddy—I am going to move out of the house I'm living in now. The chimney smokes dreadfully, and I don't know how to stop it.

Candid Friend—I'll tell you how to stop it from smoking. Just give it one of those cigars you gave me the other day. If that don't cure it of smoking nothing else will.—Texas Siftings.

A Boston Burglary.

Mrs. Leahey—Hullo, Bill!

Mr. Leahey—Well, I'll be eternally jeewhizzled!

Mrs. Leahey—What's up?

Mr. Leahey—I'm a lamb if I ain't got mixed up on these crooked streets an' went an' broke inter my own house!—Judge.

Carrying Religion Into Business.

Youth—I have called for the amateur photograph camera I selected this morning.

Photograph Supply Clerk (a member of the Y. M. C. A.)—Here it is, sir, all ready for you. Take it, my friend; but remember that every profane word you utter will be recorded above.—N. Y. Weekly.

AN EXPERT.

Foreman (of logging camp)—Can you handle an axe?

Employe—Well, I should smile if I couldn't! Why, for five years I did nothing but engrave portraits for the daily papers.—Light.

Domestic Economy.

Wife—I wish you would buy me one of those patent inkstands that hold the ink in tightly when accidentally upset.

Husband—Those inkstands are expensive. I think it would be cheaper to spank the baby.—N. Y. Weekly.

Another Case.

Dolley—Hello, Goslin, isn't that powder on your shoulder?

Goslin—So it is. I can't imagine where it came from.

Dolley—Of course not. You never suspected that Miss Mabel's face was loaded.—West Shore.

The Antidote.

Mr. Briggs (at the restaurant)—Bring me some limburger.

Mrs. Briggs (dining with him)—Bring me some chloroform.—Jury.

SHED KNOCK SUCH NOTIONS OUT OF HIM.

Harry—If you do not marry me, I will commit suicide.

Maud (scornfully)—And if I do you'll wish you had.—Jury.

LICENSE NOT NEEDED.

A Couple Who Changed Their Minds About Marrying.

ELEVEN o'clock the other night a minister was called upon to perform the marriage ceremony for a middle-aged couple, each of whom had probably been married before. He asked if they had the license, and the man replied:

"License, no! What about a license?"

"You must have one."

"Where do I get it?"

"At the county clerk's office, but it's too late to night."

"Then I won't marry him at all!" said the woman.

"Who wants you to?" he demanded.

"A man who is fool enough to forget the license can't marry me."

"You go on! I wouldn't have you if you were the last woman on earth!"

"My friends, you can get a license tomorrow," said the minister.

"I don't want one," replied the man.

"And I'm sure I don't," added the woman, and they withdrew and walked off in different directions.—Detroit Free Press.

Know a Good Thing.

It is related of Russell Sage that while attending a meeting of one of the numerous boards of directors of which he is a member, a box of cigars was brought by order of a moderately well-to-do member of the board. The box was passed to Mr. Sage, who mechanically took out a cigar. Holding it to his nose he exclaimed: "Ah, that has a fine flavor. What do you pay for these cigars, Mr. ——?"

"Only twenty dollars a box, twenty cents a piece," was the reply.

"What?" cried the frugal Russell in a tone of intense disapproval, "twenty cents for a cigar! That is too steep for me. I can not afford such an expensive luxury."

And Mr. Sage walked over to the table on which the cigar box had been placed and took a couple more of the cigars and put them in his pocket.—Chicago Evening Journal.

An Easier Task.

Caller—I have come for an explanation.

Editor—Well, well, my dear sir, there's no need of any harsh words. If we have misrepresented you in any way we will be most happy to make amends.

Caller—It is not a personal matter at all. I only wanted an explanation of your last Sunday's editorial on "The Psychological Aspects of Modern Hypnotism."

Editor—If it is the same to you I'd rather fight.—Indianapolis Journal.

He Temporizes.

Mrs. Gayboy (severely)—What time did you get home last night?

Gayboy (cautiously)—Oh, a little after dark.

Mrs. Gayboy—After dark! Why it was daylight when you came in!

Gayboy—Well, isn't that after dark?—West Shore.

Back to the Beginner.

Cumso—What an absurd waste of time it is to gather leaves in the fall, as ladies do. I wonder who started the custom.

Banks—Eve, I fancy. But still she didn't do it till after the fall.—N. Y. Herald.

The Exclusion Was Limited.

Mrs. Larkin (horrified)—Why, my dear, you mustn't read that book. Don't you know it has been excluded from the mails?

Miss Larkin—That's all right, ma. A female has got it now.—Jury.

Strong Attachments.

"It's strange," remarked the tramp, examining the rents in his garments, "I never felt any liking for dogs whatever, yet they nearly all become strongly attached to me as soon as they see me."—Boston Herald.

The Ball Season.

First Dude—That's an awful bad fitting hat you have on.

Second Dude—Yes, but I attended a swell ball last night, and my head isn't built to fit any and every hat.—Texas Siftings.

The Will Just as Good.

Dying Uncle—I intended bestowing my property upon you while I lived, but death has cut my purpose short.

Nephew—Don't mention it uncle. I'll gladly accept the will for the deed.—Chicago Post.

He Can't Help It.

Mrs. Phunnyman—I notice that your friend Pultzer is inclined to obesity of late.

Mr. Phunnyman—No, indeed; it's very much against his inclination.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Give Even the Devil His Due.

She—I can't endure him. He is a man of too small caliber for me.

He—Oh, you do him an injustice. He is a tremendous bore.—Munsey's Weekly.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

Sleeplessness Cured. 4

I am glad to testify that I used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic with the best success for sleeplessness, and believe that it is really a great relief for suffering humanity.

E. FRANK, Pastor.
St. Severin, Keyserton P. O., Pa.

Pleased and Grateful.

New York City, May, 1890.

I express my entire satisfaction with Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son, who is now nineteen years of age, had been afflicted with epileptic fits since he was six years of age. I tried everything that money could purchase, but no permanent relief was effected, now I can cheerfully recommend, and deem it my duty to advise sufferers to at least try Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son has not had any symptoms of the disease since he used the remedy. I am therefore pleased and grateful.

Utah House, 300, 8th Av. N. LENHARD.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

THERE MAY BE WAR

A Report that the Sioux Will Seek Revenge.

GEN. BROOKE MEANS BUSINESS.

Troops Sent to Capture the Indians in the Bad Lands.

Two Strike Willing to Surrender—Settlers in the Country Around Bismarck Frightened—Further Particulars About the Shooting of Sitting Bull—California Indians Start the Ghost Dances.

STANDING ROCK, N. D., Dec. 19.—Word has just come in that the Sioux will avenge the death of Sitting Bull. The Hawk has been sent West with important messages, and unless he is intercepted there will probably be a general uprising within 48 hours.

The chiefs declare the Great Father has, by seizing and killing the big medicine man, severed the last link of respect which kept them under his control. Gen. Brooke is on dangerous ground at Pine Ridge, as most of his forces have been sent forward to the Bad Lands, and he may be overwhelmed in a mad rush by the Sioux.

Two strike is within five miles of this agency with 184 lodges, principally old men, women and children. He has sent in word that he will arrive to-day and do whatever General Brooke says. This offer of Two Strike stopped the movement of the troops for a while. They are, however, having everything in readiness to start at a moment's notice.

A Telegram from the Front.

CHICAGO, Dec. 17.—The following telegram has been received at the Army Headquarters, dated at Pine Ridge Agency:

"All the Indians who can be brought in are now here or near here, leaving about 200 bucks in the Bad Lands, who refuse to listen to anyone or anything. Against those I will send a sufficient force to capture or fight them. All has been done that can be done. The Indians now have a great many stolen horses and cattle with them. I hope to be able to end the matter now.

["Signed.] J. R. BROOKE, Brig.-Gen."

THE SIOUX BATTLE.

Sitting Bull's Followers Made a Rush for the Bad Lands.

[illegible] between the Indian police and Sitting Bull's followers, the firing was heavy and deadly; nearly every man who was hit was killed.

In the furious fusilade Sitting Bull fell out of his saddle, pierced by a bullet, but it is not known whether it was fired by the charging party or one of the police. The son of Sitting Bull was shot at almost the first volley of the police.

The Indians fired with deadly accuracy and nearly drove the police from the field. If the cavalry had not come at this time, it is probable that the force would have been annihilated.

The soldiers were quick to enter into the action. A skirmish line was thrown out, and then, kneeling and firing as they advanced, the troops, with the machine guns playing over their heads, poured a withering fire into the savages. Sitting Bull's body, which had been abandoned by the police, was secured, as well as that of his son, and will be taken to Standing Rock. After the fight was over the followers of the dead chief struck out at a killing pace for the Bad Lands.

The cavalry followed for but a short distance and then returned to the camp, and took possession of the bodies of Sitting Bull and his son.

Four policemen were killed and three wounded, and it is thought that eight of the hostiles were killed.

Sitting Bull's followers, when they fled up the Grand River, left behind them all their tents and their families, which were taken possession of by the soldiers, and will be returned to the agency.

Settlers Fear the Indians.

BISMARCK, N. D., Dec. 17.—The country around here is terribly wrought up over the killing of Sitting Bull. Instead of creating an easy feeling, it has aroused much apprehension. It is feared that many families of settlers will feel the vengeance of Sitting Bull's followers. Sitting Bull's son, who was killed, was a bright youth, only 12 years old. It is expected that the settlers will flock to Bismarck and Mandan by the hundreds as soon as Sitting Bull's death becomes known.

California Indians Dancing.

CHICO, Cala., Dec. 17.—The Indians in the ranches near here have begun the ghost dance. This dance is held every year about January, but was hastened by reports of Indians from Nevada who said the Messiah would surely come.

Secretary Proctor's Views.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—Secretary Proctor said he thought the killing of Sitting Bull would have the effect of bringing the Indian troubles to a head, and that very speedily.

The Clearfield Bank Failure.

CLEARFIELD, Pa., Dec. 17.—The liabilities of the Clearfield County Bank, which closed yesterday, are $350,000 and the assets $650,000. The president of the bank, ex-Senator Wm. A. Wallace, has appointed the following assignees: A. O. Smith and W. E. Wallace of Clearfield, and J. S. N. McCarroll of Harrisburg. The depositors are secured by a mortgage on real estate for three times the amount of deposits.

Bank Teller Blauvelt Disappears.

PATERSON, N. J., Dec. 17.—Chas. Blauvelt, note teller in the First National Bank of Paterson, is reported to have absconded, but the bank officials refuse to state what amount is missing, but it is believed to be several thousand. It is said that he had an accomplice outside of the bank.

FIGHTING IN CORK.

Mr. McCarthy Hustled by the Mob and No Priests Struck.

CORK, Dec. 17.—A large crowd gathered at the railway station here an hour previous to the coming of Messrs. McCarthy and Healy and their associates, and made a fierce and hostile demonstration on their arrival. Sticks were brandished in the air and a few fights ensued between members of the two factions.

Priests who tried to pacify the people were brutally attacked. Canon Lyons, who is 70 years old, was knocked violently to the ground. Father Barrett, being struck, turned on his assailants and called them cowards. Mr. McCarthy was hustled about by the mob and prevented from reaching his carriage. He went to his hotel in another carriage, followed by a hooting crowd. He addressed a meeting inside the hotel, while the Parnellites held a rival meeting outside.

ON TRIAL FOR HIS LIFE.

Hazen Bellware Charged With a Brutal Murder.

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 19.—The trial of Hazen Bellware for the murder of Frank Miner, a citizen of East Hartford, has begun in the Superior Court. A jury was obtained with considerable difficulty, owing to the notoriety of the case.

The murder was particularly brutal, and without the slightest provocation. On the night of September 18 Miner was awakened by the noise of a drunken quarrel. He arose, and, looking out of the window, saw Bellware and several of his companions outside of his gate struggling. They were intoxicated, and using very foul language. He requested them to leave, but they refused.

Bellware told Miner that if he came outside he would shoot him. Miner opened a door, but as soon as he did so Bellware fired two shots at him, both of which took effect. He died an hour later. Bellware asserts that he did the shooting in self defence, but his companions are ready to testify that it was without provocation.

THE SAWTELLE TRIAL.

A Jury Quickly Secured and Counsel Make Their Opening Arguments.

DOVER, N. H., Dec. 17.—A jury was secured in the Sawtelle murder case after calling 52 names. The indictment, in three counts, was read and the jury sworn. Solicitor Kivel then made the opening statement for the State.

Counsel for Sawtelle made application [illegible] but no decision was made, the matter being left to the discretion of the presiding judge, who may decide at any time before the State's case is rested.

County Attorney Kivel opened the State's case to the jury, closing with a request for permission to add to his remarks after inspection of the ground where the murder is committed.

The court then adjourned until to-morrow. To-day the jury went to Rochester and will go over the entire country covered by the case.

A Lineman Falls Ninety Feet.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 17.—Lineman James Durkins, while at work on top of a 90-foot electric light pole at the corner of Market and Mulberry streets, fell to the sidewalk and was fatally injured. It is supposed that he received a shock from an electric light wire, which caused him to lose his hold upon the pole. He was 30 years old, and lived at 407 Halsey street, with a wife and two children.

Two Railroad Employes Drowned.

HOLYOKE, Mass., Dec. 17.—Last evening a coal train standing on a spur of the track of the Connecticut River Railroad leading into George R. Dickinson Company's paper mill, broke in two and the rear car ran down the track into the canal, carrying two men, Thomas Carroll and Michael Daley, who were shoveling coal, with it. Both men were drowned.

Dempsey Puts Up His Forfeit.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 17.—Jack Dempsey put up his forfeit of $1,000 to fight Fitzsimmons, and the match is now binding on both sides. Fitzsimmons sent word that he was unwell and could not meet Dempsey, but sent Jimmie Carroll to represent him. Dempsey leaves to-night for Galveston, where he is to train for the match.

Duel With Rifles in France.

PARIS, Dec. 17.—A duel was fought at Guadaloupe between Governor Feillet and M. Cicerou, a member of the Council General, as the result of a violent altercation during the sitting of the Council. The parties fought with rifles at 60 paces, and M. Feillet was shot through both thighs.

Teemer Accounted For.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 17.—The report that Oarsman Teemer had mysteriously disappeared is untrue. He left this city some time since and sailed from San Francisco two weeks ago for Australia, for the purpose of rowing McLean.

Mining Resumed.

WILKESBARRE, Dec. 17.—All the collieries in this region operated by the Lehigh Valley Coal Company that have been idle for some time have just resumed operations. This gives employment to many thousand men and boys

WASHINGTON TOPICS

Another Senatorial Caucus to be Held To-Night.

FINAL ACTION LOOKED FOR.

A Clamor For Financial Legislation Having Effect With the Senators.

A Vote on the Apportionment Bill Ordered for This Afternoon—There May be a Holiday Recess—A Bill to Prohibit Speculation in Gold—The Postal Telegraph Bill to be Considered Soon.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—The necessity for financial legislation to restore a better equilibrium to the unsettled business conditions throughout the country is likely to result in speedy action on the part of the Republican Senators at to-night's caucus to be held at Senator Cameron's house.

The various members of the caucus committee held informal meetings in the cloak room to-day, with a view to a better understanding among themselves, but nothing definite was agreed upon.

This caucus will, it is believed, be final. Before it will come the different propositions which remained unacted upon at Monday night's meeting. These are, in brief, the purchase of 12,000,000 ounces of surplus silver within the next year; the offsetting of national bank note retirement with additional purchases of silver whenever the contraction falls below $180,000,000; allowing the banks to issue notes to the par value of their bonds, and to continue their charters with a minimum bond deposit of $0,000.

A refusal on the part of the free-coinage Senators to bind themselves to the caucus decision might result in a free coinage amendment to whatever financial legislation may be proposed, and this would undoubtedly carry, despite the opposition of the conservatives. It is believed, however, that at to-night's caucus they will be persuaded to accept a compromise as a matter of party policy, leaving the subject of free coinage over until the next Congress convenes.

GOLD SPECULATION.

A Bill Introduced in the House to Prohibit Speculation in Gold.

[illegible] bill to prohibit speculation in gold and silver bullion and certificates representing gold and silver bullion with trust companies and other organizations, was introduced in the House by Mr. Hopkins, of Illinois.

The bill makes it unlawful for any person or organization to buy or agree to sell and deliver at a future time to another person or organization any gold or silver bullion, or certificates representing gold or silver bullion with any bank, trust company or other corporation, when, at the time of the agreement, the party agreeing to make the delivery is not the owner of the gold, silver or certificates contracted and agreed to be delivered.

The bill also forbids the sale of gold or silver on margins and it prohibits stock exchanges from listing certificates representing deposits of gold or silver bullion with any corporation to be bought or sold in the exchanges. Penalties from $1,000 to $10,000 fine, or imprisonment for not less than six months or more than five years, are provided for.

IN SENATE AND HOUSE.

A Vote on the Apportionment Bill to be Taken This Afternoon.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—The Senate passed the Morgan resolution calling for information about moneys paid John I. Davenport as supervisor of elections.

Senator Dolph's resolution inquiring whether the right to vote has been abridged in any of the States was discussed without action.

Speeches on the Federal Elections bill were made by Messrs. Morgan, Kenna and Dolph.

In the House the Apportionment bill was taken up and discussed at length. It was agreed that a vote be taken on it this afternoon.

Mr. Mills' concurrent resolution for a holiday recess from December 22 to January 5, was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Two Aldermen Arrested for Bribery.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Dec. 17.—Aldermen John McLennan and Charles C. Candee were arrested on warrants sworn out by Mayor Cowie, charging them respectively with bribery and forgery in their official capacity. They were admitted to bail.

Convicted of Forgery.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., Dec. 17.—Stephen Tower, a wealthy and respected farmer, was convicted of forgery here in the Court of Sessions. Last summer, Tower was hard pressed for money to pay his taxes, and forged a note for $150.

One Year for a Postoffice Clerk.

BOSTON, Dec. 17.—Wm. M. Donahue, the postoffice money clerk recently convicted of raising money orders, was sentenced to one year in the Reformatory.

A BRAVE SOLDIER GONE.

Major-General Alfred Howe Terry Passes Away at New Haven.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 17.—Major-General Alfred Howe Terry is dead at his residence on Hillhouse avenue in this city, after a long illness, due to Bright's disease of the kidneys. For three years he had suffered a great deal, the first attacks of the ailment dating as far back as the summer in the Sioux campaign of 1876, when he persisted in remaining in the field, though a part of the time he was not able to sit in the saddle.

On his retirement from the army at his own request, he soon after bought an elegant residence on Hillhouse avenue, and there he has since resided in the company of his maiden sisters. The recent death of one of his unmarried sisters no doubt contributed to hasten his end.

His brother, Mr. J. W. Terry, of Englewood, N. J., and two of his sisters were at his death bed.

The funeral will take place on Friday afternoon. Admiral Foote Grand Army Post will attend but there will be no military display. The interment will be in Grove Street Cemetery. The General has left a considerable estate.

Entering the service at the very outbreak of the war, General Terry rose rapidly to higher and higher distinction, and proved his bravery and ability at every step.

For his capture of Fort Fisher he received the thanks of Congress. But higher than this rare honor was the gratitude of the country won by his long devotion and brilliant services.

Secretary Proctor's Tribute.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—A general order has been issued by the War Department, in which Secretary Proctor reviews the military career of General Terry, and says: "General Terry was one of the most gentle, kind and brave characters that ever served his country. He was an ideal soldier and gentleman, whose honest, truthful and upright life gained him the highest esteem of all who knew him."

THE CREW REACH SHORE.

The Steam Barge City of Utica Founders Near Wilson's Point.

SOUTHPORT, Conn., Dec. 17.—Storm-tossed and nearly dead from exhaustion, the crew of the ill-fated barge City of Utica, which yesterday was supposed to be lost, reached shore at Wilson's Point, after a hard struggle with the waters of [illegible] barge left New York Tuesday afternoon and proceeded as far as the head of the Sound. There she was obliged to cast anchor late Wednesday afternoon, owing to the gale.

Late Wednesday night the gale moderated, and Captain Martin again started on his trip. Thursday night he was off Norwalk, and the wind was blowing a gale. At this point of the trip the machinery of the barge broke down, and then they were at the mercy of the winds and waves.

About midnight the barge struck a sunken rock off Tavern Island, southwest of Wilson's Point, and stove a large hole in her bottom. The barge began to fill and in a short time was nearly filled with water. Most of the crew were abed when the barge struck and at the sound of the shock they rushed on deck with their clothes in their hands. The lifeboat was cleared away and the captain and his wife and little ones were the first placed in it. They were followed by the crew of three.

Two Victims of Gas.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 17.—Two more people were found asphyxiated by gas. They were Mrs. Seneca Fell and her granddaughter, Olive Torrence, of 1304 North Sixth street. They retired at 9 p. m. As they did not get up at their usual time, the door of their room was burst open. A volume of gas poured out and the two victims were found on the bed dead. Their faces were slightly contorted and blackened.

Illegal Voters in Boston.

BOSTON, Dec. 16.—The United States grand jury returned some 54 indictments to Judge Carpenter. Among them were 20 or more which were found against the illegal voters recently arrested, and they were immediately arraigned. The first two pleaded guilty, and the judge imposed a fine of $100 and costs. The rest pleaded not guilty and were held in $1,000 bail each for trial.

Detectives Returning With Brosst.

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 17.—Officers McIlvary and Carnigan, of Pittsburg, accompanied by Detective Noble, of Detroit, left for Pittsburg with John C. Brossi, the alleged forger. In referring to the determined fight made for Brossi's release by J. W. Hanna, his counsel, Magistrate Bartlette said it was one of the most bitterly contested extradition cases ever tried in the Dominion.

Boston Aldermen Cannot Decide.

BOSTON, Dec. 17.—There is a difference of opinion among the aldermen as to the holiness of the "Clemencean Case" and is has tacitly been decided that the matter remain in statu quo—that is, unless citizens complain. There has been no final vote taken, nor will there be, unless a protest is made.

More Boodle Trials.

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—Despite the recommendation of District-Attorney Fellows, Judge Cowing refused to dismiss the indictments for bribery against Billy Maloney, Robert De Lacy and Charles Dempsey of the Board of Aldermen of 1884. They will be tried in January.

Democrats Will See the Returns.

CONCORD, N. H., Dec. 17.—Chief Justice Doe sent a telegraphic order to the Secretary of State, directing him to exhibit the returns of Representatives-elect on file in his office to the persons (Democrats) who heretofore demanded that privilege.

RIVAL FORCES FIGHT

Parnell Blinded by Lime and Davitt Wounded.

EXCITING SCENES IN KILKENNY.

Balfour Orders Out a Large Number of Constabulary.

A General Fight Takes Place at Ballynahill—Davitt Follows Parnell to Castlecomer—A Serious Row Occurs and Parnell is Struck in the Face With a Bag of Lime—He Suffers Great Agony.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—The excitement here is intense over the conflict between the Irish factions at Ballynahill, and Mr. Balfour has ordered the concentration of a large force of constabulary at Kilkenny.

Dispatches from Kilkenny state that at the moment of attack upon Davitt's crowd, the one-armed patriot had just been denouncing Parnell as a shameless reprobate and traitor to his friends and to the Irish cause. The words were uttered in so loud a tone that they were plainly audible to the people in the Parnell meeting.

One of these jumped up, and flourishing a blackthorn, exclaimed: "Let at them boys—clean out the gang of Gladstone lickspittles. No English dictation. God save Ireland."

The cries excited the crowd to fury, and though Mr. Parnell held up his hand deprecatingly, they rushed with one accord upon the Davitt men. The priests who were upon the platform with Davitt were the first to rise and leap down among the combatants, Davitt and Tanner following Davitt Trampled Down.

Mr. Davitt, not being in good physical condition, was carried along, and trampled down in the rush of his own followers, and there is some doubt whether he received the blow on his head from an enthusiastic admirer, who aimed it at a Parnellite, or whether it was inflicted by a stone thrown from the Parnellite ranks.

Both crowds, as they fought, shouted "God save Ireland," "Davitt's cry wi[illegible] etc.

[illegible] priest, whose name is not learned, was conspicuous in the Davitt ranks by his height and strength of arm. Just as the Davitt men were giving way, this priest, by two powerful blows, right and left, laid low two of the foremost assailants, and revived the courage of his own side. The Parnellites, however, had the advantage, when the interference of the police resulted in restoring quiet.

Davitt's injury causes him much pain, but it is not considered alarming. In the cases of some of the wounded, serious results are dreaded.

PARNELL BLINDED.

Attacked by Davitt's Friends and Struck With a Bag of Lime.

KILKENNY, Dec. 17.—After the trouble at Ballynahill the Parnellite party drove to Castlecomer, and Davitt and Tanner soon made their appearance there also. They at once began to address open-air meetings, dilating upon the events that had just occurred at Ballynahill, and asserting that Mr. Parnell had brought a mob of hirelings to attack them. Mr. Parnell's carriage, while passing, was hooted, and Davitt sent word to Parnell that if he would come and stand by him (Davitt) he would guarantee a peaceable hearing. Mr. Parnell replied: "I am not in a position to treat; I am only in a position to fight." Then addressing his audience he spoke in an impassioned vein, declaring that he would not assault any one, nor would he ask permission to speak from a cocksparrow like Tanner, or a jackdaw like Davitt.

A body of Davitt's partisans coming up, another row occurred. During the scrimmage some miscreant threw a bag of lime at Parnell. It struck him full in the face, and the lime filled his eyes, blinding him and causing him intense pain.

His carriage was just driving away when the lime was thrown. After riding some distance he was obliged to alight at a laborer's cabin in a fainting condition. A doctor was called but could do little to assuage the pain. He urged that Mr. Parnell should be driven immediately to Kilkenny for treatment. The start was made, and Mr. Parnell finally reached the Victoria Hotel in Kilkenny, where he had to be led to a room, being unable to use his eyes.

A surgeon was summoned, who states that all the lime is now removed from the eyes, but that Mr. Parnell is still suffering greatly and will probably be disabled for a time. He hopes that the results will not be serious.

DUBLIN EXCITED.

Crowds Around the Newspaper Offices Discuss the Ballynahill Fight.

DUBLIN, Dec. 17.—There was great excitement in this city over the news of the fight at Ballynahill. Crowds surrounded the bulletin boards and punctuated their readings of the news with hostile cries. In some instances blows were exchanged and the evidences of an ugly feeling were everywhere displayed where men were gathered in groups to discuss the situation or defy one another.

Policemen passed rapidly to and fro, dispersing the knots of angry men and insisting on constant movement.

The organ of the McCarthyites in this city has assumed the name of "Insuppressible Ireland," the court having enjoined, on application of Parnell, the use of the title "The Suppressed United Ireland."

THE PARIS STRANGLER.

Eyraud and His Mistress Tell Their Story in Court.

PARIS, Dec. 17.—The trial of Eyraud and Gabrille Bompard for the murder of the police agent Gouffe began during the morning at the Assizes. The audience was largely made up of wealthy and aristocratic persons, whose influence had gained them admission, thousands of less fortunate ones being turned away.

Eyraud was calm. He was stylishly dressed and wore his frock coat closely buttoned. The Bompard woman was attired very neatly in a dark gown and jacket, with a sealskin toque. Both the prisoners answered the questions with an air of confidence, but during the reading of the indictment, which gave a vivid description of the crime, they manifested some emotion.

The trunk in which Gouffe's body had been concealed after the murder was displayed on a table in court.

Eyraud's answers to the interrogations of the court revealed the fact that his career had been a shady one. When the subject of his relations with Gabrielle was touched upon, Eyraud declared that he was not responsible for the woman's immoralities. In fact, he asserted, he had endeavored to turn her from them. The president of the tribunal retorted by reading the police record to show that when a gentleman had offered Gabrielle £2,000 to become his mistress, Eyraud accepted her suggestion that the money be taken and devoted by them to dissipation together.

When Eyraud was called upon for his testimony, he threw the blame for Gouffe's murder upon Bompard. He said that she proposed to kill and rob the bailiff, buy a trunk and conceal the body in it. Eyraud went on with great coolness to describe the fatal affair. He told how Gabrielle was fondling the unsuspecting victim at the moment when the noose was thrown around his neck. The noose was attached to a pulley behind a curtain, and when it was tightened Gouffe soon ceased to struggle. He could not cry out, and life was extinct in a few moments. The body was then placed in the trunk and removed.

Bompard, being interrogated in her turn, declared that the crime was entirely of Eyraud's devising. He worked all the details, and by his influence over her compelled her to carry out her part of the nefarious plot.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

C. C. Brower has recently purchased the property on Park avenue beyond the driving park, formerly owned by Mr. Little.

Halstead C. Compton has returned from the far lands of the Pennsylvania mountain region, and tells tall stories about big game.

Mrs. Caroline E. Sullivant and family, of Columbus, Ohio, have leased the residence at Crescent avenue and Second place. Mrs. Sullivant's father was the founder of Columbus.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Thickstun, of Duer street, were guests last night at the celebration of the golden wedding of a brother of Mr. Thickstun's father, at New Brunswick.

R. F. Shaen, of Carlton avenue, has bought through the real estate agency of E. C. Mulford, one of the handsomest of the new homes on Sandford avenue. He paid $6,500 for the house, and is now having it fitted throughout with steam heating apparatus and other of the latest improved comforts. He will take possession in the Spring.

Among the names in the necrology read by the secretary at Monday night's meeting of the New England Society at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York, was that of Harvey Fisk father of Charles and Pliny Fisk of Plainfield. One of the prominent members present was Clarence W. Bowen, Secretary of New York's 400, and brother of Henry E. Bowen of Netherwood.

It is rumored that a number of prominent women who visited Linden Park as guests of the officers of the association, to witness the races, will be subpoened at the trials commencing in Elizabeth today, to testify as to their impressions of the sport. One of the handsomest and best known women of Plainfield's upper circles, who was a constant attendant at the races with her husband, may be included in those called upon to testify. She resides not far from Central avenue.

The marriage of Miss Laura Burnett and Charles E. Doane of this city, took place at the home of the bride, 488 Classon avenue, Brooklyn, this afternoon at half-past two o'clock. Only the most intimate friends and relatives were present. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Burnett, well known and highly esteemed residents of Brooklyn. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Doane of East Fourth street. He will bring his wife to this city, where he has built a handsome home.

Joseph H. Hough, late Secretary of the New Jersey Grand Lodge of Masons, whose death at Trenton, was recorded in yesterday's PRESS was the oldest Masonic officer in the world, having been Grand Secretary for forty-eight years. He was a member of Ashlar Lodge of Trenton, but was initiated and raised in Trenton Lodge in 1838. In that year he became Deputy Grand Secretary and in 1842 he was made Grand Secretary. He was the owner of a number of valuable jewels given him by Masonic friends and lodges and by the Grand Lodge.

ANOTHER NEW BUILDING LOAN.

Opportunity for Investment, and a Chance to Build Homes.

The People's Building Loan and Saving Association was organized last night in the office of Wm. A. Coddington, 34 West Front street, with one hundred and twelve shares. J. C. Pierson was appointed Chairman of the meeting, and F. O. Smith was made Secretary. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—John P. Laire.
Vice President—J. A. Smith.
Secretary and Treasurer—Wm. A. Coddington.
Directors—O. L. Jenkins, J. Fred MacDonald, J. C. Allen.

The new organization is a branch of the People's Building Loan and Saving Association of Geneva, N. Y., which is the first Association doing a general loan association business throughout this State that has been incorporated under New Jersey laws. Arrangements have been made so that borrowing members of the Association can be accommodated with loans as soon as the necessary papers can be completed. This fact gives the Association a prestige in the field, as most of the building and loan companies have to accumulate a fund before they can accommodate borrowing members. That Plainfield will be benefited is evidenced from the fact that already a number of its careful and trustworthy business men have already invested: some with a view to borrowing money for building purposes, and others for profitable and safe investment. All officers through whose hands any money will pass are heavily bonded, thereby making the concern as safe as a Government bond, and better because it will pay larger interest. Investors can withdraw the amount of their deposits with interest thereon at any time after the expiration of one year.

A VIOLENT STORM.

Torrents of Rain, and a Hurricane of Wind, Cause Discomfort and Wreak Damage.

Umbrellas are of but little use in a storm like that of today. Rain has been pouring in torrents ever since daybreak, and at the hour when people go to their place of business or to the train another discomfort, and a decided danger, was present in the form of a slippery coating of ice on the pavements. The sidewalks and streets run rivers of water. Those who venture out of doors are speedily drenched to the skin. To add to the disagreeable features of the weather, a high wind accompanies the rain, ruining saturated umbrellas, carrying hats to the four corners of the earth, wrecking the sign-boards on the business streets, and smashing window shutters, panes of glass, and chimney tops. Bay windows have especially suffered, shutters and window sashes being torn away like shreds of paper. If the storm continues—and it shows no sign of abatement—the newsboys who carry THE PRESS will have to hunt up their swimming garments to reach subscribers' houses.

Holiday Excursion Tickets on the Pennsylvania Railroad.

In pursuance of the usual custom the Pennsylvania Railroad Company announces that Christmas and New Year excursion tickets will be sold between all principal stations on its system at two cents per mile, except between Philadelphia and New York and certain other stations on the United Railroads of New Jersey Division, where the regular excursion rate and limit will prevail. The tickets will be sold December 24, 1890, to January 1, 1891, valid for return passage until January 5, 1891, inclusive.

Christmas Gifts for the Y. M. C. A.

In answer to the question "What Christmas offering shall I make to the Young Men's Christian Association of this city to advance its interests, promote its comforts and increase its working facilities?" the Association would suggest the following: Furniture and pictures for the parlor, periodicals for the reading room, a table for checkers and chess, popular games for the amusement room, a door mat, and last, but not least, a few subscriptions to the new building.

Positively Her Last Appearance.

Jennie Houghton's engagement at the Eden Musee, New York, does not commence until Jan. 12. She so much appreciates the great reception given her at The Crescent, Thanksgiving Day, she has consented to appear once more in Plainfield. On Christmas afternoon and evening there will be general skating and a band concert, at The Crescent, and Miss Houghton will give exhibitions.

Officers of Westfield's Lodge.

At the annual communication of Atlas Lodge, No. 125, F. and A. M., of Westfield, the following were elected officers for the ensuing year:

Worshipful Master—Wm. W. Gilby.
Senior Warden—John F. Dorvall.
Junior Warden—Chas. D. Reese.
Treasurer—Chas. F. French.

ELIZABETH'S BOWLERS BURIED.

Crescent League Pin Knights Capture the First Match of the Season, With Ease.

The Elizabeth Athletic Club, whose bowlers are the champions of the State, thought it was not necessary to send all their picked players to Plainfield last night. They made up a team of good ones, however, and included R. P. Moore of Fanwood, who has no equal as a steady roller. But the next time Elizabeth runs against the Crescent League of this city, she will have out her experts.

It was the Plainfield boys' first match, and being burnt out of home they had had but little practice. The Elizabeths, on the other hand, are kept in training all the time. Still C. C. Burnet had the courage to make the match, and faith enough in the Crescent League bowlers to believe they would win if they tried. The result proves he was right. Plainfield won by 207 pins.

VanEmburgh was high man. He never broke until the 10th frame, and beat Pepin (who rolls 200, sometimes) by over a hundred pins. Dilts started in fine shape with three strikes but broke badly in the 4th, 5th, and 6th frames. He pulled himself into second place, however. Vail, the Quaker, astonished them all, and Rogers did himself proud. Krewson had hard luck. VanWinkle bowled a great game after his 5th frame.

J. W. Murray, Jr., was umpire. The score was:

But the Lock-ups That They Long for Fail to Materialize.

The editors of neighboring villages are losing sleep nights and fretting themselves to death in the daytime because of a dearth of lockups. The Westfield Standard has been oh-ing for one these many moons, and seems no nearer having its desire gratified now than ever. A recent issue contains this plaint:

The lungs, we are informed, contain 75,000,000 cells; and yet Westfield can't have a lock-up.

And while Editor Pearsall of The Standard is trying to get his constituents to trade off their spare lung cells for space in a local jail Editor W. B. R. Mason is endeavoring to consummate a similar desire at Bound Brook. In The Chronicle he mourns:

A lock-up is being built at Madison. We wish the same could be said for Bound Brook.

But the editor of the Madison Eagle is either magnanimously inclined, or else has a grudge against Editor Mason and desires to consign him to dungeon walls, for he responds, in his columns of "Eagle Feathers", in this wise:

Come over, Bro. Mason, in about two weeks, and we will show you a neat and secure lock-up. We have needed it for years.

Just why the editorial "we" of The Eagle has for years needed a lock-up and did not go somewhere where his want could be supplied, is not clear. He might have come to Plainfield, where is at least one empty cell.

There continues, however, to be considerable unanimity of desire among the rural editorial brethren for a building of iron-barred doors and stuffy smells and dingy appearance. If they really want a lock-up that will strike terror to the hearts of their friends the tramp and the intoxicated individual they are welcome to the Plainfield edifice. There are better things than lock-ups to oh for.

The Free Text Book Question Settled.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 17.—The question whether or not New Haven shall furnish free text books to the Catholic parochial schools was settled at a special town meeting with an emphatic no. There was great excitement at the meeting, and at one time a free fight was feared. A squad of policemen had to be sent for to preserve order. The meeting adjourned amidst great excitement.

World's Fair Proclamation.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—It is expected the President's World's Fair proclamation will be issued to-day. No trouble has occurred and the delay is simply that the necessary formalities may be carried out.

BROUGHT HIM DOWN.

A Determined Young Woman Conquers the Terror of the School.

I was driving along a highway in Woods County, O., with a man who was selling farming machines to farmers, and about two o'clock in the afternoon we came to a district school-house. The schoolma'am and about twenty scholars stood under an elm tree, about forty feet high, near the house, and in the topmost branches of the tree was a boy about fourteen years old.

"Any thing wrong here?" asked my friend, as we halted before the door.

"Budd Hawkins says he won't and the teacher says he must!" called a little girl.

The teacher herself then came forward. She was a plain-looking girl of about twenty, with a mouth showing great firmness, and, with some embarrassment, she explained:

"It's the terror of the school. He refused to mind, and I started to whip him. He broke away and ran out and climbed the tree. I've been up about twenty feet, but had to give it up and come down."

"Yer can't conquer me!" shouted the boy.

"Budd, I order you to come down!"

"I won't!"

"I have sent for an axe, and here it comes," she said, as she turned to us. "He'll come down with the tree if not before."

We offered to use the axe, but she declined the offer with thanks, and, stepping to the tree, she swung the implement around and buried the blade in the wood.

"You dasn't!" shouted Budd from the top.

"I'll do it or resign!" she answered, as she struck several blows.

At the end of three minutes the tree began to totter and Budd to yell in alarm, and a few seconds later it fell with a crash. I thought the boy was badly hurt, if not killed, and was relieved as the school-ma'am sprang forward, yanked him out of the branches, and while applying a gad with one hand she pulled him into the school-house with the other, saying:

"Now, Budd Hawkins, you've got to do some of the awfullest begging ever heard of in the State of Ohio, or I won't leave enough hide on you for a flea to bite."

He was hard at it when we drove on. —N. Y. Sun.

THE STATE COMMITTEE'S BUSY YEAR.

Plainfield's Building a Pattern for All New Jersey—Railroad Work to be Extended to the Central.

At the recent meeting of the State Executive Committee of the Young Men's Christian Associations of New Jersey, at Elizabeth, members were present from Bridgeton, Trenton, Princeton College, New Brunswick, Plainfield, Newark, Jersey City, Orange, Madison, and Morristown.

This committee is composed of representative Christian men from all parts of the State. They are elected by the State convention, and have direction during the year of all the forms of work conducted except that of the local associations. They employ both a State Secretary, D. L. More, of Newark, who devotes all his time to the work, and an office secretary who is required to give the committee half his time. The present chairman is the Hon. Elkanah Drake, of Newark.

In his report for the last three months Secretary More stated that both the State Committee and the Associations had been very active. In the matter of Association buildings alone great progress had been made. The Trenton Association had just paid $30,800 for a fine lot, and was perfecting plans for a building to cost not less than $75,000. The Jersey City Association was finishing a $5,000 addition to its $20,000 building, to be used as a gymnasium and bowling alley. The Rahway Association would probably be able to enter its new $9,000 building, which has a frontage of fifty feet and a depth of one hundred, by the first of the new year. The Plainfield Association had $50,000 subscribed or guaranteed for a handsome building; its lot was already purchased, its plans were perfected, and the work would be begun in the Spring. The Bridgeton Association had just taken possession of excellent new rooms.

Railroad work was reported as established in a very promising condition at Weehawken, New Durham and Hoboken. Four hundred railroad men already belong to this branch, and an average daily attendance of one hundred and sixty is recorded at the rooms. The men are greatly pleased with the privileges afforded them in their commodious and home-like apartments, where they "visit" one another, play games, read, write, eat, bathe, sleep, study, worship, and attend lectures, concerts and receptions. Efforts are being made by the Railroad Company to have a similar work started at the termini of the Jersey Central, Pennsylvania and other railways, at Jersey City, Camden, Trenton and other places.

The report of the State Treasurer, Fred M. Geer, of Orange, showed that the finances of the State Committee were in a healthy condition. The work this year will have entailed an expenditure of $3,200, which has been fully pledged by the Associations and individuals. The sum needed for next year will be about $4,000.

The keynote of several interesting addresses made during the session was that one great essential to the success and continued prosperity of a place was a working Association and fine building, such as Trenton and Plainfield are securing, and such as Newark, Orange, Morristown and Jersey City now possess. These buildings, with gymnasium, bowling alleys, reading-room, lecture hall, class-room, and what not would meet an essential want which agitated many a community.

DEVOTEES OF A USEFUL ART.

Short-Hand Writers Get Together for Professional Advancement.

The Stenographic Association, which has been mentioned in these columns at various times heretofore, has completed its work of organization, and is now under the leadership of the following officers:

President—J. A. Robinson.
Vice President—Geo. S. Clay.
Secretary—Miss Laura L. Runyon.
Treasurer—Harry Patton.
Librarian—Irving Brady.

These, together with Miss Lizzie Moss, Miss Anna Marsh and Miss Julia Taylor, compose the Committee of Management.

The chief object of this union of shorthand writers is personal improvement in the skillful practice of their profession. They meet ever Tuesday evening at the rooms of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Last night many nimble fingers were hard at work at the place of meeting, writing at various rates of speed. Some were taking down the measured words of a slow reader, while the fingers of others glided swiftly over the paper as they fixed in mystic characters the words falling from the lips of a more rapid enunciator.

The stenographers composing the society have already achieved considerable success in their beautiful and eminently useful art, and their organization will help them to other laurels.

A Syndicate Buys Property in the Heart of the City.

All that fine stretch of residence sites fronting on Sixth street, opposite Grace church, from Sycamore street to the W. C. T. U., lot at the corner of Park avenue, has been sold through the real estate agency of E. C. Mulford, to a syndicate of capitalists who will erect thereon a number of desirable homes. The party they bought of is Mrs. Lalor.

THE STORY OF CHRISTMAS TOLD IN SONG

Gutterson's Sublime Cantata as Produced by Local Talent—Only the Angel Imported.

A notable musical event is to take place at Dunellen Thursday evening, when A. C. Gutterson's grand cantata "Christmas" is to be sung by six well-known soloists and an excellent chorus. The concert will be conducted under the auspices of the Dunellen Presbyterian church, and that the affair will be thoroughly enjoyable the final rehearsal held last night, ably testifies. The most prominent Biblical characters introduced into the story of the songs are Joseph, Mary, the Three Wise Men, and the Angel. The music is full of melody, and every part is well rendered. All except one of those who participate in the singing are of home talent, as the following list will show:

Soloists—Miss Blanche Fellows, of Plainfield, and Miss Annie Hamilton, of Brooklyn, sopranos; Mrs E. H. Bird, of Plainfield, contralto; George O. Stevens, of Evona, and Morris C. VanArsdale, of Plainfield, tenors; Arthur F. Freeman, of Plainfield, bass.

Chorus—Miss Louise V. Apgar, Miss Maude L. Benton, Mrs. Albert S. Roe, Mrs. W. C. Stinson, and Mrs. Edward Taylor, all of Dunellen, sopranos; Miss Earnie Giles, Miss Fannie Humpston and Miss Imogene Smith, of Dunellen, Mrs. Robert Gorton, of Plainfield, and Miss Mary Titsworth, of New Market, contraltos; W. F. Gaston, of Plainfield, M. L. Rarick, of Dunellen, and Lewis T. Titsworth, of New Market, tenors. Alberne H. Burdick, Charles F. Dayton, and Harry C. Gaskill of New Market, Robert Gorton, of Plainfield, and W. C. Stinson, and Edmund Teel, of Dunellen, basses.

Leader—Albert S. Roe; Organist—Charles E. Apgar; Pianist—Miss Martha Seran; all of Dunellen.

The programme of the cantata is as follows:

Make a Joyful Noise.....Recitative and Chorus
For Unto Us a Child is Born, (Air)....George. O. Stevens
Cry Out and Shout.....Chorus and Solo
The World Seems Full, (Trio).....Three Wise Men
First Wise Men—Arthur F. Freeman.
Second Wise Man—Morris C. VanArsdale.
Third Wise Man—George O. Stevens.
The Stars Are Shining.....Quartette.
Miss Blanche Fellows,
Mrs. E. H. Bird,
Morris C. VanArsdale,
Arthur F. Freeman.
Judah Is in Bondage.....Recitative and Chorus
Arthur F. Freeman, Morris C. VanArsdale
Behold, I Bring You Good Tidings, (Air).....
(Angel)—Miss Annie Hamilton
Shepherds, Haste Your Lord to Greet....Chorus
We Come! We Come!.....Chorus of Shepherds
Where Rests the Babe?.....Contralto Solo and Chorus
Enter Ye Here, (Solo).....(Joseph)—Arthur F. Freeman
Oh, Virgin Mother .....Quartette and Chorus

Notes Theatrical.

The receipts of "The Soudan" for the first thirteen weeks, just closed at the Boston Theatre, Boston, are over $100,000. It is estimated that Boston theatre-goers will have paid no less than $200,000 to witness the production before the close of its season of twenty-one weeks. "The Soudan" will, next season, be put on at the big Academy, New York, and kept there a whole year in lieu of "The Old Homestead," which will bid farewell to the metropolis after the conclusion of its fourth year at the Academy.

As a rule, stage statuary is nothing more than papier mache and a thin coating of plaster of Paris. The Venus de Milo, now introduced in the second act of the original "Old Homestead" at the Academy, New York, however, is a genuine work of art, purchased at a recent art sale by Denman Thompson, who is a connoisseur in such matters. The statue cost the actor $5,000.

No more important production than the big English pantomime. "Babes in the Wood," which will begin an important season at Niblo's, New York, New Year's week, has probably ever been brought to this country from the other side. The piece enjoyed a run at the Drury Lane Theatre, London, twice the length of the stay vouchsafed any similar production and was declared by the critics to be by far the best pantomime ever offered the London public. The story follows in the main the familiar legend of Robin Hood, but is supplemented by various ingenious introductions. It is in thirteen scenes, six of which will doubtless provoke here a sensation as great as created by their presentation in England. "Insect Island," one of the scenic creations, introduces a ballet representing every known insect. The costumes for this feature were designed from specimens found in the various British and American museums and required six months to perfect. The bead and glass work representing the various tints is all handwork, the wings in each case being hand-painted on satin. A refreshing feature of the "Insect Ballet" is that no two costumes are alike in design.

Present attractions in New York:

Academy—"The Old Homestead." Niblo's—"My Aunt Bridget." Casino—"Poor Jonathan." Fifth Avenue Theatre—"Joan of Arc." Daly's—"The Last Word." Palmer's—"Middleman." Madison Square—"Pair of Spectacles." Bijou—"Texas Steer." Lyceum—"The Idler." 23d Street Theatre—"Man and Woman." Metropolitan Opera House—German Opera. 14th Street Theatre—"Blue Jeans." At other houses new bills weekly.

A CHECKERED CAREER.

Some of the Queer Adventures of Skeeners, the Clam Man.

Skeeners, the Clam Man—Ya-as; them was great days. It's purty dull here fer a man like me, thet's be'n havin' excitin' adventures all his life.

Johnny Harrington and Clinton King (who have strayed over from the Surf House, on the Point)—Did you ever see a pirate or a sea serpent?

Skeeners, the Clam Man—Pirates, you says? Many's the time I seen 'em. Once, when we was off Jibber-ralter, we was captured by ole Cap'n Kidd himself, an'—

Johnny Harrington—I thought he was hung over a hundred and fifty years ago.

Skeeners, the Clam Man—That's the story, but he wasn't, though; he got away the day before the execution, an' went right at it ag'in. He must 'a' been purty old, though, when he caught us. He had a crutch in one hand an' his speakin' trumpet in the other, an' his belt was all stuck full of swords and horse-pistols. He says through his speakin' trumpet: "Make 'em all walk the plank!" he says. They all had to do it till it came my turn; I says to him: "Look 'ere, cap'n, live an' let live is my motter—let's call this thing square," I says to him. He said he didn't have no hard feelin's, and he put me ashore at the next place we come to. He was a good-hearted ole feller, when you got on the right side o' him. He told me the reason he got to bein' a pirate was on account o' goin' roun' the hotels when he was a boy, playin' pool for drinks, and so on. You was askin' me 'bout sea serpents, I b'lieve. W'y, I've seen 'em all sizes, from little ones to larger 'n that house o' mine up to great big fellers twice as long as the hotel over yender. We got used to seein' 'em round the ship, an' after awhile we didn't pay much attention to 'em. One of 'em got so tame he'd come up close an' git fed every mornin'. We always fed him two barrels o' crackers an' bundle o' salt codfish; we named him Billy, an' we had an iron collar round his neck with a padlock on it. Once we played a joke on him, an' only give him one barrel o' crackers. He was so mad, he rared right up out o' the water, stuck his head over the side o the ship, grabbed the other barrel in his teeth an' swallered it, staves, hoops, crackers an' all. Then he gave a snort you could 'a' heard ten mile, flopped his tail up higher 'n the maintop, an' sunk down out o' sight. We never seen him ag'in. Poor ole Billy; he was the most sensitive critter I ever see.

Clinton King—Did you ever see a mermaid?

Skeeners, the Clam Man—Lots of 'em—but I dunno's I oughter tell you boys any thing about them gals; they don't dress nor act accordin' to the way folks is brought up round here. We used to pass right close to the rocks they was a-layin' on often, an' it took me some time to git used to their ways; but after awhile I got to know some of 'em by sight, an' used to bow an' say "Good morning" to 'em. There was one of 'em in pertic'ler, a kinder sandy complected gal; she always used to kiss her hand to me when we was a-goin' by, and smile. I rec'lect one of her front teeth had gold fillin' in it. Then there was another one—

Voice from the House—Job!

Skeeners, the Clam Man—There was one of 'em, I remem—

Voice from the House—Job!

Skeeners, the Clam Man (glancing nervously over his shoulder)—As I was sayin', there was—

Mrs. Skeeners (appearing at the fence)—Job Skeeners, I want you to git up an' make tracks into the wood-shed here, jest about as quick as you ever done any thing in yer life. If you think I'm goin' to break my back splittin' kindlin's, while you're settin' there, stuffin' them boys with them pesky lyin' yarns o' yourn, you're mistaken. A man like you, thet's never hed the gumption to go more 'n two mile away from this place in his life, oughter at least be willin' to 'tend to the chores around the house without bein' drove! I'm gittin' clean out o' patience, an—

Skeeners, the Clam Man—Wa-al, I'll hev to leave ye now. I'm expectin' to make a v'y'ge to the Sandwidge Islands 'long in the fall; but come round any time while I'm here, an' I'll be glad to talk to ye!—Puck.

He Slept During Daylight.

De Quille (sadly)—I don't know what's the matter with my wife, Jawkins; she seems so melancholy!

Jawkins—Nonesense, old boy; she told Mrs. J. the other day that she was "happy as the day is long."

De Quille—But I'm a night-editor, you know, and sleep in the daytime. How's that?—Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS!

And the Place to Buy Them.

"'Tis without an equal in Plainfield," is said of our display of Christmas Goods, and 'tis true; as we have spared neither pains nor expense to bring together a line of goods that would suit almost everyone in quality and price.

Dolls, we have enough to supply every child in Plainfield; too many of them we think, but they must be sold this week, so we are cutting prices.

We call special attention to our line of Iron Toys. They are the best kind to buy, as they are the kind that never break; there are fire engines, hook and ladder trucks, hose and cart, locomotives, cars, etc.

How about an Umbrella for some one? We have them from $1 to $3.25.

There came in this morning about 500 Plush Boxes; ought to have been here two weeks ago, but were delayed on the road.

Handsome goods they are, consisting of glove and handkerchief boxes, jewel cases, writing desks, &c. You can buy them just 25 per cent. less than they are worth.

There is an endless assortment of cups and saucers, fancy plates, brass goods, photo albums, work baskets, scrap baskets, pictures, etc.

And then you will want Christmas cards. Ours are bought direct from the manufacturers, and we save you money on them. Prices 5, 10, 15 and 20c.

Lamps make a useful present; we have them in all kinds and styles. Hall lamps, $1.75; handsome parlor lamp, $2.50; piano lamps, $8 75 for a beauty.

Come in this week, select what you wish, and we will deliver when wanted.

Reduction in Prices for Cash!

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

AFTER DECEMBER 15, 1890,

The Plainfield Produce Company

Will Sell All Goods Strictly for Cash!

We will present a few reasons for making this change in our manner of doing business. In the first place we have our Hay, Grain and Produce inspected and bought direct from the Producer for Cash. Thereby obtaining better quality, also saving one profit, which would go to the commission merchant if bought from sample the usual way.

In the second place any concern doing an extensive credit business must get larger profits to offset slow and worthless accounts, of which with the greatest care there will be some. And the customer who is ready to pay and does pay his bills when presented, is the one who must pay these larger profits.

By selling for cash we avoid losses from such accounts, and can afford to sell for smaller profits.

We ask for a share of your patronage. Give us a call and we will show you how low we can sell for CASH, instead of how high we must sell for credit.

HOPE FOR FAT MEN.

Special Gymnastic Machinery for Reducing Their Girth.

The Growing Popularity of Athletic Exercises Stimulates the Ingenuity of Inventors—Health-Giving Devices.

The growing popularity of all manner of athletic sports among the youth of this land, and among middle-aged people, too, for that matter, which has led to the formation of large athletic associations, with magnificent club-houses and spacious grounds, has also stimulated inventors to produce new and improved forms of gymnastic apparatus. The visitor to a modern well-equipped gymnasium will see a number of machines of peculiar form, the uses of which are not apparent at first sight. Nothing like them was to be found in the athletic clubs of a dozen years ago, and many of them are still so new that probably nowhere else than in New York can they be seen to-day in actual use. Moreover, as the science of physical culture advances the knowledge of the suitability of certain forms of exercise to certain constitutions increases, and so does the experience of the results that follow the exercise of particular muscles.

Said J. W. Spalding, an expert in such matters, the other day: "Many a man has tried to reduce the size of his waist by exercise, and after he has spent hours every day for weeks in walking, running, club-swinging, dumbbell lifting, riding, etc., has found that while his actual weight has perhaps decreased perceptibly, yet his waist measures about the same as usual. The fact is that fatty degeneration of the muscular tissue begins nearly always in those muscles which are used the least. For this reason the abdominal muscles are generally the first to be attacked. Every ounce of fat which fastens upon a muscle is so much dead weight, closing its contraction, or working, and rendering the muscle less active than before and therefore inviting more fat to accumulate upon it.

"Muscle alone has the power of contraction, thus approximating its ends and moving the parts to which they are attached and at the same time increasing in girth. Fat has not this power. Suppose a man carries thirty or forty pounds of fat. See how he is handicapped. If he wants to play ball he is in the same condition as a race-horse handicapped with the same weight of iron, and of course it is readily seen that it is not desirable to be fat if strength is to be as great as possible and hence economized. Endurance is but another term for continuous expenditure of strength. Hence a fat man has less endurance than if he had no fat. Besides having fatty deposits around the muscles and thus handicapping by dead and useless weight alone, it is found in small amounts throughout the muscles of fat people, even between muscle fibers so fine that they can not be seen except under the microscope. Such muscle, in contracting, can not get hard because the large sprinkling of fat it contains throughout its substance prevents the contracted muscle fibers from adjusting themselves in compact bundles so as to form the characteristic hard, wood-like mass of the trained athlete.

"Now the only way to reduce fat is to exercise those muscles which are encumbered with it. The abdominal muscles are not brought into decided and strong action by a man of sedentary occupation probably once a day; and many men of active manual labor even do not use these muscles much. I remember the time when fat men used to be advised to lie down on a hard table on their faces, place their hands behind their backs and, while lying flat, raise the head and shoulders as high in air as possible. This, no doubt, gave the abdominal muscles some exercise, but gave those in the back and neck a great deal more; so that a man's spine ached long before the abdominal muscles felt any strain on them. If these days there are a couple of machines on the market which are especially adapted for bringing the abdominal muscles into active motion."

Cuts of these machines are produced with this article. That part which is the same in both is the iron standard against the wall, up and down which the weights run smoothly, as they are raised and lowered by the ropes that run through swivelled pulleys. The man who is pulling on the ropes with his head is giving his abdominal muscles the most severe work. The other man, who has a curved board to support his back, takes some of the weight off his stomach muscles by means of his arms. It is best for beginners to start with this machine, and after their muscles, long unused to action, become a little accustomed to the strain, let them try the direct weight, and pull by means of a head-stall, using only light weights even then at first. Half an hour of such exercise each day will do more, it is said, to reduce the girth, especially if combined with as great a degree of abstinence from drinks of any kind as possible, than any other form of exercise known.

Speaking of liquids, a man who generally knows what he is talking about said recently:

"Liquids make fat. The character of the liquids has a good deal to do with it, but the practice of drinking generally leads to unwieldy bulk. In Spain, where men drink little, fat is unknown. In Paris, where men content themselves with sipping thimbles full of absinthe or small cups of black coffee, the French are thin to a remarkable degree. The women, on the other hand, drink great quantities of champagne, Burgundy, and latterly of beer, and they are, as a result, prone to stoutness. In England, men drink ale and beer, and they are a thick-necked, pudgy, and heavy race, as a rule. I had observed all this many times, and when I went to Germany, where I knew the consumption of beer was very great, I had prepared to find fat men in abundance. I was not disappointed. There would seem to be absolutely no end of big, corpulent and unwieldy men in Germany. While they are in the army they are slim and splendid looking warriors, but two months after they leave the ranks they become heavy, puffy, and beefy to the last degree.

TRAINING TO BE A HEAVY BATTER.

Another piece of gymnastic apparatus, made for a special purpose, is also shown in the accompanying cut. It is intended for men who wish to keep the muscles of the leg and thigh in constant trim for walking. It may be fastened to the bottom of almost any arm chair of solid construction, and is intended for use in the office mainly. The weights under the chair can be increased or lessened at will, and the pedals are not in the way when not in use, and indeed afford a convenient foot-rest and a welcome change of position once in awhile. A busy man need not lose a moment from his duties during the day, and yet get considerable healthy exercise out of his handy machine.

Many other machines are already invented, or are in process of invention, which are intended to develop special muscles of the human frame, but there is not room to illustrate them within the limits of this article, and much of the success of the modern instructor in physical culture consists in knowing what muscles of his pupil most need development and then how to give them what they want. Even additional beauty may be imparted to the face and neck, it is asserted, by developing those muscles of the cheeks and neck which become flabby under disuse and make the cheeks look sunken or the neck scraggy. Speaking on this head, a woman who has devoted much thought and time to such matters said last week:

"It is an actual fact that the muscles of the face are as susceptible of development as any muscles of the body. The method is a very simple one, but thorough. No one can doubt for a moment that a full, round neck and plump cheeks add greatly to one's beauty. The only way to get the full neck and plump cheeks is to go to work in an intelligent manner and develop the neck and facial muscles, which development causes the lines of beauty to exist. You may think, perhaps, it is unnecessary to develop muscular tissue in order to gain beauty, but that you can get it only by gaining a little more fat; this is a very great mistake. The lines of beauty can only exist where the muscles are plump and firm. The development of the muscles of the face and neck fills up the hollows and causes the flesh to have a firm and healthy look, whereas the addition of fat without muscular development will cause the flesh to look weak and flabby."

Terrible.

"Well, I see the Spinard line has at last broken its record and lost a life."

"Man washed overboard?"

"No. Starved to death."

"Awful! Was he buried at sea?"

"He was to have been, but the rats made it unnecessary."—Life

Water Shut Off.

At a recent Sunday-school service in the West, the superintendent was illustrating the necessity of joining the church, and in order to make it apparent to his listeners he said: "For instance, I want to introduce water into my house. I turn it on. The pipes and faucets and every convenience are in good order, but I get no water. Can any of you tell me why I do not get any water?" He expected the answer to be that he had not made connection with the main in the street, but the boys looked perplexed. They could not see why the water should refuse to run into his premises after such faultless plumbing. "Can any one tell me what I have neglected?" reiterated the speaker, looking over the flock of faces, bowed down by the weight of the problem. "I know," squeaked a little six-year-old. "You don't pay your water rent!"—Golden Days.

Not the Real Thing.

"No," said the bachelor, thoughtfully, "it looks like a baby, and it's dressed like a baby, but it isn't a baby, sure."

"And why not, I should like to know?" the irate mother exclaimed.

"Why," said the experienced bachelor, slowly, "I've been sitting here watching it for half an hour, and it hasn't cried once."—Somerville Journal.

A Sympathizing Employe.

Mrs. De Fadd (who can not stand the odor of turpentine)—I would have sent for you to have done this cleaning last week, but we have been having the outside of our house painted and it made us all sick.

Mrs. McSadd (sympathizingly)—Sure, Oi don't wonder. Thim colors is enough to make any one sick.—N. Y. Weekly.

And It Didn't.

As he sat in the parlor awaiting her coming he could not suppress his ecstasy. "In a few minutes I will meet her," he murmured, softly.

"Then in a few minutes I won't meter," was the sage remark of the gas pipe, hearing what he said.—Munsey's Weekly.

Proof Positive.

Corroboration.

Cumso—That man I introduced to you yesterday, Mr. Hipple, tells me he is a college bred man, Fangle.

Fangle—Yes; I believe he was the baker at Yelvard University the year I graduated.—West Shore.

AN INVESTIGATIVE MIND.

A Man Who Wanted to Borrow a Steam Engine.

Several months before the Memphis railroad had penetrated the region about the point now known as Thayer, in Oregon County, a party of engineers in charge of the locating survey stopped for a night near the Howell County line. About dark the camp was visited by a gaunt, tall and stooped mountaineer.

"I wanter know," he broke out suddenly and without ceremony, "ef this hyar steam keer road is er gwine ter be built?"

"That's the intention of the company," replied the chief engineer.

"I don't know," responded the native, "Say, where's she gwine ter be?"

"The track will in all probability run through this valley," said the spokesman.

"It must cost er pile er money," continued the mountaineer, resting on one foot and looking inquiringly at the instruments of the party.

"It does," said the engineer.

The native kept quiet for a moment or so, looking around at each member of party and gazing intently at every piece of the camp furniture. Then he started to speak again, but he hesitated.

"Any thing we can do for you?" asked the surveyor.

"Don't know ez yer kin," was the deliberate reply of the mountaineer, "but I tell yer what," he continued, earnestly, "I'd like ter see one er yer injines thet I've hearn erbout ef yer got one handy. An' I'll tell yer," he went on, feeling that the ice was broken, "mar an' ther gals ud like ter see one, too, an' ef ye'd let me run it over ther crik fer ter night, I'd git er back an hour by sun in ther mornin', 'thout a scratch."—Detroit Free Press.

A SAFE GUESS.

"You can't decebe me, nigger! fur lemme tole you I'se a phrenologer, an' can tell fum de bumps on yer head dat you's done bin an' ate dat watermillion."—Texas Siftings.

THE PROBABLE REASON.

Why a Western Woman Is Still Waiting to Get "That" Letter.

"Hallo, there!" exclaimed a woman to the letter-carrier, as he was passing.

"Haven't any thing for you to-day, ma'am," replied the carrier.

"No, I s'pose not," she replied crossly. "You didn't have any letter for me yesterday, either, did you?"

"No, ma'am, I believe not."

"Nor the day before?"

The carrier shook his head and began to move on.

"Wait a bit!" commanded the woman. The carrier stopped again.

"I don't believe you have brought me a letter for two weeks."

"No, I don't think I've had a letter for you for a couple of months, in fact; but you come out every day and ask for one as though you were in the habit of receiving a heavy regular mail."

"Just so, and that's what I want to see you about. Now just tell me why you don't bring me letters like other people. Why are you discriminating against me?"

"Why, I can't bring you letters if there are none for you. I am only an agent of the Government."

"Then I suppose it is the Government's fault. What do you suppose is the reason?"

"I don't know, perhaps you haven't paid your takes."

"That may be it, now. I never thought of that. I'll ask my husband when he comes home. Thanks for the suggestion. Good morning."—W. H. Siviter, in West Shore.

Selfish Man.

Wife—Dear, do you want to know how to save fifty dollars?

Husband—Yes.

Wife—Well, buy that lovely sealskin sacque of Mrs. Bankrupt. It cost one hundred dollars and she will sell it to me for half that she paid.

Husband—I have already bought it and exchanged it for a seventy-five dollar overcoat.—Once a Week.

Not Easily Discouraged.

De Dude (buying a cane)—I sa-ay, mah good man, this cane won't do. The handle is too big foh mah mouth.

Dealer—It's the exact size worn by the Prince of Wales, sir.

De Dude—Aw! Wait a bit. I'll go to a surgeon's and see if I can have mah mouth stwetched.—N. Y. Good News.

He Worked by the Century.

Cobb—You write for the magazines, don't you?

Spacer—Yes.

Cobb—Do you get paid by the year?

Spacer—(who gets paid on publication)—No—by the century.—Munsey's Weekly.

Apt to Be So.

"Can your little brother talk now?"

"Yes. He can say some words real well."

"What are they?"

"I don't know. They're words I never heard before."—Harper's Young People.

The Girl of the Period.

Isabel—What an awfully shoddy girl Genevieve Flyaway is! Every thing about her has the air of being marked down.

May—Yes; even her age. — Harper's Bazar.

Easily Proved.

AN INDIAN BATTLE

Tupper's Cavalry Has a Conflict With the Sioux.

FIFTY OF THE COMMAND KILLED

Hemmed in by the Hostiles and the Indians Receiving Reinforcements.

Gen. Miles Preparing to Move on the Bad Lands—Orders Sent to Several Posts for a Simultaneous Advance—A Number of Indian Police Missing—Red Cloud Holds a Pow-Wow.

DALY'S RANCH, Col., Dec. 18.—Major Tupper's Sixth Cavalry has had a conflict with the Sioux Indians, and 50 of his command have been killed. Two lieutenants were also killed.

Two companies of troops, regiment not stated, have been hemmed in by the hostiles near the Grass Basin, and the Indians are receiving reinforcements.

It is said that Major Tupper's command has thrown up entrenchments and anticipates another attack. Troops are now en route to his assistance.

Sudden Departure of Troops.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Dec. 18.—The 17th infantry left for the front at 2 o'clock, taking the train at 30 minutes' notice. There are seven companies, commanded by Col. Offley, an Indian fighter of 30 years' experience. Most of the officers and men have been in the field before. They expect to be gone 30 days.

Indian Police Missing.

FORT YATES, N. D., Dec. 18.—Twenty police who turned back to the scene of the fight at Sitting Bull's camp have not been heard from, and fears are entertained of their safety. A courier just in reports that hostiles have driven One Bull, Sitting Bull's friendly nephew, from his camp, and the hostiles and friendly Indians are fighting on Grand River.

PREPARING TO MOVE.

Gen. Miles Ready to Attack the Defiant Redskins.

RAPID CITY, S. D., Dec. 18.—A decisive move will be made on the hostile Indians now scattered through the Bad Lands probably to-morrow. General Miles is here, and has placed himself in communication with the troops at all the different posts.

It is learned that orders have been sent to the forces at Pine Ridge, Forts Yates, Meade and Robinson to prepare for a move on the defiant redskins. Couriers, it is understood, have been sent from the posts to all the advanced detachments of troops, so that a simultaneous advance may be made.

The Indians are scattered throughout the Bad Lands, but it is said they are concentrating, and as they are now almost surrounded by troops it is thought the war, if there is one, will be of short duration.

Red Cloud Holds a Powwow.

PINE RIDGE AGENCY, S. D., Dec. 17.—The troops are still waiting under arms for orders to march. A council of leading chiefs among the friendlies, including Red Cloud, has been held as to the best action to take in regard to the Indians still in the Bad Lands.

Died Suddenly on the Street.

BOSTON, Dec. 18.—As James Cannon, a teamster for Warren Eustis, was driving along Charles street, his team collided with another team and Cannon was knocked from his seat and badly hurt. He was sent to the Massachusetts General Hospital and Mr. Eustis was telephoned for. He started for the hospital, but while going down Cambridge street suddenly sank to the ground and expired. The deceased was 60 years of age.

No Change in the Spinners' Strike.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 18.—There is no change in the trouble at the Clark mills. The hasty action of the spinners in striking without first consulting the National Executive Board has complicated matters to that extent that it will be necessary to convene the board and consider what can be done. The unions will probably vote from their own funds special relief to the men who are out.

Sudden Death of Lawyer Bromley.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Miles Standish Bromley died at his home, No. 9 West 53rd street, during the morning from paralysis. He leaves no children. His widow is the only sister of Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt. Mr. Bromley, who was a member of the Bar, retired last evening in apparently as good health as ever.

Vive la Republic.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—The Socialists are again active in Amsterdam, the police having torn down several placards with the words "Long live the Republic." One notice began: "Unfortunate is the land whose ruler is a child" and proceeded to prophesy evils should the monarchy be maintained.

Cox Declines to Confer.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 18.—The labor leaders called on Patrick Cox, the shoe manufacturer, but that gentleman said that the matter had been left entirely in the hands of the Manufacturers' Association. The labor men have asked for a conference with the association officers.

Nobleman the Conspirators.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 18.—Another plot has been discovered to assassinate the Czar. Members of a noblemen's club are the conspirators. The club house has been closed and a number of Poles have been arrested charged with complicity in the plot.

CONSUMPTIVES IMPROVING.

Favorable Reports from the New Haven Patients Undergoing Lymph Treatment.

NEW HAVEN, CONN., Dec. 18.—The reports from the patients undergoing the lymph treatment are of the most favorable character. Henry Johnson, who was suffering from lupus, shows the greatest improvement. Already the cancerous growth shows signs of healing, and the flow of pus has lessened.

One noteworthy fact, which has demonstrated more than anything else the improvement of the patients, is the discovery that the bacilli, which is found in all tuburcular diseases, has grown less as the treatment progressed. This fact was brought out by Prof. Chittenden's microscopic examinations. Ever since the experiments were begun, the sputa in the cases of Blake and Bradley, and the emissions from the cancerous growth in the Johnson case, have been daily scrutinized, and the animal life is gradually disappearing under treatment. The injections are now given regularly with lymph, and in considerably larger doses.

THE EARTH SETTLED.

Miners Driven Out of a Pit by Warning Disturbances.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Dec. 18.—The falling of coal and rock and the cracking of timbers in the Laurel Run mine caused the miners to leave the pit and take their tools with them. Shortly after a cave-in occurred, covering a space of many acres. The surface for thousands of yards around is covered with fissures and further trouble is anticipated.

The houses thereon are mostly owned by the company, and many of the occupants, who are miners, have left their homes for fear of danger in further settling of the ground. The mine is located at Parson's Station, four miles from this city, and is owned and operated by the Delaware and Hudson Coal Company.

She Thinks the Rascal is Still Alive.

DEDHAM, Mass., Dec. 18.—A leading lawyer here and a detective have been working for a long time on the case of Marshall F. Gillou, who swindled old Mrs. Mills, of Needham, his aged benefactress, out of $21,000. They do not believe the report that Gillou committed suicide at Hubbard's Cove, N. S., recently. Mrs. Mills has, since the story of his alleged suicide was told, received letters from several points which are believed to have been mailed by Gillou. Mrs. Mills does not think the rascal is dead.

Republican Senators Adopt a Financial Scheme.

THE BOND CLAUSE ELIMINATED.

Senator Sherman Struggles Hard for Its Adoption.

A Bill to be Reported Providing for Establishing the Previous Question—No Recess During the Christmas Holiday—Important Letter from the Internal Revenue Commissioner.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—The Republican Senators were in caucus three hours last night, considering the financial question and the question of passing the Federal Elections bill.

The result of the caucus is the adoption of the financial scheme reported from the caucus committee Monday night in substance, with the clause providing for the issue of two per cent. bonds eliminated. This proposition will be brought before the Senate before the vote is taken on the Federal Elections bill, and afterward a rule will be reported to provide for establishing the previous question, the object of this rule being the passage of the Elections bill. It was also determined, practically, that there will be no holidays at Christmas time.

The bond proposition of Senator Sherman was not given up without a struggle by the Senator from Ohio. He had the caucus committee in session all afternoon, trying to agree to some compromise that might be accepted by the caucus, in place of his original proposition, and he urged upon the caucus the necessity of adopting either his proposition or that of Secretary Windom for the issue of interconvertible bonds. Neither of these propositions was acceptable to the caucus, however, and the bond clause was stricken from the measure.

Another important change in it related to the amount of bonds deposited to be required of national banks. The proposition of the caucus committee was to reduce the amount to $1,000 for all banks. The caucus agreed to reduce the amount to $1,000 for all banks of $50,000, but to leave the law unchanged affecting other banks.

THE TOBACCO REBATE.

An Important Letter from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Commissioner Mason, of the Internal Revenue Bureau, has written an important letter in regard to the rebate of taxes on tobacco and snuff.

The Commissioner, among other things, says: Blank claims will be sent to all internal revenue collectors, and distributed immediately to all probable claimants, who should make early application for them.

The rebate equals two cents per pound, and as no claim of less than five dollars will be valid, all dealers and manufacturers whose stock of unbroken stamped packages is less than 250 pounds will be excluded.

Goods in transit January 1st will be inventoried at the first opportunity, and the rebate will be made to the person who was the actual owner on January 1st if he is a manufacturer or dealer. All claims must be filed with collectors on or before March 2, 1891. The term "original and unbroken factory packages" is held to mean stamped packages, so that a package of smoking tobacco containing one ounce, if it bears a stamp, is to be regarded as an original factory package.

Mr. Blair Lectures the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—In the Senate Mr. Quay called up the bill to provide for the sale of the old Custom House building in Erie, Pa. This brought Mr. Blair to his feet to remark that in his opinion the Senate was wasting time in the consideration of such tuppenny matters. The New Hampshire Senator lectured the Senate sharply on its delay in the transaction of business, and declared that if it did nothing else the Senate should amend its rules and allow future Senators to do something for the country. Mr. Teller took Mr. Blair to task for lecturing his colleagues, and when he finished a vote was taken on Mr. Quay's bill and it was passed.

HAVOC OF A WHIRLWIND.

Considerable Damage Around New York and Along the Coast.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—New Yorkers had a taste of storm weather during the past 24 hours that made life a burden to pedestrians, and almost paralyzed travel by land and water. The wind seemed to blow from all directions at the same time, and the rain came down in such gusts that umbrellas were absolutely useless, even when the gale did not wreck them, whirling the remnants through the air.

At the various summer resorts along the coast in the vicinity of New York much damage was done.

At Rockaway and Far Rockaway all telegraph and telephone wires were blown down. Vast waves swept up over the beach half a mile, flooding the hotels and pavilions.

Several small structures were carried away at Coney Island, and further damage is feared.

All traffic on the Hudson River at Newburg was suspended, owing to the roughness of the weather. Snow fell there to a depth of six inches.

The Hudson River was a rolling sea, and waves washed over the stone embankment and at some places submerged the New York Central Railroad tracks.

A number of small boathouses between Yonkers and Peekskill were inundated. The work on the extension of the New York Central tracks was suspended during the day and 200 men who were at work upon the track quit work.

The tracks along the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad in Westchester County were covered in some places by over two feet of water.

Dispatches show that all along the New Jersey coast great damage was done by the high winds and tide.

The surf undermined a portion of the New Jersey Central Railroad track below Sandy Hook, and for several hours all communication was cut off.

At Long Branch the surf cut deep gaps into the bluff opposite the Howland Hotel and opposite the cottage owned by Mrs. Nicholas De Peyster.

At Deal Beach the surf was very high, and the tide caused the water to flood the beach north of the life saving station. The water surrounded the building and washed away a portion of the government bulkhead.

The highest tide of the season prevailed at Atlantic City. All of the meadow lands beeween the town and the mainland were flooded, and Baltic avenue was submerged at many points.

The surf washed away most of the board walk at Asbury Park, and tore away most of the fishing pier. Mr. Bradley's pavillion was badly damaged.

It will take thousands of dollars to repair the damage done to the shipping and bulkheads by the storm in the Shrewsbury River.

At Elizabeth, N. J., a three-story frame building was blown down by the gale, and streets in some sections were flooded, but little damage was done by the water.

The tide was very high and did considerable damage at Pleasantville, N. J.

AFTER EIGHT HOURS.

The Switchmen and Yardmen of Every Road in Pittsburg Make a Demand.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 18.—The switchmen and yardmen of every road in the city have presented demands to the railroad officials.

They complain that the working hours are too long and arduous, and ask that eight hours constitute a day's work; they ask that only experienced men be employed, and several other grievances.

Their demands are much like those made last April. Several of the railroads are now considering them.

Pittsburg Snowed Under.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 18.—Pittsburg is staggered by the worst snow storm which has struck the city for five years. In some respects it is worse than the big storm of 1884-5, as the snow is so wet and heavy. There are about 800 telephone wires down. The telegraph service was practically paralyzed all day. The Western Union office report their lines down in all directions. All messages were received subject to indefinite delay.

PARNELL SUFFERING

His Surgeon Reports His Injury Quite Serious.

CONFINED TO A DARK ROOM.

He Issues a Strong Appeal to the Hillside Men of Kilkenny.

His Followers and the Healyites Hold a Number of Meetings—Irishmen Disgusted Over the Strife—Contributions for the Tenants' Defence Fund Cease—Serious Charge by Mr. Labouchere.

DUBLIN, Dec. 18.—The campaign in Kilkenny continues with great vigor. The Healyites held more than a dozen meetings during the day, and the Parnellites were almost as industrious, though somewhat disconcerted by the temporary disablement of their chief.

It is announced that the surgeon attending Mr. Parnell fears that the injury to his eyes may result in serious consequences. He has given orders that for the present his patient shall remain indoors.

The Irish leader's eyes have become inflamed and he is confined to a darkened room.

Mr. Parnell has issued an appeal to the Hillside men not to yield to English dictation. He says: "You countrymen of Grattan, volunteers with McConnell, Davis and Wolfe Tone, followers of the gallant Father Murphy, who fought and bled for the independence of our country, will you, inspired by the memories of the past, abandon your chief? Will you give him up to the Saxon wolves who are howling for his destruction? Will you not rather shout: 'No surrender.'" In conclusion Mr. Parnell says: "Men of the Hillsides, gather on Sunday at Johnswell around your chief, hurling defiance at his enemies."

IRISHMEN DISGUSTED.

Donations to the Tenants' Defence Fund Have Ceased.

DUBLIN, Dec. 18.—The donations to the Tenant's Defence Fund have ceased throughout Ireland, and are not likely to be renewed while the existing uncertainty as to the leadership lasts. Prominent Irishmen who have remained neutral in the present contest are urging upon the leading men of both sides the folly of continuing a course which will involve a total suspension of income, and from which neither side can hope to win any advantage.

The atrocious assault upon Mr. Parnell has disgusted all moderate men among his opponents, and has hurt the Davitt following very much. Dr. Kenny, M. P., in an interview with a correspondent, said that all Ireland was thrilled by the outrage upon the man who for 10 years had commanded the admiration of the Irish people. He added:

"Is it any wonder that the Irish people have lacked leaders in the past, when this is the way they are treated? And if they do get rid of Parnell by murder or otherwise, how are they going to secure a leader in any way approaching him in the future."

Mr. Kenny added that the conduct of some of the clergy had been most shameful, and such as he felt sure that the bishops would not approve. Regarding the funds in Paris, he said:

"Parnell has consumed a good part of his patrimony in the Irish cause, and is ready to give a clean account of all that he has handled donated by other people. The ravings of Tim Healy, and the anonymous charges in the newspapers that have always hated Parnell will do him no harm. The fact is that men like Davitt and Healy are jealous of Ireland's matchless statesman, both because of his genius and success as a leader, and because he happens to belong to an eminent family; but the descendant of the great Admiral Stewart and Sir John Parnell is able to laugh at their puny and indecent assaults."

THEY APPEAL FOR PEACE.

Dillon and O'Connor Cable to Their Friends to Save the Cause.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Messrs. Dillon and O'Connor, after seeing Mr. Sullivan off to Europe, met at the Hoffman House and had a conference. At its close the following cablegram was sent to Justin McCarthy, M. P.:

"Have learned with the deepest pain of the injury to Mr. Parnell. Language and acts of violence on both sides will ruin Irish cause in the eyes of Americans and fill the Irish people here with despair. Save the cause. Use influence with our friends and abstain from all personal insults and violence, no matter how great the provocation, and appeal to Mr. Parnell's supporters to abstain from attacking meetings."

Mr. O'Connor thought that the Irish cause had gone backward wonderfully within the past few weeks, and said that if Mr. Parnell kept on in his present stand, even if the election was lost at Kilkenny, the cause would be irretrievably ruined.

Davitt and Tanner Speak.

KILKENNY, Dec. 18.—Messrs. Tanner Deasy, Kenny and Davitt spoke at a meeting in Freshford. Davitt described the fight at Ballinakill, and declared that Parnell caused it by bringing his vehicle too near the Healyite meeting. Tanner declared that the Parnellites had spit in the faces of the priests who were in the rival crowd.

Sir John's Sympathy for Parnell.

KILKENNY, Dec. 18.—Sir John Pope Hennessy has sent an expression of his regret for the attack made upon Mr. Parnell at Castle Comer, when lime was thrown in his eyes, to the campaign committee of his opponent, Mr. Vincent Scully.

TRIAL OF THE STRANGLERS.

Fashionable Paris Out to Listen to the Revolting Testimony.

PARIS, Dec. 18.—The trial of Michael Eyraud, the strangler, and his mistress and accomplice, Gabrielle Bompard, for the murder of Toussaint Gouffe, was continued before the Assize Court.

The attendance was fully as large as that of yesterday, and quite as many persons prominent in the diplomatic, political and social life of the capital were among those who eagerly strained their ears to hear every word of the testimony elicited.

Eyraud was recalled, and, notwithstanding a most searching examination and subtle questioning, persisted in his statement of the previous day to the effect that in every step of the horrible crime Gabrielle Bompard had been his active accomplice.

Eyraud was then allowed to leave the witness box, and Gabrielle Bompard was called. No efforts on the part of the prosecution could make her deviate from the narrative of the crime as she yesterday gave it to the court. Her denial of having assisted in the preliminaries of the murder, or having slipped the rope around Gouffe's neck, was made in the most positive and emphatic manner.

During her examination, Gabrielle was seized with violent hysterics, and was carried screaming out of court. M. Garanger, with whom Gabrielle returned from San Francisco, replying to questions of the woman's counsel, said that he had often hypnotized her, and that she was a remarkably impressional subject for such experiments.

—The Reception Committee of the Y. M. C. A. will meet this evening at the close of the talk to be given by W. D. Murray.

—The Young Ladies' Mission Band of the First Baptist church will meet in the Bible class rooms to-morrow afternoon at two o'clock.

—Fritz Fries, of North Plainfield, has been committed to the Somerset county jail on the charge of having stolen a bicycle from George W. Morrison.

—The Hunterdon Grand Jury did not find a single indictment at their sitting this Fall, and Judge Scudder complimented the county on the good behavior of its citizens.

—Westfield has promised to pay its county, State and school tax, amounting to about $11,000, to-day. This will be the first payment from the townships. It is not due until December 22.

—Scandinavians especially are reminded of the talk to be given by W. D. Murray at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-night on the subject, "The Land of the Midnight Sun." Admission will be free. All men are invited.

—Here's a present for everyone. The Pierson Hardware Company will give a lamp or a knife box to each of those who buy goods of them to the amount of $3. They have, among other holiday goods, fine skates for the boys and girls.

—Beautiful hand paintings of choice subjects for holiday gifts, by that talented artist, Miss Hellwig, are shown in great variety at Mme Getti's, 65 Park avenue. No present would be more acceptable, or creditable, to one's taste.

—This is the tea table conversation of the season in the presence of the children as conducted on the spelling book lines. The wife says: "I think a s-l-e-d would be nice for J-o-h-n-n-y." "Yes," says the husband, "and a b-a-b-y c-o-a-c-h for S-a-l-l-i-e."

—A facetious man who found a local drug store temporarily in charge of a small boy asked: "Got in any of Koch's lymph yet?" "Cox's lymph?"—replied the boy, with a serious air.—"No, sir: I guess not; but we have Coxe's hive sirup, an' it's just as good."

—There are few standing organizations whose annual meetings and public discussions are of more practical interest and utility than those of the New Jersey Sanitary Association, which met recently at Trenton. Sanitation is not, very unfortunately, a popular subject, and yet the papers and discussions usually brought before the State Association are of great importance, and are listened to with marked attention and positive interest.

—One result of the stringency of the money market has been to decrease the deposits in banks everywhere, so that statements made now do not show as large sums of money on deposit as were shown six months ago or more. The money has been drawn out to pay bills, in many cases; but a very large drain on bank deposits has been caused by the low prices of stocks in the market. Securities ran down to such a low figure that men who had money not invested and lying on deposit in the banks, drew it out to buy stocks with. Some who bought on margins failed in some cases to realize, but those who bought outright, as an investment, are moderately certain to realize largely on the appreciation of their purchases.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

John Church & Co., of Cincinnati, have just published for the holidays some new piano compositions by Dorsey W. Hyde, of this city. They say of him, "He comes warmly recommended by Wm. H. Sherwood, and others of like standing. His music is a sufficient testimonial of his worth. Fresh, original and melodious, it will interest teacher, pupil, and amateur."

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

A Woman Leaps From a Flying Express Train Rather Than Pass Her Station.

Rebecca Dunsen, a colored woman living at the home of Mrs. Stansberry, in Exchange alley, nearly lost her life as the result of her own folly this morning. She boarded a railway train at the North avenue station, to go to Netherwood. She made a mistake in the train, however, and was being carried at a rapid speed past the station of her destination when she concluded that she 'd venture to alight anyway, and plumped herself from the platform of the car to the ground. She rolled over and over, and the wonder is that she was not killed outright. She was brought on a train to Plainfield again, and was then carried to her home on a stretcher. Dr. J. T. Fritts, the railway physician, found that she had sustained a severe fracture of the right leg near the ankle, had received numerous ugly scalp wounds, and was covered with bruises from head to foot. She says she had an idea there would be just as much fun in jumping off the flying train as there would be in being carried past her station and missing her appointment; but now she is ready to testify to the value of education by experience as opposed to the beliefs of theory.

One Bookmaker Convicted.

George Johnson, one of the New Jersey bookmakers, was convicted at Elizabeth last evening by a jury in the Union County Court, after half an hour's deliberation. He was defended by Lawyer Kalisch of Newark. Pleas for delay were made in the cases of the other bookmakers, but the court would not grant them, and the trials will continue to-day and to-morrow.

Allen McDermott, who appeared for Thomas F. Egan, filed a plea of abatement on the ground that the Sheriff failed to make a proper return to the court of the names and residences of the Grand Jury that indicted his client. The question will be decided by the Supreme Court, and should the counsel's plea be sustained it will invalidate all the indictments against the other bookmakers.

The Hasselmann Testimonial.

An audience which would have been three times as large but for the storm, thoroughly enjoyed a very pleasing programme which was presented last night at the Gesang and Turn Verein Hall for the benefit of G. E. Hasselmann. Among the features were vocal and instrumental music, a musical tableau entitled "The Three Germans," which was interpreted by Messrs. Maas, Dresselt and Tonnemann; and George Taggart's farce, "A Howling Success," in which Messrs. Howard, Will and Tiffany Spencer, the original players, took part, with the author, and which went just as merrily as it did at its first production in October.

The total vote of these 112 districts is 102,286, of which 59,450 were cast in favor, and 42,836 against the women, showing a majority in their favor of 16,614. These districts represent portions of fifty-nine conferences. There are, in all, upward of 500 districts.

Telegrapher Woods Convicted.

Arven L. Woods, the telegraph operator at Moore's Station, near Bound Brook, who fired five shots at George W. White, June 6, was convicted in the Mercer Court Tuesday. Woods found White walking down the track with a dog, which he had reason to believe belonged to an operator at Bellemead. He attempted to take the dog away, and a scuffle ensued. Woods shot White, and he came near dying.

—The idea that "talk is cheap" went out when the telephone came in.

—Sitting Bull is no more; a fact which is no more conspicuously true than that there is no more advantageous place to purchase holiday gifts than at Collier's, 3 Park avenue. All the latest designs in jewelry, silver-ware, clocks, etc., may there be had at lowest price.

ARTISTS WITH HEARTS.

Amateur Photographers Remember the Hospital Sufferers.

The Plainfield Camera Club held their annual meeting last Tuesday evening, and elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

President—Oscar S. Teale.
Vice President—Geo. H. Babcock.
Secretary—Geo. E. Greenleaf.
Treasurer—Wm. H. Lyon, Jr.

All these were re-elected except Mr. Babcock. Three new members were elected, and the Secretary read his yearly report of the improvements and advancement made by the club. The report was eminently satisfactory.

The Treasurer's report showed that the club's finances were in an exceedingly flourishing condition. Under new business a committee was appointed to inquire into the expediency of the club's sending an exhibit to the World's Amateur Photographers' Exhibition which will be held at Vienna in April, 1891. After the regular business was disposed of, Mr. Teale read a very interesting and instructive paper upon lantern-slide making, and illustrated the same by practical demonstrations and valuable hints.

THE PRESS has always upheld and approved of the work this organization is doing in Plainfield—maintaining that it elevates the tastes of not only its members themselves, but of the public at large. The club now has started on a good work. It proposes to collect about fifty pictures to be placed in an album and donate the same to the Muhlenbergh Hospital. They will also loan to the Y. M. C. A. quite a number of "frames," for decorating their parlor on the occasion of their New Year's day reception. May the Plainfield Camera Club "live long and prosper!"

THE MYSTERY OF A HIDDEN PURSE.

Though Locked up in a Closet the Night of the Wedding, the Money Was Gone Next Day.

Mrs. John H. Stevens, of 39 East Second street, has lost a sum of money in a very mysterious manner, but says she has a clue to where it has gone, and threatens to make things very warm and interesting for a certain party she suspects.

The story of Mrs. Stevens told in her own words is as follows:

"While attending the wedding of my nephew, Edward Connett, at 31 Lincoln place, Nov. 11, I was obliged to stay all night, as the wedding took place at eight o'clock in the evening; and while dressing for the wedding I said 'I have no pocket in my dress'. Mrs. Connett, the mother of the groom, said to me 'Give me your pocket book, and I will put it with Bell's and mine in a closet'. She did so. She says she locked the door of the closet containing the purse, and hid the key, and that no one could get in but herself, unless they saw her hide the key.

"Next morning, however, at about ten o'clock, I went to my aunt's to spend the day, and while sitting in the parlor I opened my pocket-book, which had been returned to me, and found that thirty dollars had been removed. I was excited when I found my money gone, but made careful investigation, and think I am sure of the identity of the one who took it. And that person shall be severely punished, if I can only secure convincing proofs."

The Premier promised that the Government would consider the proposition.

TWO CASES OF INTEREST HERE.

A Plainfielder Who Is n't In It, and a North Plainfielder Who Was.

The trial of Henry Williams, a druggist of Asbury Park, was concluded Tuesday before Judge Conover, at Freehold, resulting in the conviction of Williams on a charge of selling liquor illegally. The jury did not remain out over five minutes The evidence was overwhelming against him, and was procured by the Law and Order League. The testimony of the witnesses brought out the fact that all that was necessary to procure a drink of rum at the drug store was to call for a "ball." Williams made no defence.

Some people not acquainted with George Williams, proprietor of the Crescent Pharmacy on Park avenue, this city, have thought he was the druggist in the above case. He is not the same, although he, also, is proprietor of an Asbury Park pharmacy.

The case of Frank Harris, who conducted the notorious Neptune club at Asbury Park, and was arrested for keeping a gambling house, was called, but the defendant did not appear. The court declared his bail bond for $500 forfeited. Associated with Harris in the proprietorship of the "club" was a young man at one time a member of the choir of the Church of the Holy Cross, and who is still a resident of North Plainfield.

The Grade Crossing Must Go.

Now that the political complexion of the Legislature is determined, the attention of the press of the State is being directed to matters for legislation that concern the welfare of the people and that have nothing to do with partisian politics. All are co-operating, regardless of partisanship, to help to bring about, by their powerful influence, needed remedial legislation. Already newspapers throughout New Jersey are uniting in demanding the appointment of a State commission to take into consideration the question of abolishing grade crossings in the centres of population, and it is probable that the entire press of the State, without regard to political party, will advocate such a step at the coming session of the Legislature. With the State press unitedly in favor of it, the Legislature will not fail to perceive the necessity of complying with a popular demand.

The plan to be considered by such a commission would be one to commend it to the favor of the railroad corporations as well as to the public, namely, the division of the cost between the corporations and the State and municipalities. The public has no objections on the score of economy to any fair proposition involving the saving of human life, and the railroad corporations are not heartless enough to prefer to continue killing people at the crossings rather than make an accommodation of some kind by which the slaughter may be stopped.

The largest railroad corporation in the State has already indicated its entire willingness to co-operate in the abolition of grade crossings, and it will be found that the rest of the corporations are not unwilling to do their part. But independent of the disposition of the railroad corporations the duty of the Legislature is plain, and the press of the State can make it imperative by giving voice to the sentiment of the people of the State.

For the information of those who do not appreciate the value of abolishing railway crossings at grade in towns and cities Plainfield stands as a shining example. The Crescent city considers itself favored above all others in the State in possessing this one benefit alone. Our elevated railway tracks are one of the first things that attract the attention and please the eye of strangers. The public dreads the constant danger of the crossing at grade, and is always happy to see it vanish. New Brunswick, Rahway, Newark and other places are eager to be rid of the evil, and the coming Legislature will find the public ready to welcome legislation abolishing it.

An Unusual Midnight Illumination.

Some of the electric light wires in the Broadway and LaGrande avenue neighborhood were grounded by the storm last night, and for a while total darkness resulted. Later, light was restored, and the lights flashed up and down like the flickering of flame in the wind; and subsequently the lamps burned with an intensity of brightness that woke people out of a sound sleep with its glare. The people were so astonished to see the streets as light as day that they could not for some time get their eyes closed again, for wondering what had happened to make the lamps burn to the high candle power they nominally possessed but which they had never hitherto reached. The light was so brilliant that the backs of houses, as well as the fronts, were brightly illuminated by the lamps of the blocks beyond. The electric light people to-day said that the breaks in the wires had been repaired, and that everything was all right again, and it may be inferred that the same monotonous light which the streets have known so long will again prevail to-night. The question presents itself, however, whether it is not in the power of the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company, purchasers of the Plainfield electric light plant, to burn the lamps throughout the city at their full capacity every night, and give the people the candle-power they are supposed to get. If the elements can assist the works to give such an illumination one night, can't the company give as good a light every night?

Don't hawk, hawk, blow, spit, and disgust everybody with your offensive breath, but use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy and end it. 50 cents, by druggists.

The Growth of Municipalities.

In the last gubernatorial election in New Jersey one-half of the total vote cast was polled in twenty-seven of the cities and principal towns of the State. Counting the vote of all the towns, large and small, it largely exceeded that of the rest of the vote of the State. It can be seen, therefore, that in New Jersey the town vote controls the politics of the State and shapes its policy.

This is true of many of the other States, and it is evident that the cities and towns are controlling, or are destined to control, the politics of the country. The largest city in the United States at the beginning of this century had only 75,000 population. In 1800 only 4 per cent of the population lived in cities having populations of 4,000 and upwards, In 1880 the percentage was increased to 22½ per cent, and the figures of the last census show that the percentage has increased.

Taking other States as examples, the gain of cities in Maine is estimated at 12 per cent.; in Massachusetts, it was nearly 40 per cent.; in New York, 53 per cent.; in Ohio, 27 per cent.; in Indiana, 52; in Illinois, 93; in Iowa, 63; in Wisconsin, 77; in Tennessee, 104; and in Colorado, 169. This shows that the cities have increased more rapidly in the West than in the East, and that the immense rural population in the West has been no check upon the growth of the Western cities.

The tendency of the centres of population—comments The Newark Journal, in this connection—is to be Democratic. In New Jersey only Camden has appeared to resist this tendency. Newark, Jersey City, Hoboken, Elizabeth, New Brunswick, Orange and Trenton are Democratic, and Paterson and Plainfield are gradually becoming so. The same tendency is observable in all other States. In a large majority of the Eastern cities the Democrats are considerably in a majority, while, of course, they dominate in all the cities of the South. In the last few years the Western cities have shown some surprising changes in political sentiment.

Not very long ago the farmers dictated by their vote the policy of the government, and now it is the municipalities that decide great public questions, and make or unmake political parties. And this power of the urban vote is increasing every year and becoming more and more Democratic in sentiment. Those who observantly study contemporary politics can judge from these changes which political party is most likely to control State and national governments in the future.

Home Patronage the Best.

One advantage of dealing with local tradesmen is that the purchaser has a guarantee as to the quality of what he buys. If it is n't up to the standard he can return it and get his money back. In New York stores a large amount of goods exposed for sale, and apparently cheap in price, is more or less damaged or of very inferior quality. Added to the discomfort of shopping in the crowded New York stores, the expense of the journey to and fro, and the higher prices paid, there is always the risk of having palmed off on one a worthless article. If one seeks to return it he finds himself involved in all the intricacies and exasperations of a circumlocution office and regrets that he did not pocket the loss.

Home purchasing helps everybody. It keeps money circulating in the community, and assists all the operations of business. It is a benefit to the city government by making tax payments easier, and it encourages business men to launch out into building enterprises that add to the beauty of the city and increase the assessed valuation. The counsel "buy at home" is especially appropriate at Christmas time. Plainfield merchants can supply satisfactorily any holiday gift desired, as the advertising columns of THE PRESS daily testify.

In Union County 's the Chance.

(From the Elizabeth Journal.)

A New York paper says that "the opportunities for villa sites within a reasonable distance of that city are growing very scarce". This only goes to show how utterly unreliable some New York papers are. Opportunities for villa sites were never more numerous than they are at the present day, and no single improvement that has ever been made in New Jersey has opened up more of these villa sites than the county roads in Union county. Along nearly forty miles of the finest drives imaginable, Union county offers upland sites, level plateaus, brookside retreats, forest homes—everything that the imagination can desire or that wealth and taste can beautify. Besides these the cities of Elizabeth, Plainfield and Rahway offer charming places of residence, while the towns of Westfield, Cranford, Roselle, Summit and Linden offer beautiful places that are nearer, in point of time, to Broadway or Wall street than are the upper streets of New York city itself. Opportunity for villa sites indeed! Any New York paper that says they are scarce within reasonable distance of New York doesn't know what it speaks about, or else is very reckless in its statements.

Three Extra Holidays Before Christmas.

The State Superintendent has called a Teachers' Institute for the teachers of Somerset county, to be held at the school building at Somerville, Dec. 22, 23, and 24, and in compliance with the rule of the State Board of Education, which requires that all teachers shall attend the Annual Institute, H. K. Carroll, James McGee and E. L. Bonny, Trustees of School District No. 98, announce that no session of the North Plainfield school will be held on the dates mentioned.

MISS FLORINE ROSS.

One of the Representative Society Ladies of the South.

Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper in a recent issue gave the following portrait of one of the typical exponents of Southern beauty, Miss Florine Ross, daughter of the Governor of Texas.

Born in Waco, Tex., this charming young lady is in her nineteenth year, a brunette, with clear and brilliant complexion, brown eyes, dark brown hair in profusion, added to clear-cut features, full of brightness and intelligence. She is a fine musician and conversationalist. With a mother of still striking beauty and most lovely traits of character, and a father whose clear, good sense, combined with remarkable ability and honesty of purpose, have made him, perhaps, the most popular Governor Texas has ever had, it is no wonder that the daughter should be, as she is, one of the most beautiful and popular young ladies of Texas.

MISS FLORINE ROSS.

THE FLYING FOX.

A Queer Creature Which Inhabits the Forests of India.

The flying fox is a most peculiar animal, not unlike a mammoth bat. One sees them in surprising numbers in different parts of India, especially on moonlight nights. They are very disastrous to choice fruits, but their principal food is the young leaves of the gum trees. At times they visit certain cultivated sections in such hordes as to sweep away every green leaf, like a swarm of locusts. European sportsmen have eaten them and pronounce the flesh to be palatable, but the natives never eat them. The flying fox is unable to take flight from the ground. By means of its sharp claws, however, it rapidly climbs a tree, from the branches of which it throws itself into the air and skims about by expanding a thin membrane which opens beneath its limbs. It directs its course through the atmosphere with great precision without any vibratory motion. During the daytime these animals retire to the seclusion of the forest, coming forth at night with the bats and owls. They sleep hanging head downward from the branches, to which they adhere by the natural hook attached to the points of their shoulders. One also sees in India the flying opossum, which "shoots" across considerable spaces at a high elevation by expanding a thin membrane attached to either side of its body, and which connects the fore and hind legs.

FLYING FOX.

The First Senator from Wyoming.

Hon. Joseph M. Carey, who has just been elected the first United States Senator from the new State of Wyoming, has served in the House as Territorial delegate with general acceptance to his constituents. He is a native of Delaware, and is in the forty-sixth year of his age. He received a common school education, and attended Fort Edward Collegiate Institute and Union College, New York, studied law at Philadelphia and was admitted to the bar in 1865. He removed to Wyoming and is now engaged in stock-raising. He was appointed United States District Attorney on the organization of the Territory in 1869, but resigned the office in 1871 on his appointment as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Wyoming, which position he held until 1876. He was three times elected mayor of Cheyenne, and elected a delegate to three Congresses. He now comes to the capital clothed with new honors and dignities as the first United States Senator from the new State.

SENATOR CAREY.

Joke on a German Princeling.

A bon mot is told about Prince Henry the Seventy-second of Reuss, who attended the wedding of his newly-made cousin, Princess Victoria, the other day. The Prince was staying at the Hotel de Rome with his wife, formerly Louise Loiget, a bareback rider. The latter, of course, was not invited to the castle, but supped on the night of the wedding with a few friends at the hotel restaurant while her husband was at the royal board. Toward midnight the Prince returned to the restaurant full of the good things he had eaten and drank, while Louise, who had also imbibed freely, was ready to fraternize with any one. The pair upon meeting fell upon each other's neck, and the Prince was heard to exclaim: "Oh, Louise, my darling, my first, my only one!" To which she answered in French: "Oh, Henry, my seventy-second!"

A CONSIDERATE MAN.

Sound Man—Heavens Bilkins, what's the matter?

Bilkins (a total wreck)—I have just had an interview with the editor of the Blade in reference to that article about me which he had in yesterday's paper.

Sound Man—Ah, I was just going down there to see him about a personal matter, myself; but I suppose he must be a little tired after the interview with you, so I guess I had better postpone my visit indefinitely.—Jury.

All Is Not Gold That Glitters.

Gus De Smith was seen on the streets yesterday looking as if there had been several deaths in his family.

"What's the matter, Gus?" asked a friend.

"I have lost my big diamond pin, and I am afraid that somebody will find it."

"I don't understand you. I should think you would want it found. You ought to offer a large reward for it."

"I'd be willing—now, this is confidential—I'd be willing to offer a reward to the man who wouldn't find it, for if it is found it will be taken to a jewelry store and be analyzed, and then the world will know that all is not gold that glitters, and that I paid only a dollar and a half for that gem of the Orient."—Texas Siftings.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

Reduction in Prices for Cash!

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

AFTER DECEMBER 15, 1890,

The Plainfield Produce Company

Will Sell All Goods Strictly for Cash!

We will present a few reasons for making this change in our manner of doing business. In the first place we have our Hay, Grain and Produce inspected and bought direct from the Producer for Cash. Thereby obtaining better quality, also saving one profit, which would go to the commission merchant if bought from sample the usual way.

In the second place any concern doing an extensive credit business must get larger profits to offset slow and worthless accounts, of which with the greatest care there will be some. And the customer who is ready to pay and does pay his bills when presented, is the one who must pay these larger profits.

By selling for cash we avoid losses from such accounts, and can afford to sell for smaller profits.

We ask for a share of your patronage. Give us a call and we will show you how low we can sell for CASH, instead of how high we must sell for credits.

TO THE NORTH POLE.

Voyage of Discovery to Be Made in a Huge Balloon.

The Strange Plans of Two French Enthusiasts—Mechanism of the Most Remarkable Air Ship Ever Devised by Human Brain.

What is there at the North Pole—water, land or ice?

The solution of this problem—one of the most fascinating presented by nature to the ingenuity of man—is about to be again essayed, says the New York Herald. This time the attempt is to be made by two young Frenchmen.

They are members of the Ecole Superieure de Navigation Aerienne and their names are M. Besancon, an aeronaut, M. Gustave Hermite, nephew of M. Charles Hermite, of the Institut.

These two young men, the elder of whom is not yet thirty, are going to avail themselves of a scheme which, while not unheard of, has never advanced beyond the experimental stage. In 1870 Silbermann, demonstrator of chemistry at Sorbonne, and Sivel, in 1874, published the results of experiments, from which they reached the conclusion that to reach the North Pole by means of balloons was a possibility.

By one of those coincidents not infrequent in the history of discoveries, MM. Hermite and Besancon formed their plan without any knowledge of the work done by their predecessors in this line of research. It is only recently that they were informed of the documents written by their predecessors, and were thus enabled to utilize them.

In recognition of the unexpected aid thus received, and also in order to render a tribute to the memory of an illustrious martyr of aeronautic science, the travelers have given the name of Sivel to the machine they are now building, and by the help of which they hope to secure a collection of topographical photographs complete enough to serve as the basis for a map of these unknown regions.

The Sivel will be inflated with pure hydrogen. Its cubic contents will be

THE CAR OF THE BALLOON.

15,000 metres, its diameter thirty meters and its lifting power 16,500 kilogrammes, the ascensional forces being one kilogramme 100 grammes per cubic meter. The envelope of the balloon will consist of China silk of the best quality, covered with a new and absolutely impermeable varnish, which will still more increase the resisting power of the silk and make it capable of enduring without rupture a pressure of 2,400 kilos per square meter.

The balloon will be made in forty-eight pieces or gores; its volume will be 14,960 m. c. 661, and its surface 2,933 m. c. 568. In form it will be a perfect sphere.

The Sivel is to be provided with a small interior balloon or air pocket peculiar to itself, and whose capacity will be 3,000 cubic meters. The object of this contrivance is to keep the exterior balloon always completely inflated and under an equal pressure, and it will also to a considerable degree obviate the serious dangers incident to possible sudden changes in altitude due to those hygrometric and thermometric variations, which are the principal causes of the instability of balloons.

The interior balloon, or ballonnet, is itself provided with two automatic safety valves: it will communicate with a ventilator of great power moved by an electric engine. The ventilator will be so under the control of an exterior manometre or hand gauge that when the gas in the exterior balloon expands the ballonnet's volume is proportionally decreased; if it contracts the ballonnet enlarges and the Sivel will remain perfectly inflated.

Furthermore, the difference in temperature, which is always greater within a balloon than that of the surrounding air amounting to twenty-eight degrees centigrade, is sufficient to cause a loss through the dilation of the gaseous mass equaling another tenth of the balloon's volume.

These two effects combined—atmospheric depression and variation of temperature—are sufficient to necessitate the one-fifth volume given the ballonnet. With the Sivel will be carried four "ballonnets pilotes," fifty cubic meters in size. These are to be set free at the pole to assist in the study of the aerial currents in that region. There will also be provided sixteen small balloons, whose contents will be used to make up any loss of gas from the great aerostat. These will be attached to the periphery of the Sivel's netting and in case of need one of these will be drawn by means of a rope down under the orifice of the great balloon, into which its contents, when required, will be transferred. When this has been done the voyagers will cast off the empty envelope, to that extent decreasing the dead weight of their air-ship. The safety valve of the Sivel will open only when subjected to a pressure of ten millimeters of water.

The basket of the balloon, made of wicker, with a steel framework, insuring absolute rigidity, will be closed over and made impregnable to water, like a boat. Its interior will be padded so as to keep up in the chamber occupied by the aeronauts a comfortable temperature.

A HANDKERCHIEF HAT.

The Graceful Half-Breed Women Who Whisper with Their Feet.

The half-breeds of the West Indies are called the finest mixed race of the Antilles. Tall, supple, straight as palms, these colored women and men impress one by their dignity of carriage and easy motion. They walk without swinging the shoulders; the perfectly set torso seems to remain rigid, yet the step is a full stride, and the whole weight is poised springily on the very tip of the bare foot. All, or nearly all, are without shoes, and the passing of hundreds of naked feet makes a great whispering sound over the pavements.

But what produces the most novel impression on the stranger is the singularity and brilliancy of the women's costumes. They were developed at least a hundred years ago by a curious sumptuary law, regulating the dress of slaves and colored people of free condition, a law which allowed considerable liberty as to material and tint, prescribing only form. The coiffure especially is striking.

It is only an immense Madras handkerchief, which is folded about the head with admirable art, like a turban, one bright end, pushed through at the top in front, being left sticking up like a plume.

Then this turban, always full of bright canary color, is fastened with great golden or silver brooches, one in front and one at either side. The remainder of the dress is an embroidered, low-cut chemise with sleeves; a skirt or jupe, quite short in front and very long behind, but caught up and fastened in front below the breasts so as to bring the hem everywhere to a level with the end of the long chemise; and finally a silken kerchief, thrown over the shoulders.

These kerchiefs, however, are bright crimson, bright yellow, bright blue, bright green, lilac, violet, rose, sometimes mingled together in plaidings, or checkerings, or stripings; black with orange, sky-blue with purple. To this display add the effect of costly and curious jewelry, immense earrings, each pendant being formed of five gold cylinders joined together, the cylinders sometimes two inches long and one inch at least in circumference.

THE ADMIRAL DUPERRE.

A Great French Ship Heavily Armored from Stem to Stern.

A notable French armored ship of the first class is the Admiral Duperre. It was designed by M. Sabattier, and differs materially from that country's other ships of the same class. It has a complete belt of very thick armor from stem to stern—greatest thickness twenty-two inches, tapering to ten inches at the extremities, with a thick deck (two inches) at the top of the belt in the usual manner. But above this belt there is no armored main-deck battery, as in the other ships, the chief armament, of four forty-eight-ton guns, being carried in four elevated barbette towers, two of which are well forward, and project considerably to enable their guns to act efficiently as bow-chasers and at the same time to command all round the broadside and right astern. To facilitate this the sides of the ship have great tumble home. The other two towers are situated at the middle line of the ship, one near the stern, and the other further forward, between the main and mizzen masts. The main deck, although without armor defense, is not without armament, as it carries fourteen five and a half-inch sixty-pounder rifled breech-loaders.

The Boy with One Cent.

It is delightful to think how much fun a bright and healthy boy can get out of one cent. He bought a red top. After awhile he remembered that he had seen in the toy shop some tops painted green, and he went back and exchanged the red top for a green one. Later he thought that he didn't want a top after all, and he carried back the green top and exchanged it for candy. It would be a waste of space to tell what he did with the candy, but it may be mentioned that he took the empty fancy wrapper back to the toy shop and offered to exchange it for a full one. This, however, was a little too much for the benevolent shopkeeper, who said: "We do every thing we can to please our customers, but we can't give something for nothing."

"DOCK" BEAL.

How He Knocked Out a Professional Rival.

HAMILTON S. BEAL was an exceedingly well-known man. He lives in the Mississippi river bottoms, and having, at an early age, acquired a strong appetite for a sort of pudding made of the giblets of the swamp hog, decided to practice medicine. For many years he held uninterruped sway in the community known as Tupelo Ooze, and it seemed that the people had been "squashed" down into the belief that one of their principal aims in life was to be silently murdered by him. In his daily practice he did not discriminate between man and animal. He would exert his skill on a sick sheep as readily as he would upon a township constable, but for this, we do not think that any one can blame him.

Recently a new doctor made his appearance in the neighborhood, but of course received no recognition. Old "Dock" Beal hooted at him and told the people that when they felt disposed to die, they should send for the fellow. One day a prominent man was taken violently ill, and Beal, after looking at him, declared that he was beyond recovery.

The old "doc" was glad of this fatal illness, not that he had any thing against the prominent citizen, but because he might now have a chance to settle forever the prospects of the interloping young physician. Accordingly he advised the wife of the prominent man to send for Dr. Gill. The young doctor came, glad that he had at last found an opportunity to exercise his skill, and a few days later the prominent citizen was declared to be out of danger. Old Beal had been out of the neighborhood and was returning home when he met the prominent citizen in the road.

"YOU HAVE SHOWED GROSS LACK OF RESPECK."

"Why, mussy on me, this ain't you, Colonel?"

"Yes, I reckon it is," the Colonel answered.

"Why, when I left you was about dead."

"Yes," said the Colonel, "and if you hadn't left when you did, I should have been plum dead."

"This here is mighty strange, I must say," said Beal.

"Yes, it is strange that you didn't kill me, but Gill got there just in time."

"So you think that young fly-up-the-creek cured you, eh?"

"I know he did."

"Are you willing to swear to it?"

"Of course I am."

"All right; I'll want you in a day or two."

Several days later the Colonel was summoned to appear as a witness before a justice of the peace, and upon arriving was surprised to find that Dr. Gill had been arrested.

"What is this man charged with?" the Colonel asked.

"He is charged," said the justice, taking his seat and opening court, "with attempting to destroy the reputation of a man that has lived in this community for many years. I refer to Dr. Beal."

"Your honor" said the young doctor, "I have never said a word that would reflect upon the character of the gentleman, and I defy any one to prove that I have."

"Oh, you ain't said nothin'," old Beal broke in, "an' nobody says you have. It wouldn't make any diffunce to me how much you mout have said. It was whut you done that staggered my reputation; it was yo' unprofessional conduct, suh."

"Unprofessional conduct!" exclaimed the young physician; "why, I have done nothing unprofessional."

"Yes you have. You have showed gross lack of respeck for a old doctor, an' ef that ain't a lack of respeck I don't know what is."

"How have I shown any lack of respect?"

"Why, I said that the Colonel couldn't git well, but you went thar an' cured him. Whut do you call that but a lack of respeck, an' whut is lack of respeck but unprofessional business?"

"Dr. Gill," said the justice, "Dr. Beal has made out a clear case of unprofessional conduct, and in this community such conduct is a punishable offense. I will have to fine you, sir. Mr. Constable, stay close to this man until he pays you ten dollars."—Opie Read, in Arkansaw Traveler.

COFFEE SUBSTITUTE.

The Kola Nut Being Hoomed as a Good Home Drink.

A well-known medical journal is recommending the kola nut as a substitute for tea and coffee. The nut, it is said, contains little tannin and not much more caffeine. It is claimed that it will soon take the place of tea and coffee entirely.

Mr. C. G. Loyd, the botanist, has made a special study of this nut and upon this point said to a reporter: "The kola nut is a native of the coasts of Africa, but has been introduced into and thrives well in the West Indies and Brazil. It grows upon a tree forty feet high, which produces pale yellow flowers spotted with purple. The leaves of the tree are six or eight inches long, and are pointed at both ends. The fruit consists of five long, slender pods, radiating from a common center. One of these when broken open is found to contain several nuts, somewhat similar to hazelnuts and of about the same size. The nuts are solid, being slightly softer toward the center than on the outside.

"The natives of the countries where the nuts grow use them for various purposes. They pass for money in Africa. They are also used as symbols of friendship and hate, the light-colored ones signifying the former and the dark the latter.

"They are supposed to aid digestion," added the botanist, "and it is the practice to chew a small bit before eating a meal. They allay thirst, and if a piece be chewed and held in the mouth while drinking the most bitter and stagnant water can be taken, and will taste sweet and agreeable. I doubt if the quality of rendering stagnant water pure is possessed by the nuts. I rather think that the astringent taste of the nut paralyzes the gustatory nerves momentarily, and for that reason the water is not tasted."

Mr. Lloyd said that they are also supposed to allay hunger, but they do more than paralyze the nerves. They have a stimulating effect, and when going on long marches the natives chew bits of nuts continually and with about the same effect as if intoxicating liquor had been used, though without the same bad results. Powdered kola nut is sprinkled in cuts and wounds and has a healing effect. A chemical analysis of the nuts shows them to contain twenty parts of caffeine and but a fraction of a part of tannin.

Uncle Sam's Crack Cruiser.

The Maine will be the largest vessel in the United States navy. She is 330 feet long, 57 feet in width, and of 2½ feet draught. She will be of 6,648 tons displacement, and have engines of 8,750 horse-power. She will be known as a "belted" cruiser. The keel was laid on October 11, 1888, and the work of construction has continued without interruption until the present time, under direction of Constructor M entoyne.

The armament will consist of four 10-inch rifles, two in each turret. Each will have a bore 310 inches in length and will throw a steel projectile nine miles with a charge of 250 pound of powder. She will also have two 6-inch guns capable of throwing 100 pounds of steel five miles with a charge of fifty pounds of powder. In the secondary battery the Maine will have four rapid-fire guns of 2½-inch bore, four of 1.85-inch bore, four Gatling guns and four revolving cannon. She will carry two torpedo boats and will have seven tubes from which she can discharge torpedoes when in close quarters.

The Conquering Yankee Girl.

The German girls are beginning to complain that American and English girls sent to Germany for education are encroaching upon their matrimonial preserves. These foreign girls not only learn the language quickly, but easily make a conquest of the heart of the susceptible German officer. The number of army officers in Germany with American and English wives is very large, and the fad appears to be increasing. The German girls say that the American damsels are as expert as young widows in affairs of the heart.

A Widow's Financial Genius.

Widow Sarah Flint did a smart thing when she married Colonel Alborn Saxton in Missouri twenty years ago. She exacted an ante-nuptial contract by which her children by a former husband should become heirs to Mr. Saxton's estate in case no children were born to them. She died two years later without any children by her second husband, who died recently, leaving an estate valued at $1,000,000. The compact was contested, but the parties accepted $100,000 as a compromise and the widow's children get the remainder.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

I am glad to testify that I used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic with the best success for sleeplessness, and believe that it is really a great relief for suffering humanity.

E. FRANK, Pastor.
St. Severin, Keyserton P. O., Pa.

Pleased and Grateful.

New York City, May, 1890.

I express my entire satisfaction with Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son, who is now nineteen years of age, had been afflicted with epileptic fits since he was six years of age. I tried everything that money could purchase, but no permanent relief was effected, now I can cheerfully recommend, and deem it my duty to advise sufferers to at least try Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son has not had any symptoms of the disease since he used the remedy. I am therefore pleased and grateful.

Utah House, 200, 6th Av. N. LENHARD.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

FRIGHTFUL WRECKS

An Express Train Derailed on a Curve in Canada.

FIVE KILLED AND 40 INJURED.

Cars Leap Past Each Other Down an Embankment.

Miraculous Escape of a Large Number of Passengers — A Car Plunges Into the River from a Trestle on the Wheeling & Lake Erie Road—Four Persons Killed and Several Injured.

QUEBEC, Dec. 19.—The Intercolonial Railway had its good record of immunity from serious accidents broken at 11 a. m., when five cars on the Halifax through express, east bound, ran off the track at St. Joseph de Levis, and five persons were killed and 40 wounded, some fatally.

There were about 200 passengers on board at the time, and when one viewed the wreck, lying 25 feet below the track, it seemed miraculous that every soul on board did not perish.

About three miles from the depot the railway crosses a public street at St. Joseph de Levis by a bridge about 25 feet high. It rests upon stone piers, and the superstructure is of wood. The train was making time on a down grade, when it reached the bridge, and the locomotive had all but crossed, when the express car left the track, and the next instant the whole train was bumping over the rails.

Rolled Down the Embankment.

The shock was sufficient to break most of the couplings, but the locomotive managed to cross in safety, dragging with it the tender and the express car. The baggage car following ran over the bridge and rolled down the embankment nearly 100 yards from the rest of the train.

The second car rolled over just as it was leaving the bridge and fell upon the stone pier, damaging the masonry to a considerable extent and breaking the car in two.

The smoking car rolled off the center of the bridge and fell plump into the street, grazing as it did a corner dwelling house. The car was smashed and rested on its side, leaving only a very narrow passage between it and the house.

The first-class car had even a more narrow escape. It fell at the foot of an embankment and the Pullman car was thrown a few feet beyond and over it, the two cars lying almost side by side. Had the Pullman fallen on top of the other car not a person in either would have escaped.

There happened to be a number of persons around at the time and they went to work to rescue the imprisoned passengers, but it was fully three-quarters of an-hour before the last person was released.

The Dead.

The dead are five in number. Their names are Dioneu, Gauvin, Blais, Le Claire and Winner. The latter was news agent on the road. The conductor, Walker, was badly hurt, and very few of the passengers escaped without more or less injury. One has both legs broken, another a fracture of the skull, and all are cut and bruised.

As the accident happened in the center of St. Joseph village, aid was immediately given by the residents, and the houses were thrown open for the reception of the dead and wounded. The Quebec city authorities were prompt and energetic in sending down surgeons and other assistance, and citizens of Levis and Quebec hurried to the scene in large numbers. The clergy of St. Joseph was also on the spot, giving aid and contolation to the wounded and dying.

ANOTHER HORROR.

A Car Falls from a Trestle Into the River and is Burned.

CANTON, O., Dec. 19.—The last coach of a south bound passenger train on the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad left the track, owing to the springing of the rails, on a trestle over the Tuscarawas River, half a mile north of Bolivar, a village, 12 miles south of here.

The car plunged into the river, 50 feet below, and every occupant, save two, were killed or injured.

The killed are: An unknown woman, crushed beyond recognition; Miss Ada Hall of Sherrodsville, badly mangled; Henry Hill and sister Carrie of Shelby, Ill., burned to a crisp.

The injured are: W. W. Graham of Newark, crushed and back broken, will die; Charles Conrad, Massillon, Ohio, internally injured, probably fatally; Conductor Fred Landis, seriously; Leonard Whitmore of Marietta, leg broken; Mrs. Louis Piper of Stark County, Ohio, internally injured; Ira Cowan of Norwalk, badly bruised; William Gartinger of Ada Ohio, and William Stall of Sherrodsville, back injured.

An Attack on Government Wagons.

RAPID CITY, Dak., Dec. 19.—Major Perry's command joined the troops here early in the morning. Scout Gus Craven came in after a hard ride. He reports that a large number of Indians were seen on a small creek near Smithville, in the Brakes. Shots were exchanged. While some of the Government wagons were crossing Spring Creek, they and their escort were attacked by about 40 Indians and over 100 shots were exchanged. One soldier was wounded and another shot through the hat.

Settlers Alarmed in Texas.

AUSTIN, Tex., Dec. 19.—The Governor has received information that the Comanches and Kiowas are engaged in the "smoke" dance, and settlers near the border are very much alarmed. The Governor has ordered arms and ammunition to be sent to the settlers in Greer County. All the rangers in the Pan Handle have been ordered to the scene of the expected trouble.

DOUBLE HANGING.

Young Sharkey and Hopp Executed Shortly After Midnight.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 18.—Elmer Sharkey and Henry Hopp were executed by hanging in the annex of the Ohio Penitentiary shortly after midnight.

Sharkey was the first to go, and contrary to expectations, he did not weaken. He stepped on the scaffold at 12:05, and 16 minutes later was pronounced dead. His neck was not broken and death resulted from strangulation. He made no confession nor statement from the gallows, simply saying: "I will answer to God for what I have done and forgive all."

Eight minutes after Sharkey was pronounced dead his body had been removed and the scaffold prepared for Hopp, who stepped out from the death cell at 12:29. In less than one minute his arms and legs had been pinioned, the black cap and rope adjusted and the lever pulled which launched him into eternity. His neck was broken by the fall and he died without a struggle.

GEN. TERRY'S OBSEQUIES.

The Body Carried Under Military Escort to the Church.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 19.—The funeral of Major-General Alfred H. Terry took place this afternoon. Family services were held at the distinguished soldier's late residence, the Rev. Dr. Munger of the United Church officiating. At 12:30 o'clock the body was carried under military escort to the Old North Church, where it laid in state for an hour.

The pall bearers were ex-Governor Henry B. Harrison, the Hon. S. E. Merwin, the Hon. Francis Wayland, John C. Hollister, Arthur D. Osborn, ex-Governor Charles R. Ingersoll and Henry T. Blake. The military guard was composed of eight sergeants, detailed from the city battalion of the Second Regiment.

The United States flag was displayed at half mast on the arsenal and public buildings of the city, and minute guns were fired from the Capitol between 2 and 3 o'clock.

A Bulletin About the Lymph.

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 19.—A bulletin issued by the Johns Hopkins Hospital in reference to Prof. Koch's lymph says: "Since the 12th inst. 11 cases of tuberculosis have been treated. No serious or unpleasant effects have resulted. Hourly observations have been made; there has been a rise in temperature within six or eight hours, usually of three or four degrees. The constitutional disturbance has not been great, and the patients have complained chiefly of restlessness, sleeplessness and slight pains in the back and limbs. So far we have not used the lymph in advanced cases, nor can much be expected after large cavities have been formed and when extensive softening is in progress.

Heavy Snow Storm in the Wyoming Valley

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Dec. 19.—Sleet, rain and snow have been raging here for the past 24 hours. It is the heaviest storm seen in the Wyoming Valley for some years. Trains on all the railroads running into the city are reported snowbound in several places. The serious wire trouble which extends in all directions prevents particulars being obtained of the damage done by the storm in the country districts.

Death of Mrs. De Vries.

RAHWAY, N. J., Dec. 19.—Mayor Hyer of this city received a dispatch from St. Michael's Hospital, Newark, to the effect that Mrs. Mary De Vries, who was found nearly frozen to death on December 8, after staying in the woods three days, had died. The surgeons had not performed any amputation upon her.

Respited Eight Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 19.—Late yesterday Governor Campbell respited Isaac Smith, who was to have been hanged in the Penitentiary last night. This is the eighth time Smith has been respited. The evidence which convicted him was entirely circumstantial, and there is grave doubt of his guilt.

Trains Moving on the B. & O.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 19.—The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company report all of their passenger trains running on time. It is now snowing hard at Keyser, W. Va., and delays in that district are expected. The freight traffic will be resumed on all branches to-morrow.

Disappeared With $6,000.

CONGRESS TO DECIDE

A Scheme to Settle the Behring Sea Question.

SECRETARY BLAINE'S NEW PLAN

Pass a Law Asserting Exclusive Jurisdiction Over the Seal Fisheries.

The British Policy One of Evasion—They Want to Continue Poaching—The Elections Bill May be Side-Tracked—Crying Need for More Money—The President Not Satisfied About the World's Fair.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—A close friend of Secretary Blaine's says that he is going to submit the Behring Sea case to Congress. It will be for Congress now to pass a law, either asserting or renouncing distinctly exclusive jurisdiction over Behring Sea, and in the former alternative it will be necessary for Congress to provide the force necessary to support this law against foreign contention.

The policy of the British appears to be a policy of evasion. They profess in glittering generalities to be conciliatory, but when Mr. Blaine asks them to commit themselves to paper the professions are not carried out.

In conversation the British Minister would appear to be ready to concede everything, but when it comes to putting it in black and white it appears quite clear that the English don't mean business. What they want to do is to continue seal poaching. They want to continue it as a temporary arrangement while the great ultimate question of maritime jurisdiction is in arbitration, and they expect that the result of the arbitration will be to open up the fisheries to them and to all the rest of the world.

MAY BE SIDE-TRACKED.

The Cloture Resolution Will Come Before the Senate This Afternoon.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—The result of the Republican caucus is not in the least favorable to the Elections bill. There is a difference of opinion to-day among the Republican Senators as regards the results of the caucus.

Senator Hoar, for instance, says that everything is all fixed for the Elections bill, while Senator Aldrich says the Sherman Financial bill, which was adopted by the caucus, will not come out of the Finance Committee with a favorable report.

The cloture resolution will come before the Senate this afternoon, and will go over on one objection until to-morrow.

The result of the caucus does not clear the atmosphere at all, or point the way to anything definite, either for the Federal Elections bill or financial legislation.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

The Shipping Bill Debated at Length in the House.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—The Senate passed a resolution calling for a report from the Fish Commissioner on the proposed fish hatchery in Northern New York.

The bill to terminate reduction in numbers of engineer corps in the navy was passed.

The bill to define certain treaty stipulations was debated and then placed on the calendar.

Speeches on the Election bill were made by Messrs. Coke, Cullom, Cockrell and Bate.

A number of building bills and private relief measures were passed.

The House passed the following Senate bills: To bridge the Green and Barren Rivers, Kentucky; to provide for taking depositions in Interstate Commerce hearings; authorizing Albany, Ore., to bridge the Willamette River; authorizing Humphreys County, Tenn., to bridge the Duck River.

The Shipping bill was debated at length, but went over without action.

Crying Need for More Money.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—United States Treasurer Huston was asked on his return from the West his opinion of the Republican caucus plan for increasing the volume of currency. He said he had not heard the plan, but any one who had just come from the West knew of the crying need for more money. Any plan, it seemed, would almost be better than the present contracted circulation. More money was absolutely demanded by the people, and it would be well for Congress to recognize the urgency of the situation at once.

To Speak on Jackson Day.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—John J. Maloney and Director Coyle of the Jackson Club of Philadelphia are here securing speakers for the club Jackson Day dinner. They will have Senator Kenna of West Virginia, Mr. McAdoo of Jersey City, John Allen, the Mississippi wit; Mr. Breckenridge, the silver tongue of Kentucky, and the entire Democratic Pennsylvania delegation.

MILLIONS FOR RELIGION.

Miss Kate Drexel to Resign Her Immense Fortune to an Order of Sisters.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 19.—"The Sisters of the Most Holy Sacrament" is the name decided upon for the new religious order that Miss Kate Drexel, or Sister Catharine, as she is now called, is to establish, and which will have for its special object the amelioration and improvement of the condition of Indians and colored people.

Sister Catharine has just returned from Washington, and is at the Mercy Convent on Webster street. She went to Washington to have a conference with Secretary Noble of the Interior Department regarding the establishment of schools for the Indians. She also wished to make some definite beginning for the work of benefiting the colored race.

A site for a suitable building has been purchased at Arundel, near Washington, and the erection of a convent and school will be begun immediately. This will be the foundation of an extensive work contemplated by Sister Catherine. With her 12 novices, who have been with her in St. Mary's Convent, she will go there in the early spring.

Her final vows will be taken in February, and the event will be graced by a large number of the church dignitaries from this and other cities.

It will take place in the Chapel of Mercy Convent, and at that time Sister Catherine will resign her immense fortune, estimated at between $7,000,000 and $8,000,000, to the new order, becoming herself a simple member.

By this bequest the Sisters of the Most Holy Sacrament will become the wealthiest religious order in the world, with the exception, perhaps, of the Jesuits. The Mother House is being built at Andulasia, near Philadelphia, and will be the novitiate for the followers of Sister Catherine.

LOOKS BAD FOR SAWTELLE.

His Murdered Brother's Wife Gives Damaging Testimony.

DOVER, N. H., Dec. 19.—There was a large crowd at the Sawtelle murder trial, the people standing tightly wedged in behind the rail. Jeannette Sawtelle's direct examination was continued. She said Isaac had a small grip with him on Friday morning when he went down town. On his return in the afternoon he had a large grip. He explained that the small grip was in the large one.

On Friday evening Isaac asked what clothes Hiram wore, and wrote an advertisement for the return of Hiram. Witness went to Lebanon, Me., when the body was found and identified it. She identified the handkerchief shown her at Rochester as one given Hiram the day he was murdered; also the shoes and shirt button, the latter sewed with blue thread by her for Hiram. Isaac's sleeve button was also identified. She also identified it by a sore on the hand and a bunch on the instep, where a low tight shoe had been tied, and by another sore on the foot; also by the stockings.

Counsel Edgerly failed to break down Mrs. Sawtelle on her cross-examination. She was on the stand three and a half hours, and wept more than once during the cross-examination.

THREE NEW SENATORS.

The Great Contest Over in Idaho and There is Wild Excitement.

BOISE CITY, Idaho, Dec. 19.—The long agony is over, and Idaho presents Uncle Sam with three new United States Senators as a Christmas present.

The combination made at the Republican caucus between Dubois, Shoup and W. J. McConnell was carried out. Shoup was elected first and McConnell second. They will draw cuts for the longer of the two short terms. Dubois was elected last for six years, his term having been specified.

The town is wild with excitement, and many fights have occurred over the result.

Philadelphia's Belt Line Railroad.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 19.—The Common Council passed the Belt Line Railroad bill, and the Mayor will undoubtedly sign it. The bill provides for the construction of a railroad 25 miles long along the Delaware River front and around Point Breeze to the Schuylkill River. It is claimed by the projectors of the road that it is to be built solely in the interest of Philadelphia commerce, and that any railroad that chooses to connect with the Belt Line may do so, thereby gaining access to the harbor.

Met a Horrible Death.

BATAVIA, N. Y., Dec. 19.—Mrs. Fedora Dimbler, a widow, aged, 81, living alone, met a horrible death last night. She was filling a lamp on the stove hearth, when the oil, which ran over, immediately ignited. The blaze communicated to her clothing, and in an instant she was enveloped in flame. Mr. and Mrs. Dorsey, neighbors, who came to her assistance, were severely burned. Mrs. Dimbler was so terribly burned that she died at 4 a. m.

Iron Workers' Wages to Drop.

SCRANTON, Pa., Dec. 19.—The Lackawanna Iron and Coal Company announces that on account of the depression in the steel rail trade the wages of its employes at its mills in this city will be reduced January 1, 1891, to the basis existing just previous to the increase on January 1, 1890. The reduction will average 20 cents a day.

Bank Officers to be Arrested.

CHICAGO, Dec. 19.—Warrants have been sworn out for the arrest of President Kean and Cashier George B. Warner, of the defunct bank of S. A. Kean & Co. The offence alleged is receiving money on deposit, when arrangements were being made to place the bank in the hands of a receiver.

It Goes Down Fighting.

LONDON, Dec. 19.—Harry Quilter's Universal Review has collapsed, but it goes down fighting. The last number contains a parting shot by Quilter at Henry M. Stanley, in an article indicting Stanley on 23 charges of cruelty, mismanagement, treachery and other faults.

THE IRISH STRUGGLE

Parnell Disobeys His Physician and Makes a Speech.

REDMOND'S DEFIANT ADDRESS.

Ready to Resent the Dastardly Outrage on His Chieftain.

Davitt Makes a Bitter Attack on Parnell—Called a Traitor to His Friends and Country—Parnell to Issue a Counter Manifesto — Healyites Depressed—Mrs. O'Shea Goes to Paris.

KILKENNY, Dec. 19.—Mr. Parnell was urged by his physician to remain in doors all day and avoid excitement and exposure. He was warned that there was danger of inflammation of the right eye, in which case the sight would probably be destroyed. Notwithstanding this warning, Mr. Parnell determined to go to Goresbridge, and help his followers present his case to the people.

He was accompanied by Messrs. Redmond, Scully, O'Kelly and Nolan. Mr. Redmond was the first speaker. He denounced the brutal tactics of the enemy, and argued that such actions proved the desperateness of the McCarthy cause, and the strength of that represented by Mr. Parnell.

He said an assassin had been found to throw quicklime into the eyes of a defenseless man, whose name, whatever his shortcomings might be, would live in history as the greatest Irishman since the days of Hugh O'Neill. [Cries of Shame!"] Was there a man among them who, seeing Mr. Parnell led maimed before them, did not feel the blood coursing hotly through his veins? The speaker here shouted: "We're ready to resent the dastardly, murderous outrage!" [Cheers.]

He then said that those responsible for the deed were not merely the actual throwers of the lime, but also the men who hurled every insult low thoughts could devise at the head of Mr. Parnell.

Mr. Parnell, who was assisted to the front of a wagonette by his friends, addressed the crowd briefly. He referred to the split in the party as due to an attempt at English dictation, and used substantially the same arguments and illustrations as in his previous speeches.

DAVITT'S LATEST

He Says Parnell Will Never be the Leader of the Irish People.

LONDON, Dec. 19.—Mr. Davitt's paper, in the cause of an article on the Irish situation, says: "Every hope founded upon Mr. Parnell's supposed honor, patriotism and political honesty has been dashed to the ground. He has more than justified all that his worst foes have ever said about him. His tactics in Ireland are the crowning disgrace of his career. False to his friends, false to his country, he stands revealed as the most unscrupulous tyrant that ever rode roughshod over the hopes and sentiments of a nation. Let the end be what it may, Parnell will be forevermore impossible as the leader of the united Irish people."

Severe Attack on Anti-Parnellites.

DUBLIN, Dec. 19.—A bitter article in United Ireland says the attempt of the soreheads to degrade Mr. Parnell is the result of a conspiracy which had been hatching for years, awaiting an opportunity for the conspirators to seize upon. Personal hatred, vanity and envy were the motives which actuated some of the conspirators, and others had even baser reasons. Davitt's rancorous jealousy, Healy's putrid scurrility and Tanner's debauched ruffianism, are significant.

Anti-Parnellites Depressed.

DUBLIN, Dec. 19.—The anti-Parnellite leaders are deeply depressed over the Castlecomer incident, and less confident of the election of Sir John Pope Hennessy. It is said that the Parnellites are preparing a request to the hierarchy to forbid the priests taking part in demonstrations of a political character during the remaining days of the Kilkenny campaign.

Nashville Solid for Parnell.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 19.—Hon. James Killelan, President of the Parnell Branch of the Irish National League, sent the following cable to the Dublin Freeman's Journal: "Irish-Americans of Nashville solid for Parnell." The Parnell branch is one of the most powerful in this section of the country.

Voted Out of the Chair.

DROGHEDA, Dec. 19.—At the regular meeting of the Board of Poor Law Guardians the chairman, on refusing to accept a vote of confidence in Mr. Parnell, was voted out of the chair.

Chamberlain's Scheme.

LONDON, Dec. 19.—Hon. Joseph Chamberlain's statement in regard to advances made by the Gladstonians for a reunion of the Liberals, is treated with a very uncompimentary degree of skepticism. By some it is conjectured to be a bid for prominence as a negotiator, with consequent prominence in the reunited party if reunion does occur.

Postal Appointments.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—The Postmaster-General has appointed W. J. Pollock as chief of the free delivery system. George Stone of the Second Assistant's office will succeed him as chief clerk. These changes will not go into effect until February 1, when the resignation of Mr. Bates as chief of the free delivery system has been accepted.

The President Not Satisfied.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—President Harrison is not satisfied with the sufficiency of the financial guarantee of the World's Fair Directors, and will defer issuing his proclamation announcing the fair to the world until the finances necessary to its complete success are assured.

EYRAUD CREATES A SCENE.

The Spectators Cry Out to Have the Court Silence the Strangler.

PARIS, Dec. 19.—In the trial of Michael Eyraud and Gabrielle Bompard for the murder of Gouffe, Dr. Brouardel deposed that Gabrielle was sane, though deficient in moral perception. She showed a lack of any sense of guilt for her crime.

Other medical evidence was given, tending to show that the woman was susceptible to hypnotism. It was suggested that she might have been brought under Eyraud's influence by this means.

At this point Eyraud created a scene in court by angrily shouting that nothing af the kind had ever occurred, and that Gabrielle was fooling the doctors by pretending to submit to hypnotism.

Dr. Vosin testified that he had hypnotized the woman, but declined, on the ground of professional ethics, to give the details. Dr. La Cassagne deposed that he could not say whether the fracture of Gouffe's neck was due to strangling with the cord or with the hands.

The female prisoner cried out: "He was strangled by Eyraud's hands." Immediately Eyraud retorted: "He was choked by the cord that you drew around his neck." These mutual recriminations disgusted the spectators, and there were cries of: "Horrible! Let them be silenced."

Eyraud testified that he put the body into the sack feet foremost. This contradicted the previous evidence, to the effect that the body was found head downward in the sack, but the laborer, who first found the body, confirmed Eyraud's statement.

Skater Donoghue Wins Another Race.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 19.—The event in the second day of the international championship skating contest was a spin of three miles for the amateur championship of Holland. It was won by the American skater, Joe Donoghue, in 9 minutes and 17 seconds. The contest was witnessed by a largs crowd made up of visitors from the various cities of the Netherlands and from abroad.

—The Boy Choir of the Young Men's Christian Association will sing at the young men's meeting Sunday at 4:15 P. M. Harry G. Adams will lead the meeting.

—Wednesday's cold and driving storm was the most severe and far-extending of the present season. It also made shoppers take a day off, and gave the holiday-rushed merchants a breathing-spell.

—Fritz Friese, who was arrested in North Plainfield Monday on the charge of stealing a bicycle from George W. Morrison, says he sold the machine, which was worth about $140, to a colored man for $30. This the colored man denies, and no trace of the machine can be found. The boy has been an inmate of the State Reform School and was recently discharged.

—Geology, which has always been a pleasureable study for Seniors, has been dropped from the schedule of Rutgers College for the present, and German has been substituted, for the classical section. Students of the scientific department will utilize the time previously given to mineralogy in the courses which they have chosen—mathematical, chemical or electrical.

—The Westfield brethren are looking forward to a great treat. The Leader says: "Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum, expects to entertain its friends on a grand scale on the occasion of the installation of its officers, Tuesday evening, January 20, when a full performance of some standard play by the Gilbert Dramatic Company of Brooklyn will be given in Music Hall.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

D. H. Allan, well known in newspaper and financial circles, is the guest of C. J. Noel of Netherwood.

Wilton Randolph, formerly of this city, and ex-Councilman from Netherwood, was one of the prominent members present at the ladies' reception given by the New York Southern Society yesterday afternoon.

A number of newspaper men were the guests of C. B. Ripley, Esq., of Ripley Hill, Westfield, at a special matinee in Palmer's theatre, New York, yesterday afternoon. The programme was thoroughly enjoyable, and the courtesy was fully appreciated.

Bishop Scarborough will visit the Church of the Holy Cross Sunday morning and administer the rite of confirmation. During his stay in this city the Bishop will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Dupee, at 30 Rockview avenue, where he will be pleased to meet his friends Saturday evening.

The Epworth League of the Methodist Episcopal church offers an unusually attractive entertainment to-night at Vincent chapel, in an address by Dr. Jesse L. Huribut on "Pictures of Chautauqua," with stereopticon illustrations. Not only members of the League, but all young people and all interested in Chautauqua, are invited. The admission is free.

The Hon. John Ulrich is back from a trip through Canada and the South, rejuvenated and resuscitated. A number of clients and friends who dropped in at the ex-Assemblyman's office on North avenue, to-day, and asked the young man they saw there when the "Judge" would be home, would hardly believe it when the young man said "Why here I am." And so he was.

All the way from Santa Barbara comes to THE PRESS office, this morning, a box of California fruits picked and packed by the hands of rare old Martin Thorn, who seems to have turned his face but not his memory from Plainfield for ever. The box contains a sample of the fruit of the live oak, Japanese persimmons, olives, pepper fruit, and strawberry guavas. In a letter he says his neighbors go in bathing every day.

The notice of the death early this morning of William Winslow Van Slyck, formerly of this city, will be received with a shock by a large number of the people of Plainfield. He was about twenty years of age and the older of the two remaining sons of Mr. and Mrs. Van Slyck whose friends and sincere sympathizers number a host in this city. Particulars of his death are not yet received except that it occurred at his home, 46 West 73d., street, New York. Notice of the funeral will be given to-morrow.

Thursdays at the Y. M. C. A.

The goodly number of young men who heard the talk of W. D. Murray at the Young Men's Christian Association rooms last evening, enjoyed a decided treat. The speaker held the close attention of the young men, and imparted to them much information of interest and value.

Next Thursday evening college songs and refreshments will be enjoyed.

The New Year's reception will be held January 1 from 3 to 10 p. m. A choice programme will be rendered in the evening.

Young men will be welcome at the Association rooms not only Thursdays but at all times.

A NIGHT IN THE COURT OF COMUS

PLAINFIELD AMATEURS INTERPRET ENGLISH COMEDY AT THE CASINO.

Generous Patronage of the Grace Church Benefit—An Excellent Entertainment at the Home of the Country Club—Admirable Acting by All—Even the Novices Win Histrionic Triumph.

To the large and cultured audience who were present at the amateur theatricals at The Casino, last night was full of enjoyment. It was a pleasure even to experience, during the brief walk or drive from one's residence, the invigorating coldness of the atmosphere, and afterwards the charming contrast of the warmth and comfort and beauty of the cozy home of the Union County Country Club; and all this was only one of many delightful incidents.

The Casino looked its prettiest. A number of finishing touches had been applied since the public last saw the artistic interior, and the stage pictures were shown for the first time. Whenever the rich folds of the new curtain were drawn back there were exclamations of delight that Plainfield audiences might at last behold in their own town stage scenery that was not an eye-sore. The canvases of the three scenes exhibited were very good, and the way that the furniture and various other accessories were arranged produced an excellent effect. The perfecting touch of woman was plainly visible in all the stage setting, and each scene was in consequence beyond the reach of adverse criticism. That The Casino is rich in opportunities for securing superb furnishings for anything it may choose to stage was quite apparent.

Three gems of histrionic comedy were presented during the evening. In the first, "Ruth's Romance", a Summer evening's sketch, by Fred. W. Boughton, appeared Miss Caroline N. Betts as "Ruth Carey", Mr. E. C. Perkins as "Jack Dudley", and Mr. W. T. Pelletier as "Capt. Wilton". The scene was in rural England, where "Ruth" was following the profession of milkmaid, for a period of three months, in response to the terms of the will of an eccentric uncle, who bequeathed to her his valuable estate on condition that during the Summer following his death she desert the fashionable frivolity of society life in London and earn her own honest living, by the hard work of her soft white hands, at this country farm-house. "Capt. Wilton", her sister's husband, had fled the world's megapolis to avoid pressing financial engagements, and was taking life easily, so far as worriment over his debts would let him, in the same suburban retreat. "Jack Dudley", whose father "was in the baronetcy business", "a real live baron", had seen so much of village maiden simplicity on the stage that he sought out the real article and found "Ruth", "saving her from a watery grave"—along the highway with an umbrella. No sooner had he and "Ruth", after a most amusing courtship, plighted their troth, than the jealous lover took occasion to mistake "Captain Wilton" for a rival, while "Wilton" feared "Dudley" as a creditor, and all sorts of absurdities grew out of the two blunders. After a tangle of grotesque incidents "Ruth" succeeded in straightening out the snarl, and the audience was left to imagine the happy future of the trio.

Miss Betts made an excellent "Ruth," naively impudent, a charming tease, simulating to a nice degree the airs of an English milkmaid who could not wholly conceal her city breeding. Mr. Perkins developed well the dry humor and the matter-of-fact love affair of his part. Mr. Pelletier, as the happy-go-lucky, harrassed debtor, entered fully into the spirit of his disguise. The final tableau, with "Wilton", grateful and merry over "Ruth's" generous-hearted insistence that she would pay his debts, leading the way for the umbrella-protected lovers on a long walk through a dimly-moonlit lane, was as capitally done as was all the rest of the performance.

"Petticoat Perfidy", by Sir Charles L. Young, Baronet, brought before the house Miss Maude Agnes Bowers, as "Mrs. Mountrevor"; Miss Maude Van-Boskerck, as "Mrs. Norwood Jones"; and Mrs. Charles E. Brooks, as "Juliette". The comedietta was a bright string of whimsical plot and counter-plot between two darling friends who hate each other as fervently and disguise their hatred as cleverly as only rival women jealous of social honors and attentions can. The stately "Mrs. Mountrevor" and the vivacious "Mrs. Norwood Jones" were both true to the author's models. They carried out in excellent style the deceptions practiced one on the other. Miss Bowers feigned with splendid success the various emotions which her impersonation compelled her to undergo, and her gestures, posings, and elocution, were as faultless and charming as was anticipated from her thorough study of histronic art. Miss Van-Boskerck's raptures over her crowning triumph of the social season, when she accompanied "Juliette," "Mrs. Mountrevor's" maid, who was disguised in "Mrs. Mountrevor's" garments as "the Countess Blavanenski", to the opera; her distress when she discovered the mockery, and realized that she had humiliated herself before all the people of that upper-tendom that she adored; and the chagrin of both "Mrs. Norwood Jones" and "Mrs. Mountrevor" when they found that while duping each other they themselves had been duped by the Lords and what-nots whose tender missives they had treasured, and learned that these high-minded gentlemen had been in reality adoring "Juliette" instead of themselves: were all particularly well done. Mrs. Brooks acted superbly the double role she undertook. Her French accent as the maid, her "delightfully Russian" manners and patronizing confidences as the Countess; her "cute" slips of the tongue as she naively imparted information concerning her "two nights and Sunday off during the week" and other matters; her surprising wit at recovering what seemed betraying sentences, in her conversation as the Countess with "Mrs. Jones"; her charming artificial ingenuousness: were all skillful interpretations of the most difficult impersonation of the evening.

Mrs. Brooks again gave an excellent rendition of a none too easy part in "Little Toddlekins", a comic drama from the pen of Charles Matthews. Here she became the antiquated spinster daughter, "age 48," of "J. Robinson Brownsmith", a young man just turned thirty. The explanation of this peculiar paternal situation of "Mr. Brownsmith" was found in one of those absurd matrimonial complications where a young man marries a wealthy old woman with a full fledged daughter. To add to the difficulties of elucidating the relationships in "Mr. Brownsmith's" family "Mr. Brownsmith" married off, in the end, after much succession of humorous dilemmas, his daughter, "age 48", and "with 300£ a year", to the father of the sweet young woman whom he himself wedded as his second wife, after eight other engagements which "Amanthis", "Little Toddlekins", his "we pet of a daughter", had succeeded in shattering. So he became father of his own father-in-law, and his wife consented to be "mamma" to the forty-eight-year-old "Little Toddlekins", prim ringlets and all, whom she had refused to permit to call her "mamma" instead, and who came so near breaking off this ninth match of her young "papa".

Mrs. Brooks was an exquisite "Amanthis". Miss Bessie Morgan's "Susan" was as good as the part could be made, and her distractions over the two trials of her life, "Little Toddlekins" and "Capt. Littlepop's" cigar stumps, were very amusing. Mr. W. R. Cock made a "Barnaby Babicombe (of Babicombe Bay)" that would have done the heart of Mr. Matthews good to see. He was extremely funny, in his reading of his part of the dialogue, in his gestures and actions, and in his manipulation of the jumping-jack for "Little Toddlekins"; his make-up was excellent. Mr. C. E. Brooks assumed the personality of "Capt. Littlepop" to the utmost satisfaction of the audience. His eye glass, his cigars, his nonchalance that nothing but sight of simpering "Amanthis" could daunt, all afforded food for much laughter. Mrs. W. T. Pelletier was perfectly suited to the part of "Annie Babicombe", and won deserved applause. Mr. Pelletier as "Mr. Brownsmith" was again highly enjoyed.

All of the amateurs who appeared during the evening will be welcomed heartily by the people whenever they again come before the public. The popularity of the ladies won them handsome bouquets during the progress of the comedies. Some very good local hits were introduced during the evening. The intermissions were somewhat prolonged, but one could forgive the length of waiting in the rare enjoyment of listening to such delightful music as came from the piano at Mrs. L. E. Howard's touch. Her selections were well chosen, and admirably rendered.

Buy Your Presents at Home.

As the holiday season is approaching, the season when the purchase of articles out of the usual everyday line is made, a little advice on the subject will not be out of place. Don't be made a subject for other men and women to plunder. Be careful not to be taken for a fool. You can buy as desirable gifts for the holidays in this city as in New York. Just as great a variety and just as low in price. Look the advertising columns of this paper over and see.

All sorts of schemes are concocted out of town to cheat people under the old inducement of getting bargains. All the so-called literary papers are filled with alluring advertisements about bargains in ribbons, watches, jewelry, cutlery, perfumes, soaps, investments in lands, rare chances to get homes in remote parts of the country, etc. Don't be a fool and throw money away in this manner. Don't send your money for anything you have not seen. Don't buy of parties who are not face to face with you. Buy only at home—and only of those at home who advertise in THE PRESS.

As to the Pay of Witnesses.

(From The Flemington Democrat.)

Application will be made at the next session of the Legislature to allow the judges of the several courts to fix the amount of fees to be given to professional men who are required as witnesses at trials. As the law now stands, a witness is paid a fee of fifty cents for a full day's attendance at court. The proposed amendment comes from the professional men, mostly doctors, who leave their calling for the day, at great loss to themselves. If the movers of this change shall include all men without regard to their calling and shall require that mechanics and laborers shall be compensated for the wages lost, it is likely that the amendment will be adopted, though wisdom suggests that the law regulating the pay of witnesses be left as it is.

Westfield to Have a Theatre.

A prominent Westfielder is authority for the statement that his town is to have a theatre, and that an architect now has the plans in preparation.

Do not hesitate, when you have taken a cold, to get a bottle of Hires' Cough Cure. It may save you dire consequences. Make a note of it, so as not to forget it.

Encouraging the Boys.

Since the Mills meetings Mrs. Buell has kindly furnished a room in her residence on Manning avenue, where a boys' prayer meeting is held on Tuesday and Thursday evenings of each week. There are about twenty young lads who attend these meetings regularly, and spend a pleasant evening in prayer and singing; they choose a leader from among their number for each meeting, and are at liberty to invite their pastor if they choose. Tuesday evening last the Rev. Cornelius Schenck was present by invitation and was very much pleased with the earnest efforts of the boys in the right direction, and cheerfully extended encouragement to them. Last evening, Master Louie Hummer led the meeting, selecting a very appropriate chapter from the Bible and some familiar hymns. Mrs. Buell is every proud of her charge, and is doing all she can to make it pleasant for the boys.

Christmas at the Children's Home.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Will you allow me to say, in answer to many kind inquiries, that we plan to light our "tree" at the Home at four o'clock, on Tuesday Dec. 30. We can give no formal invitations, but all friends are always welcome. We have fifteen children in our Home, eight girls and seven boys, and we shall hope to provide for three extra boys. Articles much needed are shoes and stockings for children from five to fourteen years of age; rubbers for those from ten to fourteen; warm undershirts and drawers for boys; undervests for girls; handkerchiefs, gingham, stationery, lead pencils; a boy's express wagon, strong, for heavy packages.

N. E. KIMBALL, President.

A Chance for True Christmas Generosity.

Owing to the recent call made by an out-of-town charity on the benevolence of Plainfield people, the Relief Association is finding some difficulty in providing clothing for it beneficiaries. In some cases children are prevented from attending school by the lack of suitable garments, and the need is especially pressing in view of the approaching cold weather. Donations of second-hand clothing—especially boys' suits and overcoats will be most gratefully received at the rooms, No. 45 West Second street.

A Lively Business.

The splendid bargains in fine Christmas gifts offered at Edsall's have caused a lively business at this popular house. The great throngs that visit the store daily is a practical testimony that the people of Plainfield thoroughly appreciate first-class goods, especially when they can buy them as cheap as the inferior article is usually sold for. The moral is, if you want anything nice and cheap, go to Edsall's.

DIVISION IN THE REFORM CLUB.

PRESIDENT JAMES MCGEE WILL PROBABLY WITHDRAW.

The Revs. Yerkes, Lewis, Mitchell and Others Argue for the Closing of the Sunday Evening Meetings, but the Presiding Officer Overrules Them.

There was a special meeting of the Reform Club held last evening to consider the question of abandoning the Sunday night meetings, and concentrating all efforts in future on Thursday evening meetings. Judge Harper presided and, after devotional exercises conducted by the Rev. W. E. Honeyman, he called on James McGee, the newly-elected President, to give his views on the question at issue.

Mr. McGee stated that the Club owed its existence to the W. C. T. U., backed by the pastors and the christian public, and that they had fostered it from the beginning. He himself had contributed a considerable sum to secure the building they now occupied, and he had obtained large subscriptions from other christian men. It was the christian people, he said, who had been instrumental in raising the means to buy this hall. Beside this the Club was founded by Messrs. Mabee and English, who were christian men, and it was their design to keep it under christian influence. It had, however, in a great measure lost sight of its original purpose, and had antagonized the ministers and churches, and the christian people had been compelled to quietly withdraw. He himself had been insulted there, and he had been on the platform when churches and christians had been criticized in a severe and unjust manner. He and others were unwilling to attend the meetings under such circumstances, and as a result so many had dropped out that only about fifty paying members were left. He thought they had better abandon Sunday evening meeting and get all the christian community to unite on a Thursday night meeting and therefore more good would be accomplished than could be at present.

Ex-president John H. French favored the Sunday night meetings and said the Club was a feeder to the church.

The Rev. Dr. Yerkes sustained Mr. McGee's position, and favored closing up the Sunday night meeting. He declared that they needed a place where all the temperance element could come together and consult, prepare for municipal elections, and in other ways arrange to fight intemperance. He said that a week-day night was necessary to carry out this idea. The Club had not of late been moving in line with the churches, but if a change was made, and it was put under Christian influence, he would feel bound to support it.

The Rev. Dr. Lewis said there were but two things that could keep up an organization—one was money, and the other was conforming to God's word. All history proved that no reform movement could long exist unless it was of a Christian character, and he could see no light for the Reform Club unless it was put under distinctive Christian control. The Reform Club had gradually gone down and it would continue to do so unless it took hold of Christian work. The Rev. C. B. Mitchell said that the theory that the church could not reclaim a drunkard, was all wrong. Many who were there Sunday nights ought to be in the church, and they made a great mistake in saying that the Club was "a good enough church" for them. In Kansas they had held a week-night meeting for eight years, and always had a full house, and it could be done here, and he pledged himself to help sustain such a meeting. Ethan Lanphear said that the Club had been steadily going down hill, and it was high time they tried another policy, and shut up the Sunday night meetings. Frank Harder said that it was time to join a new partnership, take the Christian public in, and cease to try and run it without them. George Angleman said that a change was absolutely necessary, and the Club must give up its Sunday night meetings. Dr. Burnett said that he came expecting to vote for Sunday night meetings, but he had changed his views after listening to the addresses that had been made.

John H. French and Captain Smith spoke against Sunday night closing. In spite of the fact that he who violates his pledge is a member of the Reform Club no longer, Mr. French moved the following: "Resolved, That the Sunday night meetings be continued." When the vote was taken the presiding officer announced that it was a tie, in which case, of course, the motion was lost; but a large number of persons insisted that the announcement was incorrect, and that there was a clear majority opposed to Sunday night meetings. Two persons who counted said afterward that there were ten in favor and fifteen opposed, while others said that the vote against the resolution was larger even than that. A call for a recount was not recognized, and the meeting adjourned.

It is now said that James McGee will resign the presidency, Frank Harder will resign as Vice President, and most of the other newly elected officers will drop out at once. The Club was organized a few years ago with 600 members, and now it has not 60.

"News."

The word "news" is derived from the initial letters of the four points of the compass—North, East, West and South. To all points of the compass let the good news go that for deranged liver, nervous headache, impure blood, nausea and many other disturbances of the system that make men mourn, there is a remedy. Thousands testify that Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets cure these troubles. Small but potent; one a dose.

FOUND DYING ON THE STREET.

Jack Frost, Assisted by Tom and Jerry, Brings a Young Man to Death's Door.

Daniel Sullivan nearly froze to death on the streets of Plainfield last night. Policeman Giese found him lying on the pavement, at ten o'clock, as stiff as a log, and ice cold, and what little breath came from his lips was also chill. At the station house Sergeant Lynch and City Physician Manning labored over the man till three o'clock in the morning, before they restored him to consciousness and were sure that he would live. Had he been on the street another hour he must have perished.

This morning he acknowledged before City Judge Codington that strong drink was the cause of his trouble. He had lain down in the shadow of a fence while intoxicated, and but for a vigilant eye the policeman would have passed him by unnoticed as did other people.

The court impressed on the young man the nearness of his approach to death, and fined him $10, most of which will be needed to pay for medical attendance and for a carriage window which was broken during the transit from Front street to the police station.

Sullivan pawned his watch and chain to Sergeant Lynch for $10, rather than draw his wages so soon from the Pond Machine Tool Works, where he has been working only two weeks.

The only other case before the court this morning was that of Franz Stein, who was arrested for intoxication on Second street. He paid a fine of $5. He has worked for the Pond Company two years. His wife is in Germany.

While the court was disposing of these matters Sergeant Lynch, clad in trousers and a decollete shirt and with his hair banged, roamed around and bossed the job. After ending an altercation with Captain Grant by telling his superior, in an authoritative bellow, that he must n't get so mad, he turned his attention to the spectators and opened the vials of his wrath and abuse on a weak and inoffensive reporter, and drove everybody out of the building.

GONE, BUT NOT FORGOTTEN.

New Jersey's Champion Trap-Shooters' Club Dies Under the Auctioneer's Hammer.

There was a large attendance at the public sale of the Middlesex Gun Club property at Dunellen, yesterday, but the bidding was not spirited, and everything was sold at a low price. Wm. Pangborn, as auctioneer, did everything in his power to infuse life and interest in the sale, and proved himself a first-class auctioneer.

Dr. Nelson, of Piscataway, became the possessor of the club house; Henry Rogers, of Warrenville, the grand stand and another building; Ellis A. Campbell, the ticket office and other small buildings, a portion of the traps and shooting paraphernalia, and M. Quinn, the 1,500 feet of fencing. The sum netted from the sale was small, but will answer the purpose intended—that of liquidating the debts of the Club.

Previous to the sale, three members of the Club, Charley Smith (Dutchey), T. H. Kellar (Tee Kay), and W. L. Force (Forrest), indulged in a little practice at blue rocks for the last time on the grounds where they have in times past received honors and suffered defeat. In this last little skirmish, it is best not to say who came out ahead. The wind blew too hard. Well, the Middlesex Gun Club is now defunct, and there is no doubt but that certain other gun clubs in the State will be glad of it, for the Middlesex held the high honor of "champion of the State," having defeated all competitors who dared to face them at the traps. Since the organization of the Club, many persons have become familiar with the use of the shot gun, and it was only by reason of lack of interest of members that the crack gun club of the State was compelled to disband. May those who have labored hard for the best interests of the Middlesex now

Requiescat in pace.

A Monument to be Built by the Pennies of the Women.

A great many of the good women of this city, and THE PRESS, have received from Mrs. Edla J. McPherson, the wife of Senator McPherson, an appeal from the National Mary Washington Memorial Association for the contribution by the women of this country of a fund wherewith to erect to Mary Washington a monument worthy of her and of the women of the country. The appeal is one worthy of a generous response, since it is the effort of women to memorize the woman of whom her distinguished son said: "I attribute all my success in life to the moral, intellectual, and physical training which I received from my mother." The hope is that this monument shall not be built by a few generous men and women alone, but that every woman by her dollars or her pennies shall share in the work of erecting an unperishable memorial to "that epitome of womanly virtues and graces, Mary, the mother of our beloved Washington."

They Think They Can't.

Can't Westfield have a bank without Charley Hyde? is the pointed question asked by the Plainfield Press after reading the brilliant production of the Great Financial Lubricator in its last week's issue on the Westfield Bank question. The question is logical enough after such a statement as this: The alternative was presented of going on in some safe fashion with Mr. Hyde, or perhaps, of losing the bank for some years to come.—Westfield Leader.

A TARIFF BOOMERANG.

The Pond Machine Tool Company Has to Discharge Men.

(From The New York Times.)

The Republican papers throughout New Jersey have been holding up as a marvelous example of the good workings of the notorious McKinley bill the statement that the Pond Machine Tool Company, a concern having extensive works in Plainfield, has been obliged, "since the passage of the bill and the consequent demand for American-made steel products, owing to the advance of the tariff and price on foreign-made goods," to employ an extra number of skilled and unskilled laborers, and to keep the plant running day and night to fill orders. Just how much of truth there is in this partisan story may be appreciated from knowledge of the fact that the Pond Company has just been compelled to discharge a considerable number of its men owing to the slackness of work, and one of the number says that still others are to be laid off.

The workmen state that, but for the contracts now being filled to supply lathes for turning out guns for the Government, the Ponds would have but very little to do, compared with former prosperity, though it is one of the foremost machine tool manufacturing concerns in the world; and it is further asserted that ere long, judging from the present outlook, the works will have to be closed till enough orders have accumulated to warrant the expense of keeping the shops open.

"So much," say the imbittered employes, "for the false claims about the McKinley bill and for the story that we 'cannot supply fast enough the demand for American tools of all kinds' and that 'we are working night and day to fill orders.' The McKinley bill is hurting us instead of bettering us. It is slowly, gradually, surely crushing the life out of American workmen by increasing the cost of everything without raising the workman's wages. Of late living expenses have increased greatly, but we get no more money for our labor, and work is very slack."

Apropos of this subject is the information contained in a circular now being distributed among the trade stating that "owing to the passage of the new Tariff bill there is to be a considerable advance in the price of tools and steel." A catalogue accompany the circular quotes an increase in prices on a long list of articles. A fair example is steel wire, of which No. 2, heretofore selling at $3.70, is now to cost $4.40, and No. 3, hitherto considered dear at $2.80, is to be sold at $3.75.

The people of this once Republican stronghold are beginning to appreciate that the tariff is a tax.

How to be a Newspaper.

"What is it to be a great newspaper? Is it to rouse the sluggish spirit, to instruct the understanding, to please imagination, to sooth the anguished heart, to be, in short, the guide, philospher, friend and ministering angel, all in one? By no means; for all these things may a journal be and yet not be a newspaper. All of these functions are, indeed, within the scope and aim of a newspaper, but none of these constitutes, nor all of these together, the fundamental purpose of its existence. This purpose must always be to tell the news. It must do this and do the other, too. It must be the preacher, pedagogue and novelist, but it must first be a newspaper. That which tells the news is the newspaper, and that is the greatest newspaper which comes nearest to telling the whole of the news."

So says the Evening Sun, and it is a gratifying thing to see so enterprising a paper following in the path of THE PRESS and making of a newspaper a newspaper.

Plainfield Veterans Will Visit Westfield.

Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., of this city, will make a visit to Westfield, Christmas night, for the purpose of presenting to the Sunday school scholars of the Methodist Episcoal church the beautiful flags which have lately been purchased for the school by individual subscription. The Leader says that the Post has already a warm place in the esteem of the Westfield public, and this occasion will serve to render still stronger the ties already existing between this stanch old organization of veterans and their hosts of friends in Westfield, whose pleasure and gratification they have ministered to on so many occasions.

Their Victory Will Cost $8,000,000.

The Reading Terminal bill, allowing the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company to extend its tracks from the present terminus at Ninth and Green streets, Philadelphia, to Twelfth and Market streets, about ten blocks nearer the centre of the city, by means of an elevated railroad, passed the Philadelphia Councils Thursday by a vote of 104 to 3. The bill needs the Mayor's signature only to become a law. The general opinion is that he will sign it and the Reading Railroad therby gain the terminal location for which it has fought for several years. It is estimated that the extension of the road will cost between $7,000,000 and $8,000,000.

Bookmakers Sentenced.

The Court at Elizabeth today imposed fines and costs amounting to nearly $9,000 on the several race-track bookmakers under indictment. George Johnson, who was convicted yesterday, was fined $500 and costs, and several others who retracted former pleas and pleaded non vult suffered similarly.

PHILOSOPHY IN IT.

Encouraging One Thief to Keep Others of His Ilk Away.

WAS stopping for two or three days with a planter near Grenada, Miss., and one day while he was showing me his cornfield we came across a colored man with a load of wood on his cart. He had taken it from a chopping near by which belonged to the Colonel, and the latter called out:

"Here, boy, what have you been doing?"

"I was jes' lookin' fur you, Kurnel, to tell you how it was."

"I see how it was. You have slipped in here and stolen my wood."

"I dun didn't steal it, Kurnel; I was gwine ter cum up to de house to-day an' pay fur it. Awful times at my house dis mawnin', sah."

"How?"

"Hadn't got breakfas' befo' de ole woman began to chill. Den de oldest gal she began to chill; den my boy Henry was tooken, an' fust I knowed de baby was shakin' all ober de floah. Didn't hev a stick of wood at de doah, Kurnel, an' so I driv over heah to git some."

"And you are going to build a fire and thaw them out?"

"Dat's de ideah, Kurnel, if it hain't too late. If dey's all froze to death kin I use some of de bo'ds off dat ole cotton gin to make up de coffins? An' I reckon I'd best ask you if I kin bury 'em down on dat knoll by de pecan trees? I'll crowd 'em in clus, so as not to take up much room, an' if you'll let Mars Jim Roberts cum an' preach de funeral sermon I'll ax de Lawd to make you a big cotton crap."

The Colonel laughed as the negro drove on, and I asked him:

"Is he telling the truth?"

"Bless you, no! He'll draw it to town and sell it."

"But you appeared to believe him."

"Certainly. So long as I let him steal occasionally he'll keep all other would-be thieves away, and while he is skirmishing after my wood he won't meddle with my pigs or chickens."—Detroit Free Press.

THEY DID.

Dolls, we have enough to supply every child in Plainfield; too many of them we think, but they must be sold this week, so we are cutting prices.
We call special attention to our line of Iron Toys. They are the best kind to buy, as they are the kind that never break; there are fire engines, hook and ladder trucks, hose and cart, locomotives, cars, etc.
How about an Umbrella for some one? We have them from $1 to $3.25.

Handsome goods they are, consisting of glove and handkerchief boxes, jewel cases, writing desks, &c. You can buy them just 25 per cent. less than they are worth.
There is an endless assortment of cups and saucers, fancy plates, brass goods, photo albums, work baskets, scrap baskets, pictures, etc.

Reduction in Prices for Cash!
TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.
AFTER DECEMBER 15, 1890,
The Plainfield Produce Company
Will Sell All Goods Strictly for Cash!
We will present a few reasons for making this change in our manner of doing business. In the first place we have our Hay, Grain and Produce inspected and bought direct from the Producer for Cash. Thereby obtaining better quality, also saving one profit, which would go to the commission merchant if bought from sample the usual way.
In the second place any concern doing an extensive credit business must get larger profits to offset slow and worthless accounts, of which with the greatest care there will be some. And the customer who is ready to pay as his bills when presented, is the one who must pay these larger profits.
By selling for cash we avoid losses from such accounts, and can afford to sell for smaller profits.
We ask for a share of your patronage. Give us a call and we will show you how low we can sell for CASH, instead of how high we must sell for credit.

RHINELAND POTTERS.

Something of the Ware Formerly Made Exclusively in Germany.

Long-Established Potteries Broken Up by the Seventeenth Century War—The Condition of the Business at This Time.

Connoisseurs love—and many who have no pretension to that title are familiar, says the English Illustrated Magazine, with—the quaint drinking mugs and other vessels which are known as Gres de Flandres. Scoffers have said that the peculiar stoneware in question has been so named because it was never made in Flemish-land; but, as will presently be seen, the scoffers are wrong. The province of Limburg, however, now divided between Germany and Belgium, which was so long one of the principal seats of this manufacture, has always been a frontier State, and had always been up to 1814 subject to the counts and other rulers of Flanders.

The ware is in truth essentially German in its history, and in the characteristics of its diversified forms and artistic embellishments. The precise date and place of its origin remain unknown. A well-authenticated fragment of the brown ware bears the date of 1539; but examples of a rude, unglazed, white ware, and of a coarse, earthen body of dark gray, smeared with a lead glaze, have been found in excavations, and may be supposed to have been the productions of a very remote period. But evidently, by the middle of the sixteenth century the art had attained to something like perfection. For two centuries Germany retained the monopoly, and kept Europe supplied with drinking vessels adapted very much to the tastes, to the measures and to the usages of different lands. It was toward the end of the eighteenth century when a successful attempt was made by one Dwight, of Fulham, to produce the like articles in England. This was, however, a period of remarkable activity among English potters. The picturesque, though rude, puzzle-jugs and tygs had been the product of much ingenuity; but they were disappearing before the beautiful salt-glaze ware, much of which has never been excelled in perfection of form and sharpness of ornament, and which had attained to the highest degree of artistic quality before the advent of Josiah Wedgwood.

The stoneware, however, properly so called, was probably produced in numberless localities all over Germany and the low countries, where suitable clay and natural aptitude existed. But there are a few districts to which peculiar interest attaches; these were seats of characteristic and often remarkable original styles. Among the most notable places was Siegburg, situated not far from Bonn, on a tributary of the Rhine. There were produced the tall, cylindrical cannettes in what was long known as Cologne ware, and other articles of a like kind in a white body, often unglazed, but richly embossed with elaborate figures and ornaments in relief. Siegburg suffered severely during the seventeenth century wars, and the potters, despairing of carrying on their industry in peaceful security, emigrated to other lands. All attempts to induce them to return were unsuccessful; but some fifty years ago an enterprising potter undertook to revive the business. With the aid of old molds, gathered from different directions, and following closely the old traditions, he began the production of ware of the old type. These pieces found a ready sale, being disposed of by unscrupulous dealers as genuine Siegburg ware.

In the year 1614, it appears that the Earl of Isenbourg, with commendable sagacity, made grants of land and gave exemptions from taxation, with other tempting privileges, to one Bartrain Knodtgen, a potter of Siegburg, by way of inducing him and his fellow-workers to transfer their art from its old home and to settle in this locality. The men of Siegburg and of Raeren thus encouraged flocked into the new country, and found there the peace and the protection for which in their old homes they had sighed in vain. Their art thus transplanted has survived many vicissitudes, at times has been well-nigh extinguished, but has happily revived, and it flourishes to-day in greater volume than ever. the name of Knodtgen being still borne by many of those who are associated with its fortunes

In the earlier days of which we have spoken the stoneware of the Kannenbacherland had no special character of its own sufficient to make it easily distinguishable from the productions of the Limbourg center from which it had been imported. As a general rule, it may be said that one seldom finds original figure subjects, or delicate friezes of ornamentation, such as those which are the glories of the treasured examples of old Siegburg and Raeren. When subjects of this kind are found they are generally borrowed from the older types. The relief ornamentation was generally impressed by small metal seals, and these rosettes were then connected by steams and branches incised in the clay. Often enough a medallion portrait or heraldic panel occupies the center of the piece, but such always has the appearance of being a mere accessory rather than an essential detail in the general and harmonious design. The effect thus obtained was heightened by the employment of bright colored enamels, in deference to the rather gaudy taste of the age; harmonious blendings of purples and blues are the principal characteristics of the ware.

The Kannenbacherland of to-day comprises nine busy villages, of which the two most populous, Hohr and Grenzhausen, give a common title to the whole district. Hohr has between two and three thousand population, and signs of the craft obtrude on every hand. The process of manufacture is often carried on under the public gaze. There are about fifty ovens in which ware is fixed, and these belong to fully as many master employers. At Grenzhausen chemical utensils and drain pipes are among the special goods manufactured. Grenzausen's greatest fame, however, rests on the making of a certain jug and mug that are the joy of every beer-drinker in Germany. In general appearance the town is much like Hohr, as are also Brounbach, Rousbach, Hilgert, Mayendorf, Wirges, Hillscheid and Arzbach. The last place chiefly produces mineral water bottles, of which millions are disposed of annually. At the Staffordshire potteries, where the Wedgwood ware is produced, the whole or nearly all the material is brought from a distance, the clay and marls found at hand a century and over ago having been exhausted. In the Hohr-Grenzhausen country, to the contrary, raw material is contiguous and abundant. In general appearance the factories or Hohr-Grenzhansen suggest a comparison with the small potteries that might have been built in Staffordshire in the far-away pre-Wedgwood days. There is the same absence of architectural design, the same look of haphazardness, the familiar maze without the smallest suggestion of a plan. All the world over, indeed, there is a family likeness between the workshops, wherein the potter's simple craft was pursued until the very modern edifices of the great houses of to-day came to be constructed. It is not im possible that under the influences thus foreshadowed the handicraft may disappear, and with it the imagery that is as true to-day as it was thousands of years ago, of clay in the potter's hands, and of the power which he possessed, of his simple volition, of the same lump, to make one vessel unto honor and another unto dishonor.

It is, however, noticeable that the ancient art of the "thrower"—the potter of antiquity—is largely practiced here, though many of the objects are pressed from plaster molds. Women are employed to attach the handles and spouts and to finish the ware after it has left the thrower. Upon the women too devolves the delicate work of scratching in the clay such patterns of flowers and arabesques as form a rough decoration on the surface. Models or patterns are rarely used. The women trace their design with great freedom of hand. These devices in "scratching" are subsequently relieved by broad touches of color, the cobalt used being mixed with water and clay, with a further admixture of salt to make the pigment run fluidly under the brush.

The apprentices serve a term of from three to four years, and the work people are paid upon a system of piece work called "Tagenwerken," under which a given number of differing articles are adopted as the unit for calculating the work per day. For example, a man is understood to make in one day two hundred and forty mineral water bottles or one hundred and sixty mugs of one liter size.

The process of firing differs materially from that commonly pursued in the ordinary manufacture of pottery. There the oven is vertical, inclosed within a bottle-shaped "hovel," which protects it and the fires from the external weather. At Hohr-Grenzhausen the oven is of a long horizontal form, with apertures at intervals along each side of the arched roof, covered with earthenware slabs which are removable at particular stages of the firing. This is for the purpose of throwing in the salt, the fusing of which at the proper heat gives to the ware its glazed surface.

Mr. Upton Flatte—My dear, I don't think I can. I'm a little short, and by the time I have bought some cigars, and gloves, and neckties, and a few other things I really need, I don't think I shall have any money to spare.—Munsey's Weekly

ORATOR IN THE ROUGH.

An Evangelist to the Mountaineers of Virginia.

His Simplicity and Fervor—Wonderful Work of an Untutored But Devoted Preacher Among a Reckless People.

Rev. Joseph C. Wells, of Big Stone Gap, Va., is a Baptist preacher of great power, who exhorts the primitive mountaineers among whom he has resided all his life in their own dialect, for the simple reason that he knows no other. He is the most influential man in the group of four counties which go to make up the mountain region and is, according to the Chicago Post, altogether a unique character. He can sway his hearers at will—can move them to tears or stir them to the highest pitch of enthusiasm; yet he himself can barely read and write and has confined his studies to the Bible and a few simple religious books. He has never come in contact with the world outside of his mountain home, has never visited even Bristol, the nearest town to where he lives, has never been in a railway train and never saw one until very recently when a new road was run close to his homestead. But his fame has gone all over Virginia and large crowds throng to hear him whenever he goes to preach. He travels on foot or on horseback from place to place and never refuses to answer a call, whether it be to marry a couple who can not afford to give him a fee, to visit the sick, or to exhort sinners to repentance. He knows every nook and cranny of the mountain country and is familiar with the least frequented by-paths, as well as the so-called roads which traverse the highlands. He does not follow the apostolic maxim that "those who preach the gospel should live by the gospel," for his scanty living is eked out by hard work on the little patch of ground which surrounds the one-roomed log cabin in which he and his family live. The largest amount of money he ever received in one year for preaching is $75 and his average yearly receipts are under $30. He loves his work, no for the money that is in it, but for the good he can do to his fellow men and women.

This apostle of the mountains was born fifty-eight years ago almost on the spot where his little log cabin now stands. When he married the mother of his ten children, he being eighteen and she a few months younger, his father deeded him a slice of the old farm and he built with his own hands the log cabin which is still his home. Betsy was a Kentucky girl who came to Big Stone Gap on a visit to a married sister and the strapping young son of the mountains fell in love with her on sight. He has never had any reason to regret his choice. While her husband was away on his missionary work his sturdy wife attended to the farm work and kept the children near her in the fields.

Mr. Wells could neither read nor write until after he was eighteen, when he was converted by hearing a sermon which had a great effect upon him. His mother was his teacher. He studied in the fields during intervals of work and his mother heard his lessons by the log fire at night. Here is a specimen of his preaching in the homely speech of the mountains: "Tuhn to yo' Savioh! Tuhn to th' Lord God thet made ye 'n thet you've scandalized all yo' shameful life! Yes, you'll tuhn then in yo' old age, when yo' bes' days hev went, 'n yo' airthly frens hev left ye But oh, my brethern, why don't ye tuhn naow—this day—this night—this minute? Why don't ye throw off the shackles o' Satin an' stand for'erd a sarvant o' Christ? Don't be afeerd to acknowledge him! Don't be afeerd to say ye hev sinned! Don't be afeerd to say befo' all the wo'ld 'Th' Lord God is my Savioh! In th' Lord God I trust.' Come naow while yo' chil'len kin see ye. Come naow while yo' wife is right a heah to shed teahs o' joy with yo's. Don't wait—don't put it off—don't say next yeah will do. Fo' the yeahs go by 'n the night cometh—'n praps you'll wait too long, my brethern, 'n fin' noth'n' befo' you but evahlastin' night."

Street Railway Mileage.

In street railway mileage increase during the last ten years Chicago heads the list with 104.31 miles; Boston, a good second, with 100.86; and New York, a poor third, with only 46.55. In percentage of increase Minneapolis comes first, Milwaukee second, Detroit third and Chicago fourth, Boston being seventh and New York sixteenth on the list. In total mileage Philadelphia ranks first, with 283.47 miles; Boston second, with 200.86; Chicago third, with 184.78; and New York fourth, with 177.10. Ranked by trackage, New York stands first, with 368.62 miles; Chicago second, with 365.50; and Boston third, with 339.47.

HUMAN SOAP GOURDS

Quaint Characters Found in the Flatwoods of Florida.

THE MAN WITH A MESSAGE.

IT WAS a tall, lank individual, with homespun shirt, open at the throat, jean trousers, stuffed in his boots, a broad-brim slouch hat, a gun across his arm and the queerest complexion of any mortal I ever saw. He was the color of a frost-bitten pumpkin, and his skin was as wrinkled and wretched-looking as a side of russet leather that had lain in the rain for many weeks.

I met him down in the flatwoods of Florida, on the road between Tallahassee and Crawfordsville. I afterwards saw others of the same peculiar complexion, but that fellow's image haunts me still. Seeing how intently I was gazing at this queer character, my traveling companion asked:

"Well, what do you think of him?"

"What is he?"

"Why, my friend, that is nothing more nor less than an animated soap gourd."

"A what?"

"Yes, that's what he is—a human soap gourd."

"You don't mean to say that he is a soap eater?"

"Not exactly that, but he eats the ingredients and the soap is made in his stomach."

"You don't say. Explain."

"Well, you see, this section is underlaid by a wonderful strata of lime rock. As a matter of course the well water is thoroughly impregnated with rotten lime, and it is the only drinking water the people hereabouts have—quite different from the pure water among the clay hills close around Tallahassee."

"What has that to do with it?"

"Hold on; I haven't make the connection yet. These people eat very fat hog meat, their bread is made to rise by using great quantities of carbonate of soda, and when they get all this mess in their stomachs the work of soap-making begins. Lime water, alkali of the soda, grease of the hog meat, heat of the stomach. See?"

"WHERE ARE THE OLD FOLKS?"

"Ugh! I don't wonder at their having such yellow, parchment-like skins."

On our way back we stopped at Tom's house for dinner, so that I might see that spread of soap-making ingredients.

As we rode up to the door of the log cabin a pack of some dozen or more curs, of every conceivable size and color, came rushing snarling and snapping at our horses' heels. A tow-headed girl of about fourteen summers peeped around the corner of the hut and yelled:

"What yer want?"

"Call off your dogs, Sallie. We are going to stay to dinner," said my companion.

"Wall, why don't yer light? Yer know them purps won't bite. Yer've bin here before, Dick. Who's thet chap?"

"He's all right, Sallie; he wants your dad to tell him about the hunting in these parts."

We hitched our horses to pine saplings and had almost reached the door when a swarm of half-naked, tallow-faced, frowsly-headed urchins surrounded us. Miss Sallie had come from the corner and was waiting to receive us, cordially inviting us to enter.

"Where are the old folks?" asked my friend.

"Mam, she's a-sottin' out 'tater vines, and dad, he's a-huntin'. They'll be here arter while. Sit down."

Sallie then went to the back door, and, placing a cow-horn to her lips, blew several loud blasts.

"That'll fotch 'em," she said, as she came back into the room.

In a few minutes the old lady, with her home-spun skirts gathered up and tied around her waist with a string, came in, her rough hands full of mud and a tired look on her care-worn face.

"Howdy, Dick, and you too, stranger?"

The dinner! I tied hard to eat, but wild visions of human soap factories flitted before my agonized mental eyes and I could not swallow to save me. However, the others all ate with seeming relish.

The spread consisted of great gobs of fat pork, roasted sweet potatoes, boiled long-leaf collards, syrup, black coffee without sugar and corn bread.

As we rode back through the woods to Tallahassee my friend told me that little Sallie and her mother did all the work about the place, raising what crops they could, and that Tom never did any thing but hunt and drink corn-juice whisky.—N. Y. World.

SUCCI'S GREAT FAST

It Will End at Eight O'Clock This Evening.

HAS LOST FORTY-TWO POUNDS.

The Case Has Attracted Something More Than Public Curiosity.

Watched for Forty-five Days by a Committee of Trustworthy Physicians—The Fast to be Broken by Small Doses of Cocoa—George Francis Train to Preside at His Dinner To-Morrow.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—At 8:10 o'clock this evening Signor Giovanni Succi, who began a 45 days' fast on the 5th of November last, will have completed his period of voluntary abstinence from all forms of nourishment.

For the first time of which there is any official and trustworthy record, a human being in a state of mental and physical health will have lived for more than six weeks without taking any food.

There is no reasonable doubt that this attempt has been a bona fide one, and that Succi has partaken of nothing but ice, water, seltzer and a very small quantity of his "elixir," which chemical analysis has shown contains no nourishment. So fasting for 45 days is practically an accomplished fact. At any rate, at the present writing, Succi has been without food for nearly 45 days.

At the beginning of the fast he weighed 147 pounds. He now weighs 106 pounds.

The loss of facial tissue has drawn one side of his face away, so that he looks as if he had a continual squint. This is caused by a partial paralysis of the optic nerve of one eye. His eyes are blood shot, his face and neck are wax-like in color, and his whole appearance is that of a man suffering the keenest mental and physical torture.

Watched by Doctors.

The case has attracted something more than mere public curiosity in New York. A medical committee of responsible and trustworthy physicians has had Succi under their personal supervision. They have taken accurate data from day to day and from stage to stage of the fast. Besides a score of student and newspaper watchers have been in constant attendance, and Succi has not been left alone for a moment since November 5, at 8 o'clock in the evening. He has not had an opportunity to take food, even if he had the inclination to do so.

How He'll Break His Fast.

When the fast ends to-night Succi will regale himself with a teaspoonful of cocoa and this must suffice him for an hour. At the end of that time he will take two teaspoonfuls and every hour up to midnight he will continue to double the dose.

The real breaking of the fast will occur on Sunday afternoon in the concert hall of Koster & Bial, when the faster will eat a square meal if his stomach will stand it. Of this there is some doubt. The digestive organs will need considerable oiling up, so to speak, before they can stand a hearty meal.

George Francis Train will preside at this ceremony. The philosopher of Madison square will hold a genuine psychic seance with Succi and there will be a general rejoicing and feasting.

When the signor has finished his long fast he will go to a museum in Boston at a salary of $1,500 per week.

SIX MEN DROWNED.

Terrible Accident While Unloading Coal from a Steamer.

HALIFAX, N. S., Dec. 20.—A terrible accident occurred on the Cunard's south wharf, formerly known as Mooney's wharf, at 10 o'clock last night, by which six men were drowned and several others had narrow escapes.

A number of men were unloading coal from Sydney, on the steamer Oakdene, and putting it into a large shed. Eight men were in one part of the shed working on the top of the heap, trimming the coal as it was unloaded, when suddenly, and without any warning, a large piece of the wharf caved in. The men felt it sinking and made frantic efforts to escape from the shed.

So far as is known two of the men succeeded in getting out, but the other six are believed to have gone down with the coal below the water.

No News of Indian Battles.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—The War Department has received no news of battles between Indians and soldiers on the Western frontier. Reports of recent engagements are discredited at the War Department.

Ocean Postal Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—G. A. Sachse of the German Empire Telegraph Department, has arrived in this city to consult Postmaster-General Wanamaker on the proposed plan of placing postal clerks on ocean steamers.

Dragged from a Car by a Signal Arm.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Dec. 20.—B. O. Kiernan of West Haven, baggage master of the Shore Line express due in this city at 2 o'clock, while leaning out of the car door was struck on the head by a signal arm and drawn from the car. He fell alongside the car in an unconscious condition. He was picked up and taken to the Emergency Hospital, where his wounds, which were principally on the head, were dressed. There is little chance of his recovery.

Grand Dukes in a Nihilist Plot.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 20.—Members of the Imperial Yacht Club of this city are said to be under surveillance in connection with a Nihilist plot. The membership of this club includes some of the grand dukes and many of the high nobility of the Empire.

HANGED IN EFFIGY.

A Dummy Figure of Superintendent Walmsley Dangles in the Breeze.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 20.—Superintendent Walmsley of the Clark Thread Company was hanged in effigy from a wire strung between two poles at Crane and Stone streets, and the effigy swung in the air until about the noon hour. The striking spinners and the other locked-out operatives of the mills claim that they knew nothing about the afair until long after the figure had been cut down.

Bustles of all kinds were strung on the wire that held up the dummy. On a white paper in blue letters on the effigy was the following: "Walmsley's institution. Old boy, you are up a tree."

The bustles were supposed to be as a reminder of the strike which happened about a year ago. At that time Superintendent Walmsley issued an order prohibiting the girls from wearing bustles while at work in the mills. The entire force went on strike in support of the rights of the girls to wear bustles whenever they wished, and the superintendent had to yield the point before the employes would return.

A member of the Clark Company reiterated the statement that the spinners quit work against orders, and thereby threw 2,000 persons, mostly females, out of employment. Afterward the following announcement was made:

"The company will start the mills next Monday morning. But they reserve the right to take back whom they please. There are 1,800 out and 1,790 can apply Monday with every reason for expected employment. The company absolutely declines to enter into any controversy."

THE MINERS' DEMANDS.

An Increase in Wages or 16,000 Men Will Quit Work.

ALTOONA, Pa., Dec. 20.—The miners' convention adopted a resolution demanding 50 cents per net ton, the price now paid being 50 cents per gross ton. This is to go into effect January 1, and if the demand is not complied with by the operators the 16,000 miners represented by the convention are to be called out at once.

The dead work scale as adopted by the August convention has been referred to the incoming executive board to enforce. They also demand that the check-weightman's and all other assessments be collected through the company offices. After the election of district officers the convention adjourned.

THE GROUND SANK.

Five Cave-ins Cause Great Excitement in a Pennsylvania Town.

SCRANTON, Pa., Dec. 20.—The ground sank several inches at the borough of Parsons, near here, yesterday, causing a cave-in in five different mines.

It threw the town into a state of great excitement. Several residences and the Baptist Church were seriously damaged. Business places in the affected districts were closed.

Kidnapped His Child.

MARTIN'S FERRY, O., Dec. 20.—Last March Rudolph Craig, a glass worker of Wheeling, W. Va., gave his 4-year-old child to Mrs. Wilson Hymes of Martin's Ferry to keep. He was married again a short time since and Mrs. Hymes refused to surrender the child. Last night Craig went to her residence, accompanied by his two sisters, knocked Mrs. Hymes down and held her while his two sisters kidnapped the child and the three fled. Craig has crossed the river with the child and a warrant has been issued for his arrest.

Emin Pasha Recalled.

BERLIN, Dec. 20—Advices from East Africa are to the effect that Baron Wissman has recalled Emin Pasha from the interior, owing to alleged disregard of orders. Wissman claims that Emin's conduct has seriously impeded the operations of Baron Stokes. He also charges that Emin refused to act in accordance with the plans of the Imperial Government. Emin will return, after taking measures to secure the Victoria Nyanza station. The news causes a sensation in Berlin.

Bishop Thorp's School Robbed.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Dec. 20.—Bishop Thorp's school for young ladies in South Bethlehem was robbed last night. The robbers secured $90 in money, three gold watches and one of silver, 14 pairs gold bracelets, 10 necklaces, 20 valuable rings, diamond pin and numerous other articles. The scholars were at supper at the time of the robbery.

Settlers Frightened.

Life Imprisonment for Bellware.

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 20—The jury in the case of Hazen Bellware of Glastonbury, charged with the murder of Frank E. Miner of East Hartford, July 21, 1890, returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the second degree. The prisoner was sentenced to imprisonment for life.

THE FINANCIAL BILL

It Is Agreed to by the Committee of the Senate.

MR. SHERMAN TO REPORT IT.

The Democratic Members Reserve the Right to Oppose the Whole Measure.

The President to Send a Special Message to Congress on the Seal Controversy—The Tariff Resolution Withdrawn—No News of Indian Battles Received by the War Department—Ocean Postal Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—The Finance Committee of the Senate has agreed to report the financial bill introduced by Senator Sherman. The only amendments made in committee are said to be in phraseology.

The chairman of the Finance Committee, Senator Morrill, was opposed to some of the propositions contained in the bill, and, with Senator Sherman, reserved the right to vote for the restoration of the 2 per cent. bond clause when the bill is considered in the Senate. Senator Hiscock reserved the right to vote against that part of the proposition relative to supplying the deficiency in national bank circulation, which proposes to authorize the issue of original Treasury notes therefor, if silver bullion cannot be purchased.

The Democratic members of the committee reserved the right to oppose the whole bill, inasmuch as they had no proper opportunity to examine it, but consented to the report of the measures, so that no yea and nay vote was necessary. The absentees at the meeting were Senators Aldrich and Jones of Nevada. It is the purpose of the committee to report the bill at the earliest moment practicable, and Senator Sherman has been charged with that duty.

A MESSAGE ON SEALS.

The President Will Review the Question for Congress.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—President Harrison expects to accompany his transmission to Congress of the further papers relating to the Behring Sea controversy with a special message of some length. In this message he will express in language of his own selection his views respecting the rights and claims of the United States connected with the seal fishery, the comparative merits of the conduct and position of the two governments since the first seizures in 1886, and the duty of Congress in the present position of the question.

The messsage will be framed with especial reference to the now pending proposal of the British government for an arbitration, which proposal it is intended to reject before any communication is made to Congress. The rejection of the proposal will affect a practical if not complete suspension of diplomatic efforts for a settlement, there being no expectation that either government will bring forward any offer for a renewal of negotiations after the impending rejection of the British tender of arbitration has been notified by Mr. Blaine to Sir Julian Pauncefote.

THE DAY IN CONGRESS.

Senator Stanford Speaks in Favor of His Loan Bill.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—Mr. Stanford addressed the Senate at length in support of his government loan bill. The bill was referred to the Finance Committee.

The printing deficiency bill was passed. Mr. Blair made a long humorous explanation to show the falsity of a published story that he was not on good terms with the President.

Mr. Bate, Mr. Gibson and Mr. Stewart (Rep.) spoke in opposition to the Federal election bill.

The House agreed on the conference report on the bill conferring powers on the Baltimore & Potomac Railroad in the District of Columbia and the conference report on the bill amending the act to divide the Sioux Indians in Dakota.

Will Withdraw His Tariff Resolution.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—It is understood that after a consultation between Senator Sherman and Representative McKinley, the former has determined to withdraw the resolution introduced by him to so construe the tariff law as to maintain the Hawaiian reciprocity treaty in operation. The probability of amendments being offered, which might reopen the entire tariff question, is understood to have caused this decision.

Queen Natalie Threatened.

BELGRADE, Dec. 20.—The Servian premier, M. Ristitch, has threatened Queen Natalie with extreme measures if she should take any step which is likely to injure or jeopardize the Servian dynasty as at present constituted. He implores her to accept the terms which Milan has offered her and to cease all interference with the Obrenovitch rule as maintained by Milan, through the regency, in the person of his son, King Alexander.

WAS HE MURDERED?

An Entirely Different Story About Sitting Bull's Death.

BISMARCK, N. D., Dec. 20.—Corporal Gunn of G troop, Eighth cavalry, who is in from Fort Yates on furlough, tells an entirely different story from that heretofore sent out about Sitting Bull's death. The story as told to Corporal Gunn by a half breed is this:

Bull Head, a lieutenant of the Indian police, went to Sitting Bull's house to serve the warrant for his arrest. Sitting Bull, who was there with his two sons, opened the door, and one of the sons, seeing the house surrounded by the police, gave a cry of alarm.

Bull Head at once fired at Sitting Bull, the ball striking him in the breast over the left nipple, killing him instantly. As he fell Sitting Bull fired his revolver, the ball striking Bull Head in the ribs. Bull Head died two hours later.

A terrific fight ensued and the thirty police retreated into Sitting Bull's house, while the hostiles had retired to ambush, having learned that the soldiers were coming. After the arrival of the soldiers one Indian lifted Sitting Bull's scalp and another battered his face to a jelly with a plank.

On his person was found a letter from Mrs. William Weldon of New York warning him to fly from the agency, as the government was about to have him killed. He was preparing to depart when surprised by the police.

PERISH IN THE SNOW.

Over a Hundred Families Imprisoned in the Kanawha Valley.

POINT PLEASANT, W. Va., Dec. 20.—A towboat has arrived from Coal City, 90 miles up the Big Kanawha River. Its officers tell of great snow all along the upper river and into Elk and Coal River Valleys. The West Virginia branch of the Ohio Central Railroad has abandoned all trains, and the Chesapeake & Ohio is nearly as bad. Every telephone wire in the entire valley is down. Not a telegraph wire is working.

At St. Albans the roofs of three houses were crushed in and four people were seriously injured.

At Buffalo a child perished in the snow on the way to school. Five children are reported lost and undoubtedly dead by this time on Thirteen Mile Creek.

More than one hundred families, mostly miners, are snowed in near Rencevert and their situation is critical.

SEVEN MAY DIE.

A Servant Girl Confesses that She Poisoned a Family.

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Dec. 20.—The entire family of a wealthy farmer named Charles Bond, living a few miles from this place, are expected to die within a few hours from the effects of poison placed in their coffee by a colored servant.

She has been arrested and has confessed to the crime, but gives no satisfactory reasons for her act. The family consists of Mr. Bond and wife and five children.

Prominent Creditors.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Dec. 20.—Benjamin W. Winner of Liberty, Sullivan County, dealer in wood, has failed. Liabilities, $50,000 to $75,000, with probably no assets. Among his creditors are ex-Senator Platt, Editor Sprague of the Liberty Register and ex-Assemblyman Niven. He was at one time Sheriff of Liberty.

Killed by Their Fall.

CONGERS, N. Y., Dec. 20.—Conductor Fred Harris and Brakeman Harry Evans, attached to a Hudson River Railroad freight train, were instantly killed by falling from the roof of the cars while in motion near here early in the morning.

For Governor of the Buckeye State.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 20.—The suggestion of the name of Senator John Sherman in connection with the gubernatorial nomination has met with a number of strong indorsements and the more the subject is discussed the stronger becomes the sentiment that Mr. Sherman should be the next Republican candidate for Governor.

Death of Hon. E. P. Walton.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Dec. 20.—Hon. E. P. Walton died here last night, aged 78 years. He was a member of Congress in 1856, and served three terms. He was owner of the Vermont Watchman from 1853 to 1868, and until recently editor of Walton's Vermont Register.

Shot in Long Branch Hotel.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Dec. 20.—David Cook of Long Branch has been shot by an Italian named Juliano in Dillon's Hotel, Long Branch. Two shots were fired and one is said to be fatal. Search was made for Juliano and he was found hiding in his hut in "Little Limerick."

Seeking a Factory Site.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 20.—Mr. James Ogilvie of Glenvarie, Scotland, is here negotiating for a site for a woollen factory. A number of capitalists from New York and Glasgow are interested in the building, and Mr. Ogilvie has been appointed an agent to look for a site.

General Butler Trips in Court.

BOSTON, Dec. 20.—General Butler, while trying a case in the United States Court, rose to ask some questions of a witness, when his foot was caught by the steps of the witness stand and he fell heavily forward on his face. The district attorney rushed in alarm to his assistance and he was raised to his feet. His face was somewhat bruised, but he resumed work, and said he was unhurt.

Reduced His Bail.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 20.—The bail of George F. Work, charged with conspiracy, which, it is alleged, resulted in the wrecking of the Bank of America and the American Life Insurance Company, was reduced by Judge Reed from $20,000 to $12,500 on application of the prisoner's counsel. Work expects to obtain bondsmen to-day.

The Parnellites Say They Have Some Startling Revelations in Store.

Money Contributed to Their Opponents by Wealthy Englishmen—Healy's Bold Offer to Parnell—McCarthy Makes His First Speech in the Campaign—Police Prevent a Fight at a Parnell Meeting.

KILKENNY, Dec. 20.—The indications are that there will be a very close fight here, and the result of Monday's polling still remains in doubt, despite the apparent weakness of the anti-Parnellite struggle and the steady strength of the Parnellite sentiment among the better class of the people.

The Parnellites are said to have some startling revelations in store as to the efforts of their antagonists to raise money from the English Liberals. It is claimed, substantially, that several thousand pounds have been contributed by wealthy Englishmen to carry on the anti-Parnell campaign, and that but for this assistance the anti-Parnellites would be unable to keep in the field.

Mr. Parnell and several of his colleagues drove to Johnstown and addressed a meeting there. Mr. Parnell kept his eyes bandaged. John Redmond, in his speech, declared that two doctors had staked their reputation on the assertion that they had found lime in Mr. Parnell's eyes, notwithstanding the claim of the Davitt faction that only mud was thrown.

During the meeting there was much disorder, and at one time a fight seemed imminent. The police intervened and prevented the brawlers from coming to blows.

In the course of his speech Parnell referred to the tribute paid him by Canon Lee at the meeting of the Dublin Chapter, in saying that he believed Parnell to be an honorable man. He said: "I thank him heartily for this testimony in the hour of my trial. It will be all powerful in silencing false clamor."

WHAT TIM HEALY SAYS.

He Predicts that Hennessy's Majority Will Reach Four Figures.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—Tim Healy is confident of success in Monday's election. He says: "I will be disappointed if Hennessy's majority does not reach four figures; but if you say 700 you will be inside. The priests are confident. They have made promises to the people, after a house-to-house canvass, and these promises will be kept.

"I sent word to Parnell offering to pay Scully's election expenses if he won, if Parnell would pay Hennessy's if he won. I haven't heard from him. You can't bet without invalidating the election, but my offer was good enough to take if they are as sure as they say they are."

McCarthy, Sexton and Healy were hissed by a small crowd of roughs. There is terrific enmity among them against Healy, who always takes off his hat and smiles sweetly at them.

McCarthy Speaks in Kilkenny.

KILKENNY, Dec. 20.—Justin McCarthy made his first speech of the campaign here during the forenoon. He declared that everything pointed to the certainty of Hennessey's election, the only doubt being as to the size of the majority. Mr. Sexton, who has recovered from his recent indisposition, also spoke. He said all right-minded men must sorrow over the employment of violence toward Mr. Parnell. Those guilty of such conduct were irresponsible men, who should not be recognized by any party. Whatever the present feeling of the people toward Mr. Parnell might be the gratitude for his past great services would remain unchanged.

Archbishop Walsh's Denial.

DUBLIN, Dec. 20.—Archbishop Walsh publishes a statement that the story printed in United Ireland as to what took place in the last meeting of the Chapter of the Dublin diocese is a shameful fabrication. The dean of the Chapter has also written a complete denial of the story, which was to the effect that the Parnell matter was discussed by the meeting, and that it was decided, in view of the division of opinion among the laity on the subject, to refrain from taking ecclesiastical action in the premises.

THE PARIS STRANGLERS.

The Court Refuses to Allow Gabrielle Bompard to be Hypnotised.

PARIS, Dec. 20.—The excitement over the stranglers' trial is at fever heat. Eyraud says that he will surely go to the guillotine, but declares Gabrielle more guilty than he is, and that his only desire now is that the law be fully avenged and that she go with him.

The plea set up by the woman that she was under hypnotic influence when the crime was committed has been the subject of much attention by medical men. Several prominent doctors have given testimony against her plea, declaring that as great a crime as murder could not be committed without the knowledge of the executioner.

Dr. Brouardel was recalled and declared that the opinions of the Nancy Medical School, represented by Dr. Liegeois, were held in very small esteem by him. He was not in favor of again hypnotizing Gabrielle, as he was unwilling to take the risk of the audience hearing what revelations might be surprised out of the woman.

Counsel for both Bompard and Eyraud requested that the female prisoner be hypnotized in open court. The procureur objected, saying that it would not aid in bringing out the truth. The judges rejected the proposal.

Counsel for Gouffe's relatives asked the court to find both the prisoner guilty.

REOPENING THE PARK HOUSE.

$10,000 to be Spent in Making it a Luxurious Hotel for Summer and Winter.

Frank E. Miller, proprietor of Hotel Netherwood, and J. J. H. Poilion, of Putnam avenue, to-day signed a lease for the Park House for a term of years. $10,000 is to be spent in putting it in thorough order.

Messrs. Miller & Poillon will take possession about the middle of February. The hotel will be furnished from top to bottom in the most modern style and elegance. Steam heaters will be put in every room. New sanitary plumbing of the most costly devices, will be built throughout the house.

The present kitchen and carving room will be entirely torn out and refitted and furnished. The dining room will be remodeled, and a spacious cafe and billiard room will be added to the hotel's attractions.

It will not be equalled in accomodations, appurtenances and service, by any Summer and Winter hotel in the State. It will be open all the year round, and will especially cater to permanent families.

Mr. Miller will open the Hotel Netherwood every Summer, as usual. All this is the best news the people of this city have heard in years.

The Only Newspaper for Miles Around.

Yesterday's DAILY PRESS was a great issue. To begin with, there was a throng of advertisements too numerous to recapitulate — advertisements which in themselves were news, and news of the most live sort, to readers of every degree. Especially in the family is it true that not to read the news contained in the day's advertisement is to miss much of what the family is most concerned to know. THE PRESS is compelled everyday to find room for a much larger amount of advertising than any other publication in this section. Still, it sacrifices not one tittle of the whole chronicle of the day as received through its unrivalled connections. The superiority of these over all others is sufficiently shown in every issue and is frequently notably illustrated.

In addition to the record of the day's occurrences over the entire civilized world, yesterday's DAILY PRESS was enriched by picturesquely illustrated articles concerning the interesting history of the Rhineland potters, the famous mountaineer evangelist of Virginia, the quaint characters of the Florida flatwoods, and other matters, curious and entertaining, —all delineated with fidelity and vigor by superior artists and writers.

Of purely local matters nearly seven columns of fresh news were given, every paragraph of which all readers must have found interesting. Here were recorded as has been recorded nowhere else the doings of the people, the happenings of the day, the news, the whole news, and nothing but the news, of Plainfield and its environs, of supreme importance to every resident of the city.

There is only one Evening Newspaper published within the twelve-mile radius of the North avenue railway station, and more people are every day finding out the truth of the matter. That paper is THE DAILY PRESS.

Booked for a Week in This City.

The Baltimore American of October 15, says: "The Front Street Theatre was filled to its utmost capacity, last evening, to witness Jos. D. Clifton and his clever Company in his Western comedy, 'The Ranch King.' Although the piece has been played here before it has lost none of its drawing power. Mr. Clifton has surrounded himself with a very fine company this season. Miss Louise Agnott as Pug made an instantaneous hit, and was several times recalled. The specialties were some of the best we have seen here and the supporting company is far above the average. The piece will run all the week and is sure of big business. Mr. Clifton will return here in January and put on his beautiful comedy drama, 'Myrtle Ferns,' which will no doubt do a big business."

This is the company that will appear at Amphion Hall, all of next week.

Is There Such a Bound Brook Minister?

The Somerville Democrat says: "The first of last month a colored man by the name of Bill Smock, living at South Somerville, married a white girl about 17 years of age, living in the same neighborhood. The ceremony was performed by a minister living at Bound Brook. The couple are now living with the relatives of the girl. Bill Smock is well-known in this county, having served a term in State prison. The neighbors are very indignant over the matter. It seems strange that such things are allowed in a civilized community."

Killed on the Rail.

[From The Bound Brook Chronicle].

James Maltese Cawley, better known to those on Main street as "Jim," was killed on the tracks in the Central yard last Saturday. He had many friends who will miss him from around town. He was a noble fellow and none spoke of him but in his praise. He had but one enemy, and that was to be expected. He was no lover of dogs. He was owned by the gentleman whose name he bore, James S. Cawley, and had the reputation of be-

KOCH'S CURE.

A Plainfield Doctor Tells All About It in a Very Interesting and Intelligible Way.

Because of everybody's intense interest in the alleged cure for consumption that Dr. Koch of Berlin has discovered—and which the whole World is discussing and eagerly seizing every word in relation to —a PRESS reporter was detailed to-day to interview Dr. Comegys Paul, of Park avenue, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, and ask him to state just what was true about it all. The doctor put aside his other duties for the time, and courteously assented to the reporter's request. What he said cannot be better told than in his own words—a statement concise but complete, instructive but interesting:

"As seventeen per cent. of all deaths is caused by pulmonary consumption, the general public is intimately concerned in the success of Koch's cure. If it will meet the requirements expected, this therapeutic will be by far the most important discovery of this century. As regards the nature and physical character of the lymph, Professor Koch says 'I am unable to make any statement, as my research is not yet concluded. The remedy is a brownish transparent liquid which does not require special care to prevent decomposition. For use this fluid must be more or less diluted and the dilutions are liable to decomposition if prepared with distilled water; bacterial growths soon develop, the liquid becomes turbid and unfit for use.' Therefore it would seem that the proper administration requires a freshly prepared solution. Koch's lymph has no effect when introduced into the stomach, but must be injected subcutaneously. The syringe recommended by the great scientist may be replaced by the ordinary hypodermic if aseptic conditions are strictly observed. In the present stage of medical science all causes of septicaemia are guarded against with the accuracy afforded by tentative and exact chemical investigation.

"The place preferred for hypodermic injection is the space between the scapulae or shoulder blades as it produces the least reaction and is almost painless.

"All physiological and therapeutic experimenters select the rabbit and guinea-pig as their medium, and Koch's labors afford new proof that the all important law of experiment on animals is not conclusive for the human being. A full grown guinea-pig will take without apparent effect eight times as large a dose, subcutaneously, as a healthy, well nourished man, with intense effect. Calculated by body weight, the 1500th part of the quantity which has no appreciable effect on the guinea-pig acts powerfully on the human subject.

"Professor Koch describes the symptoms arising from an injection of 0.25 cubic centimetre as follows: 'Three or four hours after the injection there came on pain in the limbs, fatigue, inclination to cough, difficulty in breathing. In the fifth hour an unusually violent attack of ague followed and at the same time there was sickness, vomiting and rise of temperature to 39.6° C. After twelve hours the symptoms abated.' You will observe that this was the effect of an excessive dose upon a human subject.

"Upon the tuberculous human being a very small dose causes a marked reaction. Even the small quantity of 0 001 cubic centimetre, or even 0.0005 cubic centimetre in delicate children, causes a reaction of chill and fever with a temperature of 103-5° F. with coughing, fatigue, nausea, and sometimes a slight jaundice. The local reaction can best be observed where the affection is visible, as in lupus, a tuberculous, rodent ulcer. Only the diseased parts are attacked by the remedy, and in lupus the separation of the diseased from the healthy tissues is manifest in a very short time, i. e., a disease that has continued its work of destruction for years, begins to capitulate to this treatment in three or four days.

"Its specific action is striking and perceptible to the eye and touch in tuberculosis of the glands, bones, joints, etc.

"By the aid of Koch's lymph doubtful cases of consumption can be clearly diagnosed, and we can form a definite opinion in cases where it had before been impossible to discover bacilli or elastic fibres in the expectorated matter, or by physical examination. Tuberculosis of skin, bone, glands, etc., may be easily and with certainty recognized.

"In its curative effect Koch's lymph does not kill the bacilli, or microbes, but the tuberculous tissue itself, and its action is limited to tuberculous tissue only. When the habitat of the bacillus tuberculosis is rendered untenable it is thrown off as a slough and its occupants are eliminated with the necrotic debris.

"Patients treated with this remedy show great susceptibility at first but gradually evince a marked toleration. Therefore the treatment is by slowly increased doses.

"The medical profession are inclined to place every confidence in Koch's discovery. We are now, in a measure, prepared to consider the prophylaxis of diphtheria and the zymotic diseases. Scarlet fever may be eventually robbed of its terrors and rendered comparatively inocuous. When Sir Wm. Jenner destroyed susceptibility to smallpox by vaccination, he opened a grand field for research which, it would seem, has been but tardily taken advantage of. But Pasteur and Koch, with their numerous collaborators, now afford us a glimpse into the future that awakens great expectation in the mind of every thinking man."

Do not hesitate, when you have taken a cold, to get a bottle of Hires' Cough Cure. It may save you dire consequences. Make Words of Testimony.

The Workers' Training classes of the Y. M. C. A., taught by the President and General Secretary, meet at the Association rooms every Sunday at 9:15 A. M. Testimonials from a few members of a former class are given below:

"Whatever vigor I have been able to bring into my Christian work comes from the class."

"Through the Training Class I became interested in Bible Study."

"It has given me more intimate and extensive knowledge of the grand truths on the Bible and of how to apply them if personal work."

Young men who desire a better furnishing for Christian work are invited to join one of these classes, especially the one for beginners conducted by Mr. Murray.

Elizabeth Envies Plainfield's Growth.

Because enterprising men in other cities of the county are giving a splendid impetus to building and other improvements, and causing various bright towns to grow with marked rapidity, The Elizabeth Journal wails "Why not Elizabeth?" Citing the case of the Crescent city, The Journal says:

Plainfield is rapidly growing, and is showing grit, enterprise, determination and vitality, and success is sure. But the capital city of the county: what is it doing? There are large tracts of land within the city limits, land desirable for residence or splendidly situated for manufacturing purposes. It is on the market, to be sure, and the normal growth of the city is gradually occupying it. But somehow there is n't the vitality and enterprise that is shown in Plainfield, and so there is lack of what Elizabeth ought to have, a splendid impetus in the right direction.

Another Successful Choral Society.

The Westfield Musical Society gave their initial concert at the First Methodist Episcopal church in that town last evening. The programme which was delightfully rendered to a large audience consisted of part songs, choruses and the cantata of The Wreck of the Hesperus. The chorus comprised 125 voices under the leadership of C. Mortimer Wiske. Among the prominent soloists who assisted were William Lavin and Charles S. Reed.

AND BEST OF ALL ARE PLAINFIELD'S.

Interesting Facts Brought Forth by a Comparison of New Jersey School Statistics.

The State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Edwin O. Chapman, has partially completed the compilation of school statistics for the year ending Aug. 31. The figures from most of the counties are extremely encouraging, and show that New Jersey is making decided advancement in the education of her children.

The total amount of money which the various districts have had to expend for school purposes during the year ending Aug. 31, 1890, was $3,483,503.31; of which $802,921.18 was for reparing and building school houses. The amount expended for teachers' salaries was $2,227,131.68, and for fuel $111,388.52; the amount for incidentals was $341,618.20. The total amount expended by the schools aggregated $3,273,222.17. This leaves a balance to the credit of the districts of $210,281,14.

In only four counties of the State the figures show that more money was expended than was due the districts. These are Camden, Gloucester, Hudson and Monmouth. Mercer county expended $146,546.97, and the amount due was $149,027.46, and Cape May county expended the smallest amount, which was $25,495; Ocean follows with an expenditure of $29,967. Sussex spent $52,075. Essex leads with $698,568.96, and Hudson has $233,771.08.

The total value of school property in the State is $8,629 493. Of this amount Essex has a valuation of $2,039 835, almost one-fourth of the entire amount. Hudson's valuation is $1,219.980; Camden's, $613,050; Union's, $577,350; Passaic's, $567.950; Mercer's $411,418; Cape May's, $76,100; Ocean's, $81,100. Last year Cape May's valuation was $73,300, and Ocean's $71,650.

The tables show quite a remarkable increase in the average attendance of the schools, as well as in the seating capacity. Last year the number of children of the school age in the State was 399,052; this has increased to 409,762. The number registered last year was 227,441, and this year 234,072 are enrolled. The number that attended ten months or more has increased from 8,552 to 9,499; six months, but less than eight, from 43,533 to 44,866. The average number attending school during the time they were kept open has decreased from 139,273 to 132,289. This is attributed to the prevalence of la grippe during the Winter.

There has been a remarkable decrease in the number of children attending no school. Last year the number was 115,726, while this year the table shows there are but 106,010. The school houses last year would only seat comfortably 213,450 pupils, while this year there are accommodations for 223,804, an increase of over 10,000. The number of teachers employed has been increased by 165, making a total of 4,464 engaged in the State. The average of salaries has also increased, but the pay of the women is still greatly disproportionate to that of the men. The average salary of each male teacher now is $76.02; that of each female teacher, $43.62, per month.

In Camden there are 23,169 children of school age, and 4,046 attended no school. Out of 19,393 in Mercer, 3,752 did not go to school.

Reports come from all over the State that the school houses do not have sufficient seating capacity.

Essex county can seat only 33,031 of her 74,029 children; Hudson, 28,800 of her 98,746; Camden can seat 13,245 of her 23,169 children; Mercer can seat 9,436 of her 19,393 children; Union county can seat 8,731 of her 17,375; Atlantic county comes the nearest to accommodating her children, for there is seating capacity for 6,791 of her 6,826 children; Sussex county can seat 5,561 of her 5,806 children; Cape May can seat 2,441 of her 2,850 children; Gloucester can seat 6,492 of her 7,981. There is in the whole State a seating capacity for 223,804 children, out of a total of school age of 409,762, or not much over one-half can be accomodated. Of this number only 47,269 are provided for by private schools.

Here's a Healthful Place to Live.

The tables of vital statistics of New Jersey for the past year are almost ready for the printer. From the figures already procurable it appears that Plainfield's death rate is less than even last year, being only 16.89 per 1,000 inhabitants. Elizabeth's rate is 19.30, Morristown's 24.32, New Brunswick's 17.71, Orange's, 24.50, Newark's 27.26, Rahway's 19.32, and Jersey City's 25.96. For Union county the rate is 17.56, and for Somerset 15.58.

South Plainfield's Railroad Almost Ready.

Efforts are being made to have the South Plainfield and Roselle, and Newark and Roselle roads completed sufficiently by New Year's Day to begin traffic over them. These two roads are portions of the Lehigh Valley's New York extension, and for the present that company's passenger trains will leave its main track at South Plainfield and go to Newark via Roselle, and to Jersey City over the Pennsylvania road. Passenger trains now run by way of Metuchen.

"News."

The word "news" is derived from the initial letters of the four points of the compass—North, East, West and South. To all points of the compass let the good news go that for deranged liver, nervous headache, impure blood, nausea and many other disturbances of the system that make men mourn, there is a remedy. Thousands testify that Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets cure these troubles. Small but potent; one a dose.

He Deserves It All.

The Hudson Daily Republican, referring to Claverack College events, speaks of ex-Judge Ulrich, in the following glowing terms:

"The Hon. John Ulrich of Plainfield, N. J., was a guest at the college last week. Since leaving his alma mater, in the seventies, he has steadily crept up the ladder of fame until at present only a few more rounds remain to be urmounted. He is a lawyer of great and far-reaching fame, the editor of a popular and growing paper, "The Royal Craftsman," a Masonic organ, a highly honored Judge, the leading spirit in many organizations of a philanthropic, social and political nature, a re-elected member of the New Jersey Legislature; and highest, and best of all, he is a man who enjoys the respect and love of all who know him, both friend and foe, politically. It gives us great satisfaction to chronicle the virtues and high attainments of any of the old students. But few, if any, deserve more the position to which he has risen than Mr. Ulrich".

Never defer until to-morrow what should be attended to to-day. A slight cough shouldn't be neglected when Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup will cure it.

The readers of our publication are requested to use Salvation Oil for any and all pains. It is a sure cure and costs only 25 cents.

FARMERS' ALLIANCE.

Three of the Men Who Will Represent It in Congress.

William Henry Hatch, Jere Simpson and John Davis—Short Sketches of Their Political Career—A Candidate for Speaker.

Of the three representatives of the Alliance whose portraits are given herewith, Mr. Hatch is by far the best-known, says Harper's Weekly. William Henry Hatch was born in Scott County, Ky., September 11, 1833; was educated at Lexington in the same State, and was admitted to the bar in September, 1854. In 1858, having removed in the meantime to Missouri, he was elected circuit attorney for the Sixteenth Judicial Circuit of that State, and was re-elected in 1860. After the breaking out of the war he enlisted in the Confederate army, was commissioned Captain and Assistant Adjutant General, and in March, 1863, was assigned to duty as Assistant Commissioner of Exchange under the cartel and continued in this position until the close of the war. After the war his first appearance in National politics was as a Representative in the Forty-sixth Congress, to which he was elected in 1878. He has served as Representative of the same district ever since. In the present Congress he is a member of the Committee on Agriculture, on the Irrigation of Arid Lands, and on the Quadro-Centennial. In the last Congress he was chairman of the committee on agriculture. He is now a candidate for Speaker of the Fifty-second Congress not avowedly as an Alliance man, for it is not generally known whether he is actually a member of the Alliance, but on his record as a conservator of the agricultural interests. He is supposed to have the support of the Alliance men for Speaker, and if he is not elected is likely to be their leader on the floor of the House.

WILLIAM HENRY HATCH.

The other two are new men, and representatives of the Alliance pure and simple. Mr. Jere Simpson, of the Seventh Kansas district, won a most remarkable victory. The Republican majority in the district in 1888 was over 15,000. Mr. Simpson and his antagonist, Mr. Hallowell, held a series of joint debates throughout the district, which is an immense one in area, comprising no less than thirty-seven counties. The Representative-elect is a man of great power as a speaker, and has an inextinguishable fund of humor and repartee. One of Mr. Simpson's admirers thus describes the joint debate: "The Republican candidate would indulge in a spread-eagle speech, and Simpson would indulge in ridicule. This in his hands was a most effective weapon, and the smiles at 'Prince Hal's' expense undoubtedly cost him a seat in Congress."

JERE SIMPSON.

Mr. John Davis, of the Fifth Kansas district, is a newspaper man, being the editor and proprietor of the Junction City Tribune. He was born in Sangamon County, Illinois, in 1826. In 1836 the family removed to Macon County, near the present city of Decatur. The father of the family was a farmer, and the sons were brought up to the same calling. John's schooling was not neglected, and he attended the Springfield Academy and the Jacksonville College. In 1851, having made a new home for himself, he married Miss Martha Powell, a sister of Major J. W. Powell, Director of the United States Geological Survey. In 1873 Mr. Davis removed to Kansas, near Junction City. Here, in 1873, he was president of the first State farmers' convention ever held in Kansas. In 1874 he joined the Grange, and in 1875 he became the owner of the Tribune, and has advocated the farmers' and laborers' cause in its columns ever since. He is a Knight of Labor, and has attended the General Convention of the Knights as a delegate several times. He is a close friend of Mr. Powderly. Twice before he has been a candidate for Congress, but was not elected. He has six sons and three daughters.

JOHN DAVIS.

To Stop a Runaway Horse.

Prof. Gleason, noted as a tamer and trainer of vicious horses, thus explains the manner of stopping a runaway horse by using nothing but a straight bar bit and lines: For instance, your horse attempts to run away. Let him go for a distance of fifty yards; then haul in your lines perfectly tight. When you get ready to give the command to stop, say "Whoa!" at the same time you pull the right-hand rein, giving a powerful jerk, and repeat the word whoa. Don't move the left hand, but do all the work with the right. When you give the terrible jerk twist the horse's jaw to the right, and if you have the presence of mind to repeat the word whoa at the second jerk of the lines, you will be surprised to find your horse standing still.

Almost as Good.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS!
And the Place to Buy Them.
"Tis without an equal in Plainfield," is said of our display of Christmas Goods, and 'tis true; as we have spared neither pains nor expense to bring together a line of goods that would suit almost everyone in quality and price.
Dolls, we have enough to supply every child in Plainfield; too many of them we think, but they must be sold this week, so we are cutting prices.
We call special attention to our line of Iron Toys. They are the best kind to buy, as they are the kind that never break; there are fire engines, hook and ladder trucks, hose and cart, locomotives, cars, etc.
How about an Umbrella for some one? We have them from $1 to $3 25.
There came in this morning about 500 Plush Boxes; ought to have been here two weeks ago, but were delayed on the road. Handsome goods they are, consisting of glove and handkerchief boxes, jewel cases, writing desks, &c. You can buy them just 25 per cent. less than they are worth.
There is an endless assortment of cups and saucers, fancy plates, brass goods, photo albums, work baskets, scrap baskets pictures, etc.
And then you will want Christmas cards. Ours are bought direct from the manufacturers, and we save you money on them. Prices 5, 10, 15 and 20c.
Lamps make a useful present; we have them in all kinds and styles. Hall lamps, $1.75; handsome parlor lamp, $2.50; piano lamps, $8 75 for a beauty.
Come in this week, select what you wish, and we will deliver when wanted.

Reduction in Prices for Cash!
TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.
AFTER DECEMBER 15, 1890,
The Plainfield Produce Company
Will Sell All Goods Strictly for Cash!
We will present a few reasons for making this change in our manner of doing business. In the first place we have our Hay, Grain and Produce inspected and bought direct from the Producer for Cash. Thereby obtaining better quality, also saving one profit, which would go to the commission merchant if bought from sample the usual way.
In the second place any concern doing an extensive credit business must get larger profits to offset slow and worthless accounts, of which with the greatest care there will be some. And the customer who is ready to pay and does pay his bills when presented, is the one who must pay these larger profits.
By selling for cash we avoid losses from such accounts, and can afford to sell for smaller profits.
We ask for a share of your patronage. Give us a call and we will show you how low we can sell for CASH, instead of how high we must sell for credits.

COLLEGE EDUCATION.

Alex. E. Sweet Gives His Views on the Subject.

A Discussion with Mr. Madison Square—Should the New York Dudelet Be Sent to College—A Training School for an Auctioneer.

[Written for This Paper.]

ONE day not long ago I met Mr. Madison Square, a gentleman with whom I am acquainted. My friend Square is not very remarkable for any thing unless it is the frequency with which he appeals to his friends for advice. In asking for advice Mr. Square always mentions that it is the candid opinion of his friend that he needs. That is the only kind of advice that he can use in his business. One of the consequences of Mr. Square's frenzy for candid opinions is that occasionally he gets a mouthful of advice that has so much candor to the square inch that his experience is somewhat similar to that of the reckless man who undertook to sample some barreled eggs.

Besides being a prosperous merchant, Mr. Square is also one of the parents of a dude boy who is just budding into manhood. He has a slight, girlish figure, expressive eyes, large wilted ears that set off a moon-shaped face, while his voice is almost as melodious as the cooing of a Japanese toy frog. If there is any thing I hate it is something I don't like, and this boy stands at the head of the list. On one occasion after I had read a very humorous article of my own to his father this wretched creature spoke up, so to speak, and requested me to read something funny for a change, so when his father insisted on my giving my candid opinion about his son's mental qualifications I infused so much candor into it that I created a temporary panic in the market.

"This is what is called the commencement season of the colleges. I have always wondered why the closing collegiate exercises are called commencements," observed Square.

"I suppose the closing exercises are called commencements because just then the parents of graduates commence to realize how much it costs to have their children educated. However, these commencements are useful in bringing into notice institutions of learning that would otherwise never be heard of," I replied cynically, for I was far from feeling well.

"Have you ever had a son at college?" asked Square.

"No, but I have had to pay a note which I indorsed for a friend, and I have had grippe accompanied by hystero-epilepsy and trance complications, but thus far I have been spared the affliction of having a son at college. Verily in my case the wind has been tempered to the shorn lamb."

"Then you do not think a collegiate education beneficial to a young man?"

"That altogether depends on the young man. There are some boys upon whom bestowing a collegiate education is about as sensible as putting a ten dollar collar on a ten cent dog. There is a very appropriate Spanish proverb to the effect that giving some people an education is like loading a donkey down with books."

"But a collegiate education is certainly very essential in business, as well as in social life," said Mr. Square.

"I can not understand how you arrive at that conclusion. I knew a sheriff in Texas who was as destitute of classic knowledge as a young watermelon is of hair, and yet he managed to hide fourteen thousand dollars of the publicmoney where nobody but himself could find it. It seems to me that if I wanted a boy to acquire wealth suddenly, instead of sending him to college I would put him studying the map of Canada and the railroad time tables."

A TYPE.

"But, my dear sir, I was referring to obtaining wealth in an honorable and legitimate manner."

"Why didn't you say so? How could I tell what you mean? Very well, let us look at it from that standpoint. The best Latin and Greek scholar I ever saw could only earn seventy-five cents a day picking cotton, while a dark, mahogany-colored Senegambian readily made three dollars."

"Why didn't the Latin and Greek scholar go into law or journalism?"

"Because he could make more money picking cotton."

"But some of our most distinguished public men are college graduates."

"Yes, but the number of college graduates who do not become distinguished for any thing have a working majority in both houses. Quite a number of the friends of my youth had collegiate educations. Only one of them has permanent employment. I do not care to mention his name on account of his family. Moreover, he goes by a number, any way. The last I saw of another one he was trying to sell a new kind of pants stretcher. Still another one is major domo of the soap counter in a large store, but his future is really brilliant, as he expects to throw up his engagement next season and star as a drummer."

"Some very distinguished journalists have been college men."

"May be so, but Horace Greely wrote: 'Of all horned cattle, the Lord deliver me from the college graduate,' and he also classed them among 'cucumbers and other green things.'"

"Still I can not concede that the uneducated man is likely to achive fame."

"That amuses me. I could name a man whose education consisted of what he acquired at a night school. He only went three times. Twice the teacher did not show up, and on the third night there was no candle, and yet that man has a trotting horse and a brand of cigars named after him. Where is your college graduate who can match that record for fame?"

"But certainly there are some professions in which a college graduate can rise?"

"Yes, if I had a boy and I wanted him to become the bouncer for a dive on the Bowery, I would have him graduated in hazing, cane rushes and foot-ball."

"Is there no other occupation in which a college education would fit him?"

"Yes, there is another. When I see a coach loaded to the muzzle with college students, shaking red or blue flags, and yelling: Kex, rex, klex, kickerakee, yap, yap, yap, ba-ba-baaa, or words to that effect, it occurs to me what a splendid training school that would be for an ambitious youth you wanted to rise in the world as an auctioneer."

A GRADUATE.

"But my dear sir," said Madison Square, excitedly, "a knowledge of Latin and Greek is indispensible in intercourse of gentlemen of culture and refinement."

"They are, eh? How much Latin and Greek does a man remember after he begins to work for a living? It only takes him six months to forget all he could learn in two years. I went through Cæsar's Commentaries, and all I remember now are the first words of the first chapter, which are Omnia Gallia, meaning of course, how ominous it is that the French have so much gall. All the rest is a perfect blank."

"You may say what you please, but a knowledge of foreign languages is indispensible in polite society."

"That may be so, but there is no need of spending several years and all the money there is in the family going to college to acquire them. Such Latin quotations as 'cornucopia,' faux pas, noch ein glass beer, tic douloureaux, cum homo in cab when sober, and other colloquial terms are easily acquired."

"I was thinking of sending my boy Tommy to college. He is very bright; but your talk has discouraged me somewhat. However, I wish you, knowing something of the boy, would give me your candid opinion if you do not think he would make an exception to the rule."

"I didn't know that you proposed sending him to college, but I am not surprised. That's a way nature has of evening out things." I replied, with decided candor.

"What do you mean by that?"

"You see, Madison, whenever nature endows a man with sufficient brains and energy to make a fortune, as she has done in your case, she also gives him a spendthrift son, who will see that the old man's cash is put into circulation. I once knew a man who was so close that he was afraid to buy a lead pencil because he never could feel sure that the lead ran all the way through. He acquired a large fortune and a son whom he sent to college. That young man came home fresh from college, fresher if possible than when he started out, and he thought so much of his diploma that he disturbed the whole neighborhood cackling over it like an hysterical pullet that had just laid an initial egg. If you are so dropsical with wealth that you have to be tapped, why don't you slide a few thousands into the slot of the Grant monument fund just to see if it is in working order yet and what sort of tune it would play, but do not squander any money on Tommy. I don't think that under any circumstances he will ever be able to drive life's nails without smashing the thumb of egotism with the hammer of experience. If you send him to college, while you have been frugal all your life, he will acquire the poker habit and think nothing of spending $10,000 to find out that the queen, king, ace, deuce and tray of hearts did not beat a jack full. As I said, that's one of nature's playful little ways of preventing too much money accumulating in one family."

"Then you would not advise me to send Tommy to Harvard?"

"You might send him there, of course, but you ought to go along with him and help him spend your money, so that you will at least have something for the outgoing cash. Students, my dear fellow, are very extravagant, except in the item of attendance at prayers. If their pants bag at the knees it is not from what we Salvation Army people call knee drill. Yes, Tommy will spend a great deal of money at his studies, and he will not have to study very hard either. When he comes to try to pass his examination he will not be troubled in the least by the questions. It is only the answers that will bother him. Although the study of ballet dancing is not compulsory, he will know a great deal about it. He will probably deliver an address, if he graduates, on 'Our Colleges as Great Political Factors,' but his ability to write an essay on 'How to Drive a Street Car' would make his future look brighter. But do not be discouraged. These college graduates make first rate farm hands after they once learn the business. He will also acquire a great deal of knowledge about boat rowing and other brain work. Collegiate education is very desirable, if it does not unfit a man for working for a living, but in my opinion a solid rectangular education, hammered into a boy and riveted on both sides, is much better. If, however, you conclude to send Tommy to college and your worst fears are realized in his becoming a bachelor of arts, I would keep quiet about it, and above all do not let him put B. A. after his name, as malicious persons will infer that it stands for boodle alderman. On the other hand—"

Here Mr. Madison Square arose and stiffly bade me adieu. That's what a man gets when he complies with a friend's request to impart a candid opinion. Every time I have met him since that conversation he appears to have rheumatism in the back of his neck.

Moral: If a friend asks you for your candid opinion on any subject touching himself, be sure and give him your candied opinion and keep your candid opinion for home use. ALEX. E. SWEET.

Hands.

A writer in a Philadelphia journal has studied the various types of hands possessed by different classes of people.

He tells us that the first type with round-pointed fingers belongs to characters with perception extra sensitive, to very pious people, to contemplative minds, to all poets and artists who have ideality as a prominent trait.

Another type—those that have spade-shaped fingers—indicate people whose interests and instincts are mostly material, people who have a genius for business, and who have a high appreciation of every thing that pertains to bodily use and comfort.

We have not given the subject much study, but we think many other kinds of hands might have been considered; for instance, the hand that is given where the heart can never be, and the hand the Congressman holds when he expects to scoop the jack-pot.—Texas Siftings.

A Learned Play on Words.

Classicus—Wasn't it a strange habit the ancients had of calling disagreeable things by pleasant names?

Modernus—The French and Spaniards had it also. The one called the guillotine the Maiden and the other an instrument for torture and execution the Virgin.

Classicus—Then, seeing we have so many precedents, we are doubly bound to call our instrument for executing by electricity the Lover.

Modernus—Why doubly bound?

Classicus—Because it sparks its victims to death—Drake's Magazine.

Specially Prepared.

Peddler—Have a thermometer, sir?

Brooklyn Man—No.

Peddler—It will keep you cool all summer.

Brooklyn Man—Go away and don't bother me!

Peddler—Sixty degrees is the highest temperature recorded on it the hottest day in August.

Brooklyn Man—Hold on, I'll take two of those (pays the money.) These are something new, aren't they?

Peddler (making his exit)—Yes; they're manufactured especially to sell to Brooklyn men.—Judge.

A Safe Transfer.

Lil—Lou, if I were you I would not taste that catsup Mrs. Linkseye sent around. She dislikes you, and she might be tempted to—to—

Lou (horrified)—To what? To poison it?

Lil (impressively)—My dear, the woman is jealous, and—well—I think you'd be wiser not to touch it. Give it to father and the boys!—Puck.

Would Do All the Suffering.

Temperance Crank—I see your sign says: "Whisky 5 cents; water, 10 cents." Is water so scarce as that?

Oklohoma Bartender (laconically)—Yep.

"Alas! my son, I can not deny you this luxury. You shall have the rich, sparkling water, while I will drink the base rum. It is just that I should suffer."—Drake's Magazine.

The Reward of Virtue.

Visitor—I understand that you are going to stop publishing the Sunday edition of your paper on purely religious grounds?

Clerk—Yes, sir, we are.

Visitor—Can I see the editor or the business manager a moment?

Clerk—No, sir, they have just stepped out to get measured for halos.—Judge.

He Was Mistaken.

Old Gentleman—Louise, I heard some one being kissed once or twice in the hall last night. Was it you?

Louise (blushing)—Once or twice, did you say, papa?

Old Gentleman—Yes.

Louise—Then it wasn't I.—Harper's Bazar.

A Sermon in Earthenware.

"You quite put my nose out of joint," said the teapot to the strainer. "It's a shame to be muzzled this way."

"Better be muzzled," returned the other, "than have any thing that is not good come out of your mouth!"—Puck.

Reason Enough.

Father (sternly)—I called at your rooms last night, Worthington, and you were not in. It was after eleven.

Son—No, I was out. You'd be, too, if you played poker with Tom Tatters.—Munsey's Weekly.

Blue and Red.

"Philadelphia is a great city for blood. Look at all her old families."

"So is Chicago. Look at all her big slaughter-houses!"—Life.

HOLLAND'S GIRL QUEEN.

Nominal Ruler of a Country That May Fall a Prey to Contending Nations.

Queen Wilhelmina, of Holland, the ten-year-old daughter of King William, who has just died, will be relieved of the duties of royalty while pursuing her studies by her mother, the Dowager Queen Emma, who is regent. Great events may occur during her reign and it is more than likely it will be of brief duration.

The death of the King, which gives the grand Duchy of Luxemburg to his German cousin, William of Nassau, makes way for many big possibilities. It has already set the mapmakers and rectifiers of frontiers in Europe at work

Prince Bismarck was credited with a grand scheme for the reconstruction of Europe by which Germany, Russia, France and Austria would divide the greater part of Europe between them and England and Italy would be left out in the cold. According to this plan Germany would acquire Holland, with the mouths of the Rhine and all the Dutch colonial possessions and the greater part of Belgium. France would get the Walloon, or French-speaking part of Belgium, including Brussels, Namur, Liege and the strong fortified places on the Mense. The Turkish dominions in Europe would be divided between Russia and Austria, the latter power getting Belgrade and Salonica and the former Constantinople and the whole Black Sea coast. M. Emile de Laveleye, the eminent Belgian economist, pronounces this scheme an absurdity and says that in case of an attempt to realize it England would seize all the Dutch colonies before Germany could prevent it, but he admits that Germany will eventually seize Holland and the delta of the Rhine.

Those who have studied the question are more inclined to the belief that the fate of Holland, Belgium and Luxemburg will depend on the result of the next war between Germany and France. If Germany is victorious she will annex them all and another slice of France. Should the Germans be badly beaten France would seize Holland, Belgium, Luxemburg, Rhenish, Prussia and Alsace-Lorraine and realize Napoleon's dream of making the Rhine the frontier between the two countries. France had a portion of Rhenish Prussia before and Marshal Ney and other famous soldiers were born in that section.

Germany undoubtedly intends to annex Holland at the first favorable opportunity, but she also wants the Baltic provinces of Russia, which are German in race and language, and the German portion of Austria. But none of the schemes for the separation of Europe can be carried out without war and the wisest man in Europe can not predict what the result of the next great war may be. The condition of affairs produced by the death of the King of Holland removes one of the obstacles which stood in the way of German ambition, and it may be safely assumed that plans are now being prepared for decisive action when the right moment arrives. Little Queen Wilhelmina will hardly wear the crown of Holland long.

PROOF AGAINST CONTAGION.

A Novel Suit for Doctors, Something Like a Diver's.

An "aseptic suit" for the protection of physicians and others against contagion while attending persons with contagious diseases, has been invented by Dr. J. L. Rollins, of Auburn, Cal. It is to be worn over the ordinary clothing so as to entirely cover the wearer, and is almost entirely impervious, such parts as may admit air consisting of germ proof material. It has mechanism for supplying filtered air for respiration, facilities for using the stethoscope and the laryngoscope, and removable gloves. The suit, which is preferably of rubber, is in two parts, brought together at the waist by clamped flanges. In the crown of the head piece are two perforated metallic plates for holding a wad of germ proof material, and the front has similar plates. Near the ear a circular opening is protected by a disk of rubber.

For admitting light the upper front part of the head piece has a glass-covered opening. The trousers and boots are in one piece. In the feet are bellows, protected by germ-proof material, that are worked by a treading motion, maintaining an upward current of air and driving out vitiated air through the head piece. For a woman a skirt, instead of trousers, may be provided.

The suit may be carried in a convenient casing to within safe limits of a case of contagious disease, then adjusted and the patient visited, the exterior being disinfected after removal.

Missions in Africa.

Africa has now at work within her borders ten American, twelve British and twelve Continental missionary societies. There are more than 700 ordained missionaries and more than 7,000 native preachers. It is estimated that there are, both white and native, about 175,000 communicants and 800,000 adherents.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

Sleeplessness Cured. 4

I am glad to testify that I used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic with the best success for sleeplessness, and believe that it is really a great relief for suffering humanity.

Pleased and Grateful.

New York City, May, 1890.

I express my entire satisfaction with Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son, who is now nineteen years of age, had been afflicted with epileptic fits since he was six years of age. I tried everything that money could purchase, but no permanent relief was effected, now I can cheerfully recommend, and deem it my duty to advise sufferers to at least try Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son has not had any symptoms of the disease since he used the remedy. I am therefore pleased and grateful.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

DIED STANDING UP

Horrible Discovery in a Wardrobe in New York.

FOUND HIS WIFE SUFFOCATED.

The Unfortunate Husband Addressed the Corpse, Believing It Alive.

He Was Looking for His Clothes When the Ghastly Bundle Fell in His Arms—The Woman Had Been Missing for Two Days and Had Been Drinking Heavily—Foul Play Not Suspected by the Police.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—William Waterbury, a night platform man at the station of the elevated road at 125th street and Eighth avenue, had the surprise of his life last evening when the dead body of his wife Emma, who had been missing since Friday evening, rolled into his arms as stiff as a marble statue from a wardrobe in their bedroom.

Mrs. Waterbury was 47 years old, and was Waterbury's second wife, who is 50 years of age. They had been married six years. For two years, it is said, Mrs. Waterbury had been almost a constant drinker, and on Friday morning when he returned from his duty he found her so drunk that he left his house in disgust.

On Friday night he looked in upon his wife again and found her splitting a barrel into kindlings on the parlor floor and manifesting other evidences of alcoholic madness. That was the last he saw of her. On Saturday morning when he came home she had disappeared.

A Horrible Discovery.

Last evening while reading at his home he wondered if his wife had pawned his clothes in their wardrobe for drink. Waterbury at once ran to the wardrobe, and threw back one of the doors. Reaching in his hand he came in contact with his wife's cold face. He drew back horrified. And yet he could not believe she was dead.

"Come out here, Emma," he cried.

But there was no movement from within. Pushing the door further open he disclosed the white faced woman, clad only in a wrapper, and standing erect among the clothes in the wardrobe, her eyes staring at him, though dimmed by death.

In a moment the corpse lurched forward and rolled heavily toward him. He caught it in his arms and laid it on the bed, and then rushed out for help.

Coroner Schultz, who was summoned to view the body, said that death evidently resulted from taking an overdose of bromide of potassium while endeavoring to sober up. It was also suggested that alcoholism was the cause of death.

There was a slight abrasion on one of her cheeks, but the police do not suspect that any one had anything to do with her death.

ANOTHER BAND DANCING.

The Indians at Fort Berthold Have the Messiah Craze.

BISMARCK, N. D., Dec. 22.—The Indians on the Fort Berthold Reservation, unable any longer to stand aside and see their brethren have all the fun to themselves, have at last become affected with the Messiah craze, and are indulging in ghost dances with the same vim that characterizes other demonstrations. The Bertholds have been the most orderly Indians on the American continent.

A private letter received to-day state s that some fears are entertained from these hitherto peaceful Indians. They are under the tutelage of several Sioux from Standing Rock, who deserted during the annual visits of the Bertholds to that agency a month ago. They are beginning to act very strangely, and Agent Murphy, desiring to be on the safe side, has asked for troops. If any serious results should occur these Indians, who are composed of the Gros Ventres, Arickarees and Mandans, would notify the white people on the reservation to leave.

It is said the Indians do not intend to break away from the reservation, but will attempt to hold it against intrusion by the whites. They want the reservation all to themselves, with no white men in their midst to molest them. There is a band of Mandan Indians under the leadership of the celebrated chief, Crow-Flies-High, located on the Little Missouri, which has never yet yielded obedience to the Government.

The Mandans hold themselves aloof from any intercourse and do not draw subsistence from the Government. More fear is felt from the last named Indians than from those at the reservation, who have so long been the white man's friends.

Kickapoos Not Dancing.

OKLAHOMA CITY, I. T., Dec. 22.—There is no truth in the report that 1,000 Kickapoos are engaged in a ghost dance in the Indian Territory. There are only 300 Kickapoos all told, and they are on their reservation, engaged in their usual peaceful pursuits. Ghost dancing by other tribes is almost entirely suspended, and no alarm is felt.

Gen. Carr's Cavalry in Hot Pursuit.

RAPID CITY, S. D., Dec. 22.—A courier says Gen. Carr has thrown out a cavalry force to intercept the band now reported moving across the reservation to the Bad Lands. If the force fails to intercept them they will be pursued and arrested. The available force along the Cheyenne under Gen. Carr is about 1,500.

Cattle Terribly Wounded.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—Some horrible stories are told of the losses of Canadian cattle on recent voyages to this country. In one cargo there was not a beast out of over 600 shipped that was not more or less injured, and many had terrible wounds. Filth was two or three feet deep in the hold, and many cattle were suffocated.

A MISSIONARY DISAPPEARS.

He Borrowed Money of Many People Before He took His Departure.

MAY'S LANDING, N. J., Dec. 22.—Isaac Goldstein, who claims to be a missionary from Jerusalem, has disappered from here, and, it is stated, has taken considerable money with him.

Goldstein came here from New York about three months ago. He located in a small settlement three miles from May's Landing, and at once began to hold religious meetings, which were largely attended, and Goldstein became very popular. He had in his possession papers signed by prominent divines throughout the State. He called upon the Rev. S. Y. Lum, of the Presbyterian Church, and explained to him that he was in need of money, and that his people were suffering badly for want of bread and clothes. He borrowed $30 from Mr. Lum, saying that he wanted to purchase some clothing for his Sunday school children, and that he would refund the money in a few days.

The supposed missionary secured many other loans, amounting, it is stated, to several hundred dollars, before he left town.

G. A. R. SILVER WEDDING.

All Posts to Hold Appropriate Ceremonies in Honor of the Event.

RUTLAND, Vt., Dec. 22.—Commander-in-Chief W. G. Veazey at an early date will issue a general order from the headquarters here, calling on all Grand Army posts in the United States to assemble at their halls on the evening of April 6, 1891, and hold commemorative services in honor of the silver wedding of the order.

The principal point will be Decatur, Ill., the place where the Grand Army of the Republic was organized 25 years ago. Members from every State will join with the Department Encampment of Illinois in celebrating the occasion. Commander-in-Chief Veazey will be present with his staff, as will also all living past national commanders.

THINK HE WAS MURDERED.

The Body of a Missing Man Found in the Woods.

YARMOUTH, Mass., Dec. 22.—The body of Francis T. McKay of this city was found in the woods here last evening. It is thought he was murdered.

McKay and Alexander Henry went out riding from Orleans Friday night, and Henry returned to that place alone. The horse and buggy were found in Harwick yesterday. Henry said that the horse had run away and that he had been thrown out. He knew nothing of McKay's whereabouts. Henry's appearance caused distrust in his story, and McKay's friends began a search. The men were good friends, and if it should prove to be a murder the motive is a mystery.

Daring Train Robbery.

OLNEY, Ill., Dec. 22.—A daring robbery took place on the north bound Peoria, Decatur & Evansville Railroad freight train which passed up at 2:30 a. m. At the water tank, a mile south of this city, the train was cut in two and the engine moved ahead to take water. While the caboose was standing still two men, both masked, entered it and firing two revolver shots over the heads of Conductor Hampton and his brakeman, compelled them to throw up their hands while one of the robbers robbed them of $60 and their watches.

Pendleton, who when he bought his divorce was Mayor of Fort Worth, Tex. The men who sold him the divorce were W. Duryee Hughes, who says he is the brother-in-law of Mr. Williams, once Attorney-General of the United States, and Patrick H. Campbell, both attorneys practicing in this city.

WASHINGTON TOPICS

Senators and Representatives Leaving for Home.

A DULL WEEK IN BOTH HOUSES.

The Last Speech on the Election Bill Expected on Wednesday.

An Expert Says that $70,000,000 Revenue Will be Lost on Sugar—The White House Christmas Tree—Figuring on Judge McKennan's Successor—Minister Valente Surprised.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—With the approach of the holiday season, Senators and Representatives are beginning to leave Washington to spend Christmas at their homes, or to visit neighboring towns, and, in consequence, there will be many vacant seats in both branches of Congress.

It is hardly probable that there will be a quorum in either House during the week, and, as a matter of necessity, the programme will be simplified.

The last Senator on Vice-President Morton's list of speakers on the Elections bill will probably have finished his address on Wednesday, and on that day the Senate will, in all probability, take a recess over Christmas until the Monday following. No other bill except the Elections bill will be before the Senate. Mr. Aldrich may possibly report the cloture rule from the Committee on Rules, but this is not thought to be probable.

The absence of a quorum in the House will prevent action on any measure. Mr. Mills' resolution, providing for a recess from to-day until after New Year's, has been considered by the Ways and Means Committee, and action on it deferred until this afternoon. The consent of the Senate will be necessary to make the resolution effective.

The probability is that the House will adjourn to-day until the day before or the day after Christmas, when another adjournment will be taken until the following Monday.

WILL LOSE $70,000,000.

A Tariff Expert Conferring With Congressmen About the Cut in Sugar.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Henry A. Brown of Massachusetts, the noted sugar tariff expert, has been in Washington for several days conferring with leading officials and members of Congress about the great cut in the duty on sugar, to go into effect next April under the new tariff law, and its effects on the revenues of the country.

Mr. Brown insists that the loss of revenue from making sugar almost duty free, together with the bounty to be paid to sugar producers in this country, will amount to $70,000,000 a year. He is clearly of the opinion that it will be found advisable, and that it will be the duty of Congress to restore fully three-fourths of the present or old duty on sugar, and discontinue or repeal the bounty feature of the new law.

He has no doubt that the rapid increase in the production of sugar in this country will very soon cheapen permanently the price of that article to American consumers, and that a sustained duty on sugar would be a powerful factor in treating with sugar-producing countries for reciprocity.

Mr. Brown says that his opinions and views on this matter are shared by leading Republicans, both in and out of Congress, conversant with the subject, who are not unmindful of the demands that are likely to be made on the Treasury to meet the largely increased government expenditures for pensions, the new navy, etc., in the near future.

More money will have to be raised somehow to meet this increased government expenditure, and it need not be looked for, he says, from customs revenues, in view of the reduction of tariff taxes on many articles, and the extended free list found in the McKinley bill law.

Christmas at the White House.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—The President's grandchildren are looking forward to Christmas with much anticipation, for they are to have a Christmas tree in the President's private parlor. There are mysterious bundles hidden away from prying fingers and peeping eyes. And there are boxes of many colored tapers, and strings of popcorn, and gilt stars, and all sorts of things that are necessary to make a real, genuine Christmas tree. The Christmas party at the President's house will be a strictly family affair, for on that day Mrs. Harrison says the children count on a merry romp with grandpa, and no spectators are allowed.

The Brazilian Minister Surprised.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Mr. Valente, the Brazilian Minister here, was surprised to read the announcement that Dr. Salvador de Mendonca had been appointed Minister to the United States, and that the present minister had been transferred to Vienna. Minister Valente has heard nothing of the reported change, and says that he is certain that if any such change had been made he would have been informed of it by his Government.

HIS SKULL SPLIT OPEN

One of Inspector Byrnes' Detectives Attacked With a Cleaver.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Detective John Foley, attached to Inspector Byrnes' squad, was struck down last night by a blow from a cleaver in the hands of an Italian saloonkeeper named Antonio Besselono.

The detective was passing an Italian butcher shop when he heard the noise of a fight inside and entered to quell the disturbance. He had scarcely entered the door when Besselono rushed at him and buried a cleaver in his skull.

Mortally wounded, Foley grappled with his assailant, but the latter slipped away and ran. Foley then staggered to the street and fired his revolver.

The place was quickly surrounded by policemen, and search was made for the murderer. The friends of Besselono fired revolvers at the police, wounding one in the thigh, and the officers fired a volley of pistol balls, which silenced the Italians.

Besselono was finally found secreted behind an ice-chest in his store and arrested. Foley was conscious long enough to identify his assailant.

DISASTROUS FIRE.

Two Blocks Burned in Athol, Mass., and Several Firemen Injured.

ATHOL, Mass., Dec. 22.—The most disastrous fire ever known in Athol occurred here yesterday. The Masonic and Central blocks were completely destroyed, five merchants, the postoffice the Masonic rooms, etc., being burned out.

A. C. Porter, George Burnham, L. C. Perry and William Connor, of Orange, firemen, were injured by falling walls, Perry probably fatally. Alexander McLeod, foreman of Star Hose, fell 30 feet from a ladder and fractured his skull. The property loss is $135,000; insurance, $75,000.

Owing to the difficulty experienced in getting at the fire, and the inflammable character of the buildings, aid was summoned from Gardner and Orange, the latter place promptly sending a steamer. The Commercial Union Telegraph office was among the establishments that were destroyed.

She Killed Two Raccoons.

EGG HARBOR, N. J., Dec. 22.—Mrs. John Pomilear, a prominent resident of Emilville, a small town about eight miles from here, was attacked by a large raccoon, which sprang upon her and attempted to grab her by the throat. The animal was forced off by the young woman, who secured a club and killed it. Mrs. Pomilear then proceeded to the barn, which is some distance from the house, to feed some live stock, and when returning from the barn was attacked by another raccoon, which sprang at her, but after a hard fight she succeeded in killing this one also.

An Old Sea Captain Dead.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Dec. 22.—Capt. Charles F. Seabury is dead at his residence here, aged 70 years. Captain Seabury commenced to go to sea 50 years ago. He commanded several whaling vessels, and later entered the service of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, commanding several of their largest steamers, and was the first commander to take a large steamship through the Sues Canal. Subsequently he was in the employ of the Vanderbilts in New York.

Shot for Insulting Women.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 22.—John McCarty, 24 years old, was shot and fatally wounded by Officer Trip last night. McCarty, with two companions were insulting women on a street corner when Trip approached and ordered them to move on. He will probably recover.

VOTING IN KILKENNY

The Fate of Parnell Will be Decided To-Day.

THERE IS INTENSE EXCITEMENT.

Both Sides Working Hard and Only a Few Rows Reported.

Parnell Confident of Victory—He Says if the Result Is Unfavorable He Will Not be Downhearted—London Is Anxious About the Result—Liberals Predict Parnell's Defeat—The Polls Close at 8 P. M.

KILKENNY, Dec. 22.—Up to noon to-day only a few rows were reported at the polling places, but the excitement is intense and there is likely to be trouble at any moment.

It is the first occasion upon which the divided sections of the Irish party have confronted each other, and each must stand or fall by the result to-day. After it is over it is likely that a material change will take place in the relative size of the contending parties. But although the election in North Kilkenny involves issues of paramount importance to the whole of Ireland, it has been impossible to divest the canvass of a personal element, and many of the 6,000 voters in the constituency are being influenced by the personal character of the candidates.

The population of the division is about 41,000, while the voters number nearly 6,000. At the election of 1885, the first held after the division of the county, the late Mr. E. P. Marum, the Parnellite candidate, received 4,084 votes, to 174 cast for Bellew, Conservative. The sentiment of the constituency being almost unanimously in favor of home rule, Mr. Marum was returned in 1886 without opposition.

Parnell expresses himself as confident of victory to-night. Much apprehension is felt of the effect that defeat might have upon his followers.

Parnell said he had faith in Kilkenny's decision, but if the result was unfavorable, he would not be down-hearted, but would hold aloft the flag until every constituency in Ireland had spoken.

Two hundred troops and over 500 constabulary are scattered through the place. A division of soldiers of the 85th Infantry is commanded by Colonel Knot and the police by Allan Cameron.

Davitt said to-day: "If we do not carry this election I will retire from Irish politics forever, for I will believe the Irish people are liars. After deducting 30 per cent. from their promises our malority is 1,500."

The result of the election will not be known before noon to-morrow.

LONDON AWAITS THE NEWS.

The Liberals Confident that Mr. Parnell Stands No Chance To-day.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—The most intense interest is felt in London as to the result of to-day's election in Kilkenny. The Liberals believe, from the dispatches received to-day, that the priests have settled Parnell and that he stands no chance.

On the other hand, betting men who calculate to win are willing to back Parnell at much lower odds than a week ago, but are not ready to bet even. While the official result will not be known until to-morrow, it is thought that to-night a fair idea of the result can be obtained. The polls will be open until 8 o'clock to-night.

Timothy Harrington hastened on his arrival at Queenstown to communicate with Mr. Parnell, and the latter is said to be much encouraged by the information which Mr. Harrington has brought from America. All day long the two parties have been busy electioneering.

Mr. Harrington Amazed.

CORK, Dec. 22.—In an interview here, immediately after his arrival from America, Mr. Timothy Harrington said he was amazed at certain of the Healyites for attacking Mr. Parnell from a moral standpoint. He could throw a strong sidelight on their morality, which would astonish the public. Mr. Davitt's opposition was dishonest and unpatriotic. It was simply the expression of a long-standing enmity.

Davitt's Friends Indignant.

DUBLIN, Dec. 22.—Michael Davitt's friends are wild with indignation in consequence of a cartoon which is published in United Ireland, and represents Davitt accepting a bag of English gold, while Hibernia hides her face from him in sorrow and despair.

Mrs. O'Shea Has Ample Funds.

Healy's Sarcasm.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 22.—The Olympic Club of New Orleans, at an expense of $6,000, is rearranging the amphitheatre for the Dempsey-Fitzsimmons fight, which takes place January 14. A number of private boxes are being constructed. They will contain six seats and will be sold for $100. The general admission with reserved seats will be $10.

Arrested on Suspicion of Murder.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—John Fitzpatrick, a shiftless, drunken fellow, has been arrested, on suspicion of having caused the death of his wife. The woman's body was covered with bruises, and the coroner ordered Fitzpatrick's arrest, pending an investigation.

A ROMANTIC STORY.

Heirs in Texas Claim a Large Portion of the City of Chicago.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Dec. 22.—A very important legal case has come to light here in which the right and title to a large portion of the city of Chicago in the vicinity of Hennepin Park is questioned and claimed by heirs in Texas.

Albert L. Summerlin, an attorney of this city, has worked up the case and will leave on Wednesday for Chicago to push the claims of his clients. The property claimed is valded at about $20,000,000.

The story is quite romantic in its details and it has taken more than a year's work to complete the chain of evidence. The history dates back to the time when the Pottawattamie Indians owned the present site of Chicago. A Colonel Holiday married an old chief's daughter who was possessed of much of this land. His Indian wife willed the property to a grand-daughter, wife of Colonel N. Gulsette, a prominent banker of Corpus Christi. This heir died in 1864 without issue. The property had been in the hands of attorneys who, during the late war, tangled the claim of titles and sold the property for taxes.

Recently, however, Attorney Summerlin learned of another branch of the family and located all of the heirs in this State. The claim of evidence is perfect and already attorneys in Chicago have been heard from who are willing to compromise liberally for clients.

THE STRANGLER APPEALS

Eyraud Objects to the Sentence of Death Passed Upon Him.

PARIS, Dec. 22.—The murder case which has been the sensation of Paris the past week ended with the sentence of Eyraud to death by the guillotine and Gabrielle Bompard to 20 years' imprisonment.

Eyraud has appealed to the Court of Cassation against the sentence of death pronounced upon him.

Eyraud talked over the incidents of his trial with his jailors in the La Roquette Prison. He expressed his belief that the jury would have found extenuating circumstances in his case if it had not been for the address made by M. Robert, counsel for Gabrielle Bompard. He said that if he should be granted another hearing he would himself try to influence the court.

Gabrielle Bompard has been taken to St. Lazare Prison, where she will be kept until the time allowed for an appeal has expired.

Talk of a Paid Fire Department in Elizabeth.

As the following is printed in the New York World it is probably not so. "The firemen of Elizabeth are indignant over the disbandment of Continental and Osceola Hose Companies by the City Council. The firemen claim it is a scheme to give the control of the Department to the independent faction among the firemen. The regulars, who comprise a majority of the Board of Representatives, have elected the Chief Engineer and assistants for several years solely owing to the votes of the two hose companies now abolished. The change gives the independents a better chance to succeed at an election. Councilmen disclaim any intention of favoring either faction in the Department, but say their action was prompted solely by a desire to reorganize the Department and make it a paid system. It is estimated that it would cost $25,000 a year."

Somerset and Union the Same as When Created.

Bergen, Essex, Middlesex, Somerset, Monmouth, Burlington, Salem, Cape May and Gloucester counties were in existence before the year 1700. Most of them have undergone changes as to their boundaries, but Somerset and Cape May are now as they were at the start. Hunterdon, Morris, Sussex and Cumberland were all created prior to 1750. Cumberland is practically what she was in 1747. Of those made this century Warren is the same as when created in 1824, Atlantic and Passaic as created in 1837, Mercer as formed in 1838, Hudson as made in 1840, Camden as made in 1844; Ocean as created in 1850; and Union is the same as when given to the State in 1858.

The Boy Who Loves His Teacher Does Not Need Compulsion.

The Hon. E. O. Chapman, State Superintendent of Public Schools, has declared that children are not compelled, by law or otherwise, to draw water, haul coal or sweep out public schools at the commands of their teachers. If such things were compulsory certain students who receive from teachers requests for favors would rebel, but as long as he may help the country school ma'am of his own free will the chap who loves his presiding genius will be glad of the chance to be gallant and to devote his youthful strength and clumsy manliness to generous and pleasure-bringing self-appointed tasks.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM INSTANT DEATH.

A Former Plainfield Pastor and His Wife Hurled Forty Feet by a Locomotive.

Many Plainfielders well remember the Rev. Theo. S. Brown, who was pastor of the Crescent Avenue church from 1855 to 1867, when it was known as the Second Presbyterian, and when its meetings were held in an East Front street building on the site of Miller's drug store of to-day; and these will sympathize heartily, and rejoice thankfully, with the pastor and his wife, over the circumstances of their recent miraculous escape from death, at a railroad crossing in Ghent, N. Y. From the columns of The Chatham Courier of Dec. 17 the following account of the affair is taken:

"Last Saturday afternoon as the Rev. Theo. S. Brown and wife, of this village, were out driving, and while crossing the tracks near the brick school house in Ghent, they had a miraculous escape from instant death. Riding in a top phæton with side curtains closely drawn, and owing to the impossibility under favorable circumstances of seeing a train coming in this direction, the approach of the two o'clock express on the Boston and Albany Railroad was not observed until the shrill shriek of the whistle was heard; and in another instant came a crash, and horse, carriage and occupants were hurled along the track a distance of 30 or 40 feet. Wonderful to relate, Mr. Brown was not hurt, and, quickly extricating himself from the demolished wagon he sought the relief of his unfortunate wife, who, already quite helpless from a prolonged illness, could not assist herself in the least. She was quickly carried to the house of Mr. Kerrain near by, when it was discovered that her left arm was fractured above the elbow, and that there was an ugly wound on her forehead. Dr. Washburn was immediately summoned, and, assisted by Drs. Hanor and Green, reduced the fracture and dressed the wound. As soon as possible, Mrs. Brown was removed to her home in this village.

"It seems that the train was a little behind time; and Mr. Brown, supposing that it had already passed, and not hearing the whistle until an instant before they were struck, was driving unconcernedly, and at quite a good gait, across the tracks. The horse, a valuable animal, and a great pet, had just stepped on the track when the engine struck him in the side or on the shoulder, causing almost instant death. The force of the blow hurled him away from the track a little, and the wagon was caught by the engine and hurled over and over; had the animal taken but another step or two, the carriage and its occupants would have been brought directly in front of the engine, and fatal results must have followed.

"The sincerest expressions of sympathy for the stricken family, and the earnest hope for speedy recovery from what might have been a fatal accident to both, are everywhere heard."

Bishop Scarborough's Visit.

The beautiful little Church of the Holy Cross was crowded yesterday morning, the occasion being the annual episcopal visitation. Bishop John Scarborough, assisted by the Rev. T. Logan Murphy, rector, conducted the impressive services of the church and preached an eloquent and forcible sermon, which he prefaced by a few highly complimentary remarks on the good work, rapid progress and general prosperity of the parish, which, he said, is in every respect among the first and foremost of his diocese. After the sermon the Bishop administered the rite of confirmation to twenty-five candidates, an unusually large proportion of whom were adults.

At four o'clock in the afternoon the Bishop held a special service of confirmation, the second in the year, in Grace Protestant Episcopal church. The church was full, and much interest was manifested in the large number of young people, twenty, who came forward to ratify their baptismal vows. At his regular annual visitation on Whit Sunday, May 25th, thirteen persons were confirmed, making thirty-three for the year.

Judge McKennan's Successor.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—The names of several gentlemen are already suggested to fill the shoes of Judge McKennan, of Pennsylvania, when he steps down from the United States Circuit Court bench. Senator Quay says he thinks Judge Wickham, of Beaver, would make a worthy successor to so eminent a jurist as Judge McKennan. Lieutenant-Governor Stone says he knows no one who would fill the place with more ability than Attorney-General Kirkpatrick, while Congressman Dalzell thinks that Judge Marcus W. Achison, of the District Court, would be the proper person for the place. The Philadelphia delegation has not made up its mind as to whom it would prefer in the event of Judge McKennan's retirement.

A New Departure.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Dec. 22.—Governor Merriam has decided to issue a proclamation, declaring the adoption by the people of the constitutional amendment, making a verdict of five-sixths of a jury in a civil action valid. This decision was reached on the advice of Attorney-General Clapp that by the decision of the Supreme Court of 1876, "a majority of those present and voting," where it occurs in the State Constitution, means, not a majority of those voting at the election, but a majority of those voting on the pending amendment.

A New Church Scandal.

ORANGE, N. J., Dec. 22.—There is considerable discussion in church circles here and in Morris over the action of the Presbytery in declaring Prof. DeValsen Wood of the Stevens Institute and his wife guilty of unchristain and slanderous conduct in circulating stories reflecting on Rev. Thomas Carter, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church at Boonton. Professor and Mrs. Wood were anxious that Mr. Carter should resign.

Succi's Elaborate Meal.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Signor Succi ate an elaborate meal yesterday with extraordinary relish. He occupied two hours in consuming the food placed before him, and partook of it with a zest that astonished those present. At the conclusion of the meal Succi was made the recipient of a handsome cane and a gold toothpick. He left for Boston last night, where he is to exhibit as a museum star.

Charged With Heresy.

CANTON, Ohio, Dec. 22.—Rev. Howard MacQueary, the Episcopalian charged with heresy, says that all overtures for an amicable settlement of the trouble have failed, and that the trial will be held at Cleveland January 7. He will conduct his own defense, assisted by a Cleveland attorney and one or two eminent Episcopal clergymen.

Lorillard Time Checks Paid.

KEYPORT, N. J., Dec. 22.—The time checks issued in October to the employes of the Lorillard Brick Works Company have just been paid. Ex-Mayor Seidler of Jersey City, who is the receiver of the company, says that the time checks issued last month will be paid about Jan. 1.

Electric Light Plant Burned.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., Dec. 22.—The Jamestown Electric Light Company's plant was destroyed by fire last evening. Loss estimated at $30,000.

Stock Speculation Caused His Suicide.

LYNN, Mass., Dec. 22.—Benjamin L. Johnson, a prominent citizen of this city, committed suicide by shooting himself with a revolver. A recent loss of $15,000 in stock speculation was the cause of the act.

Choked His Wife to Death.

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—Henry Christiansen, of Grand Crossing, choked his wife to death and then cut his own throat last night.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

(In Charge of Superintendent of Press Work.)

Ex-President Julius A. Seelye, in a letter to The Christian Union, gives his reasons for preferring prohibition to high license:

1. High license puts no restriction upon the buyer. He can get his liquor just as copiously if he wishes it as he ever did before. One saloon will supply the craving of 500—or 5,000 for that matter—as well as any. The evils of intemperance are not, therefore, necessarily reduced by restricting the number of the saloons. Their abolition rather than their reduction is what we need and ought to seek.

2. License, high or low, takes away what ought to be, and what in a healthy community would be, an important moral restriction from the seller. It removes from him the condemnation of the community and justifies him. It makes his act legal. His moral sense, easily blinded by the enormous profits of his trade, is thus paralyzed. He becomes thus what we find him to be; obdurate, rapacious, an evil man and seducer, who waxes worse and worse. I do not wish to condemn him or any other man, but I do not believe there is any trade so demoralizing to the trader; any class of sales which does the seller so much moral mischief, as that in intoxicating drinks. And to this damage the community contributes by licensing him in his trade.

3. The moral tone of the community is lowered by licensing the liquor traffic. Whether it is right or wrong per se, to buy, or sell, or drink intoxicating liquors, is a question I do not care to argue. This question loses its interest to me in the face of the appalling facts with which the liquor traffic confronts us. There is no single channel through which such depths of misery flow over the human race as though this. No ravages of disease, no devastations of nature, no kinds of vice or crime, work such woe as this. Such a statement no intelligent man will be likely to doubt, and no honest one would deny.

The Canadian Methodist General Conference gives unequivocal endorsement to the policy of national prohibition and has appointed a committee to wait upon the government and demand immediate attention toward the national prohibition of the liquor traffic. This conference further recommends that no one shall have a place in the Sunday schools, in the educational institutions of the church, or in the ministry, who is not a total abstainer from the use of tobacco.

The Evil of Subscription Gifts.

One way of abusing the excellent custom of gift making at Christmas time is handled in free lance style by the New Brunswick Home News, whose remarks, which follow, have a more or less local application.

"The greatest abuse of the gift custom"—says the paper—"is in the taking up of collections among subordinate employes and school children for the purpose of making presents to well-paid officials. Not that these practices in themselves are to be condemned when the gifts are spontaneously made and the recipients of the gifts are deserving of them. There is however, one abuse of the custom which is prevalent in all cities, which is the reception by school teachers of presents secured by contributions from the pupils in the schools. In itself the practice may be commendable, but it should be remembered that many parents are unable to furnish money to the children with which to buy presents for teachers. Of course a child is not compelled to give, but not to do so is regarded as a confession of poverty or unwillingness to do as the other pupils have done, and when the child is unable to respond is subjected to a mortification that is painfully humiliating.

"We do not say that the teachers are to blame for the evils of the custom. Indeed, many of them condemn it, but they should go further, and when they know such a thing is likely to be practiced should oppose it and plainly state that presents obtained under such circumstances would not be accepted. There are many poor children in our public schools who should be saved the mortification and embarrassment which annually comes to them, and our teachers can do it by taking the right action at the right time."

Grade Crossings to be Abolished.

The vexed question of getting rid of grade crossings on the two railroads which pass through Elizabeth has at last been settled so far as the action of the City Council is concerned. It is not expected that any opposition will be made by the companies, which have been for some time desirous of separating their own grades. The crossing at a level of the Pennsylvania and the New Jersey Central tracks has been a danger-point that nothing short of extreme vigilance has prevented from being the scene of fatal accidents. Passengers by both lines will breathe more freely when one road is lifted over the other. The advantage which the city of Elizabeth will gain by the improvement will be marked.

Don't Forget the Telephone Girls.

When distributing tokens of remembrance to those who have served you faithfully during the past year, do not forget the telephone operators at the central office. Those young ladies have waited on you day after day with willingness, courtesy, accuracy and dispatch.

The proprietors of Salvation Oil, the greatest cure on earth for pain, will pay a large reward if any certificate published by them is not found genuine.

ENGINEER BASSETT TO EXPLAIN.

Doud and Rice, of this City, Who Are Laying the Water Pipes in South Orange, Say He Delays the Work.

The Water Committee of the South Orange Village Trustees will hold a public meeting this evening that promises to be stormy. It is occasioned by the offering of a resolution censuring the engineer of the water system and declaring him incompetent. The resolution was referred to the engineer, and this evening he will be present to answer the charge against him. This engineer is Carroll P. Bassett, who once made a water and sewage "survey" of Plainfield from information given him by City Clerk Leonard, and charged the city $600 for it.

The principal cause of complaint at South Orange arises from the fact that the laying of the pipes in the township has been so long delayed. The contract called for the work to be finished Nov. 27, but it still is incomplete, and there seem to be no prospect that it will soon be completed. This causes considerable expense and annoyance to some citizens.

It is openly charged that the delay is occasioned by the fact that the Commonwealth Water Company, in which Carroll P. Bassett is interested, and which is to supply South Orange with water, has been unable to get its pipes laid to South Orange in time. The Company has half a mile of pipe yet to lay, and so as to prevent any blame attaching to the Company for not supplying the town with water according to contract, it is alleged Mr. Bassett has delayed the laying of the pipes in the village. The contractors for laying the pipe, Messrs. Doud & Rice, of this city, complain that the engineer has repeatedly delayed their work. They say that he has transferred their men from places where they were busy to other places and instructed them that pipe was ready for them to work with in South Orange when the pipe was not there.

This Commonwealth Company is the corporation that held the Plainfield Water Supply Co.'s charter for a few months, and tried to frighten the Plainfield Council with it into giving the Commonwealth Company the contract to supply this city with water.

An Old-Fashioned Winter.

There has been an encouraging beginning for the people who want to see a hard Winter. The Connecticut river is frozen over, the Hudson is well covered with ice, and the canals all over the country are closed for the season. This is doing remarkably well for December, and savors somewhat of the "old-fashioned Winter" so many people are fond of talking about. After the experience of the last two years an old-fashioned Winter will be welcomed by almost everybody. It will give steady employment to the miners of the coal regions—will guarantee an abundant crop of ice for the coming Summer—will cover and protect the Winter wheat and give prospect of a good harvest. It is true the bitter blasts will bring much discomfort and suffering to those who are not prepared for them—but after all it may be a question whether the old-fashioned Winter does n't bring with it more real comfort and enjoyment than the modern kind. At any rate, an old-fashioned Winter in three or four years is enjoyable just for the sake of variety. The growler will growl and the kicker will kick, whether the weather is old-fashioned or new.

Is this Plainfield's Dr. Lowry?

[From The New York Sun.]

A publisher of Protestant Episcopal literature, who comes continually in contact with clergymen, is disposed to think that a reaction will soon set in Father Ignatius's favor, so far as inviting him to the larger churches is concerned, if it has not already begun. He instances his being asked to St. George's church on the first Sunday in January as proof of this. He is quite confident that Father Ignatius will ultimately compel the admiration and respect which thus far has been withheld.

The Rev. Mr. Lowry, who asked Father Ignatius disagreeable questions on Tuesday in connection with the Romish tendencies of monasticism, told this publisher immediately afterward that Father Ignatius was a Jesuit in disguise.

Mr. Haines the Next Speaker.

There was a fair attendance in Reform Hall last evening. President Harper occupied the chair, Edward B. Titsworth invoked the blessing, and Mr. Vanderbeek's choir, with Miss Doremus as accompanist, rendered a fine selection of music.

The speakers were Wm. B. Ayres, E. B. Titsworth and G. M. Angleman, all of whom advocated the cause of temperance in an able and convincing manner, and commanded unbroken attention on the part of the audience.

The President announced as the speaker for next Sunday evening Samuel A. Haines, a gentleman of great oratorical ability. The meeting closed with the doxology.

He is Not Known Here.

George Boggs, who robbed the tool chests of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company at Lyons Farms, and gave his address as Plainfield avenue, this city, has been sentenced to the county jail for sixty days.

Tom, Dick and Harry appear again with their Grandmother's recipes for coughs, etc., but the people know Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup too well.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

An event of more than ordinary importance among the Masons of Ohio was the reception recently given to J. W. Iredell, Grand High Priest of that jurisdiction, and the presentation to him of a magnificent Grand High Priest's jewel. It will be remembered that Companion Iredell was indirectly and innocently the cause of the severance of the fraternal relations between the Grand Lodge of Texas and the Grand Lodge of Ohio some time ago on account of his alleged opposition to the establishment of the Cerneau rite in the former State.

The magnificent Masonic Temple at Denver, Col., has been completed at a cost of $350,000. It is said to be the finest piece of Masonic architecture west of the Alleghanies.

Mystic Shrine.

Arrangements have been made for a pilgrimage by the Nobles of Syrian Temple, Cincinnati, to Columbus January 17, where the rank of Noble will be conferred on a large class of candidates. The cavalcade will enter the city of Columbus with many salaams and with camels laden with meat offerings and peace offerings. W. B. Mellish, Potentate of Syrian Temple, will lead the caravan and preside at the ceremonies.

Odd-Fellows.

The controversy which has been raging among the order in Chicago and, indirectly, through Illinois, concerning the suspension of America Lodge, No. 109, of Chicago, for disobedience to the mandates of the Grand Master, now seems in a fair way to be settled. The members have had a meeting and resolved to comply with all the conditions imposed by the Grand Lodge at its late session, in order to entitle them to a restoration of the charter.

Grand Army.

The National Council of Administration will meet at an early day to fill the office of Senior Vice-Commander-in-Chief, made vacant by the death of Richard P. Tobin.

The various posts in New York have presented no less than six National flags to as many different churches of various denominations during the past month, and the comrades of Chicago posts have raised a magnificent flag on a liberty pole 75 feet high, which has been erected on the tower of the new Northern Pacific railroad depot in that city. For flag raising and flag presenting the order is becoming famous.

United Workmen.

The biennial report of the Grand Recorder of Colorado shows a net increase of membership in that State during the past year of 1,500 and ten new lodges organized. Eighty deaths were reported, and the beneficiaries received $180,000. The total membership in the jurisdiction is now 5,500.

At the recent union meeting of the lodges in Chicago nearly three thousand members of the order were present, and some stirring addresses were delivered that have already created a decided interest in the order.

United Americans.

A new council of the order has been established in Chicago with 43 charter members. State Councillor Joseph Reynolds, is working incessantly to build up the order in that State. Several new councils are promised during the winter.

A movement is on foot in this order to admit, to membership those of foreign birth who served in the late war and have secured naturalization papers. This seems a single step in the right direction, but it does not go far enough to entirely relieve the order of the imputations that have, perhaps unjustly, been made against it in different quarters.

The Elks.

In most of the lodges of this order at this season memorial services are being held in memory of those members who have died during the past year. Chicago lodge No. 4 and Louisville lodge No. 8 have already held very interesting and impressive lodges of sorrow which have been largely attended by the members and general public.

McDOUGALL.

Has Pure Water Any Color?

Dr. McPherson, writing to a local scientific journal (Pacific Record), states that it has now been undeniably proved that distilled water has a blue color. A Scotch gentleman of much perseverance has carried out a series of experiments, and proved this fact, which he says is easily demonstrated as follows: Let down into water a metal tube (open at the top and closed with a clear glass plate at the bottom) close to a white object twenty feet below the surface. This object when looked at through the tube has a most beautiful blue color. The object would have appeared to be yellow if its color was due to light reflected by extremely small particles of matter suspended in the water.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS!

And the Place to Buy Them.

"Tis without an equal in Plainfield," is said of our display of Christmas Goods, and 'tis true; as we have spared neither pains nor expense to bring together a line of goods that would suit almost everyone in quality and price.

Dolls, we have enough to supply every child in Plainfield; too many of them we think, but they must be sold this week, so we are cutting prices.

We call special attention to our line of Iron Toys. They are the best kind to buy, as they are the kind that never break; there are fire engines, hook and ladder trucks, hose and cart, locomotives, cars, etc.

How about an Umbrella for some one? We have them from $1 to $3.25.

There came in this morning about 500 Plush Boxes; ought to have been here two weeks ago, but were delayed on the road. Handsome goods they are, consisting of glove and handkerchief boxes, jewel cases, writing desks, &c. You can buy them just 25 per cent. less than they are worth.

There is an endless assortment of cups and saucers, fancy plates, brass goods, photo albums, work baskets, scrap baskets, pictures, etc.

And then you will want Christmas cards. Ours are bought direct from the manufacturers, and we save you money on them. Prices 5, 10, 15 and 20c.

Lamps make a useful present; we have them in all kinds and styles. Hall lamps, $1.75; handsome parlor lamp, $2.50; piano lamps, $8 75 for a beauty.

Come in this week, select what you wish, and we will deliver when wanted.

Reduction in Prices for Cash!

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

AFTER DECEMBER 15, 1890,

The Plainfield Produce Company

Will Sell All Goods Strictly for Cash!

We will present a few reasons for making this change in our manner of doing business. In the first place we have our Hay, Grain and Produce inspected and bought direct from the Producer for Cash. Thereby obtaining better quality, also saving one profit, which would go to the commission merchant if bought from sample the usual way.

In the second place any concern doing an extensive credit business must get larger profits to offset slow and worthless accounts, of which with the greatest care there will be some. And the customer who is ready to pay and does pay his bills when presented, is the one who must pay these larger profits.

By selling for cash we avoid losses from such accounts, and can afford to sell for smaller profits.

We ask for a share of your patronage. Give us a call and we will show you how low we can sell for CASH, instead of how high we must sell for credit.

INSURANCE AGENTS

OUR CITY BOARDERS.

"The Dea Little Lammie," and "the Naughty, Naughty Cow."

"PHILURA," spoke up my partner, Jeduthine Winterbottom, one day last spring, "le's take city boarders this summer."

I turned round from the churn I was washing, and looked at him over my specs.

"The's money in it," he went on. "Ole Simpkins-tol' me he made over a hundred dollars last summer on his'n."

"Yes," says I. "How did he do it? Kep'em on salt pork an' canned goods an' skim milk. I dunno," I continued in an encouragin' tone, "but what I sh'd like well enough to have 'em here for a spell; but I won't agree to set no sich pizen table for 'em as they do down to Simpkins. Fresh meat an' vegetables an' berries in their season, eggs an' cream an' milk a plenty is about what I sh'd cal'late on givin' 'em."

"Give 'em what your're mind ter, so long's I take the money for it," says Jeduthine, trying to be funny.

And so it came about that we advertised in the Sunday papers, and in due course of time had several answers. Jed said he was satisfied that he got fifty cents worth of letters, anyhow.

Last week our boarders came. There was a woman and three daughters, and one of 'em is married and got two children. Various and sundry husbands and beaux are comin' up over Sundays.

They seem happy. They sleep late mornin's and eat three good square meals a day and considerable between meals, but I don't find no fault.

The night they come, Jeduthine met 'em at the station jest after supper. They hadn't had their'n, and when I'd given 'em a hearty meal of steak and baked potatoes, and raspberries and cream, they begun to look around 'em.

"O, how I love the beauties of nature!" said one of the young ladies. She is the oldest, has red hair, an' they call her Clementine.

"Those mountains are so grand," she went on, "an' those medders so green. What are those?" she asked me, pointin' to the hay the men had got raked.

"Good land!" says I. "Didn't you never see no haycocks?"

"Hay?" she screamed. "O, Amelia! O, Genevieve, hay! Real hay! And can we go in the barn and tumble on the fresh new-mown hay, my good woman?"

"You can for all o' me," says I.

"And what are those?" she shrieked, pointing to an old hen-turkey with a brood of chicks.

Didn't you never see no young turkeys?" said Jed, starin' at her, with his mouth open.

"Turkeys! How delightful! But I supposed they were a larger bird. And O, girls, see that dear, dear lamb."

"You'd better keep away from him," said Juduthine; but she didn't hear, and was running toward the old ram which we had tethered down below the cabbage house.

"Dear lammie," we heard her saying, in dulcet tones; "sweet little lammie, come here and be petted."

The "lammie" heard and came. He shook his head threateningly from side to side.

"Oh," said Miss Clementine, looking back to us, "see how spertive he is!"

While she was gazing our way old Ned gave one of his well-directed home thrusts, and Miss Clementine was laid low among the bushes. Jed ran and picked her up while the girls that stayed behind screamed like murder. Old Ned don't wear the curled-up horns his kind usually wear. In fact he don't wear any, and as he was only playing nobody was hurt. But Miss Clementine came back white, and very much subdued.

"O, see!" screeched Miss Amelia, when Clementine was on the piazza again. "Are those cows?"

"Them air," says my pardner.

"And are they about to be milked?" says she.

"They air," says he.

"O, Genevieve, let's go and see them milked. Can we, kind sir?"

"You ken," says he.

"Are they—do they—are they, in short, harmless?" faltered Genevieve, the married one.

"They be," says Jeduthine.

So the two rushed off towards the barn. Miss Clementine said she didn't care for cows and went in to look at the photograph album.

"How sweet, how fragrant their breath!" murmured Mrs. Genevieve, as they drew near the barnyard.

"That ain't their breath," observed my pardner. "It's the pig-pen you smell."

"And how poetical every thing is," began Miss Amelia. "Nothing is so charmingly rural as the lowing of kine."

Just here the old Toro caught sight of her red hat and began to low in any thing but a charming manner.

"Go away, bad cow," she screamed, taking off the red hat and waving it at him, making him madder and madder every minute. "Why you act real angry. Go away, naughty cow."

Jeduthine and the hired man began to snicker, while the old leader of our flock and herds bellowed and roared on the other side of the fence like a Trojan. Genevieve began to be frightened and started for the house.

"You've got to learn not to be afraid of me, old cow," says Amelia, and she put her hat on a stick and held it out to him. He rushed for it, caught it on his horns and trampled on it and tossed it and finally trod on it until there was nothing left of it.

"My picturesque hat," says she. "You naughty cow! Come here and be tamed."

The "cow's" attention being diverted from the hat, he came at her call. He stuck his horns under the barnyard gate and lifting it up got it open. Then the mad old critter rushed through and there was a scattering.

"Run, run for your life, you fool, you," hollered Jeduthine, jumping over the fence, the hired man following him.

Poor Miss Amelia, realizing at last that this was not all play, scud for the house. You needn't tell me city girls can't run equal to country ones. Anyway, I never see any girl make quicker time than did Amelia Summerblossom coming to the kitchen door.

The toro chased her clear into the shed, and then went to tearing up the turf all over the yard.

Miss Amelia got into the kitchen and fainted away. Then she had a fit of the hysterics in which she was joined by Clementine. And the last thing I heard before they shut their chamber door was:

"Those naughty cows!"

And "that treacherous lamb."

But I thought Jeduthine would die of laughing that night.

"Ha! ha! ha!" says he. "You 'dear little lammie,' and 'you naughty, naughty cow.' Ho! ho! ho! 'How sportive he is!' Ho! ho! ho! The durned idiots. By gum! Philura, I'd rather keep city boarders one week than go to the circus all summer."—Philura Winterbottom, in Yankee Blade.

HE TOOK THE CAR.

But the Next Driver Who Invites Him to Ride Will Regret It.

"I am a stranger in this town," said a man with a fur cap on, as he entered the Woodbridge street station house the other day.

"Well?" queried the sergeant.

"Well, I was up here on the avenue looking about at the buildings and I says to myself, says I:

"'It's a mighty lively town, and every man seems to be good-natured.'"

"Yes."

"That's what I said, you know, when a car came along. The man who was a-driving of it motions to me and asks if I want to ride.

"'This is kind,' says I, as I hopped on. 'I'm only a stranger here, and yet the people can't do too much for me.'"

"I see."

"Well, I had only got seated when a chap comes in and holds out his hand. Says I to myself, says I:

"'Ow's this? They not only ask me to ride, but are glad of my compamy. I'll shake, of course I will.'"

"Well?"

"Well, what did the deceiver do but laff in my face and demand pay, and when I expressed my feelin's as to such conduct he gave me a lift off the car and rumbled on. Says I to myself, says I:

"'I'll go around to the police and see if it is regular and above board,' and here I am."

When informed that it was regular and according to custom, he replied:

"Then it is all right, and my ignorance is to blame for it. It's all in being used to the customs, you know. I'm thankfully obliged, and when I was coming here I says to myself, says I:

"'If the police say it's all right then I've nothing further to say, but the next driver who asks me to ride will get my left duke on his blinker as warning that I'm no hayseed.'"—Detroit Free Press.

The Elusive County Seat.

Tourist—How can I find the county seat?

Prominent Kansan—Better set right down yere, an' wait till it comes by. Yisterd'y a passel uv fellers frum Boomopolis went over to Dinkeyville, whur the county seat was located, an' loaded up the records an' truck in a wagin, an' lit out fer home. I heered this morn'n' that a gang from Excelsior headed 'em off, an' chased 'em, county seat an' all, plumb th'oo the Limestone Hills, an' over into Champion County. Whichever side gets it, a delegation uv prominent fellers from Rocket City is aimin' to take it away frum 'em. If they make the riffle, an' they're mighty li'ble to do so, they'll fetch it along by yere on their way home. So, all things considered, your best plan is jest to set down an' wait till it comes by.—Puck.

Not a Wealthy District.

Kansan—Mornin', stranger; may I ask what's yer business in these parts?

Stranger—I'm agent for a syndicate of capitalists and am here to purchase mortgages and bonds.

Kansan—Well, there ain't much in your line out here. The only bonds in this section are vaga-bonds.—Light.

What It Most Needed.

The Mother—For mercy sake, what makes the baby cry so, up there?

The Nurse—It's crying for the bottle.

The Mother—Well, you must give it every thing it wants.

The Father (in a fury)—Yes, give it a spanking, it wants that worse than any thing else.—Light.

Improbable, Unfortunately.

Newsboy—Last edition of the World! One cent!

Citizen—Boy, if you'll guarantee that will be positively the last edition of the World I'll give you a dollar for it.—Life.

A Fashionable Sort.

Clerk—Tea? Yes, ma'am. What kind will you have?

Mrs. Tangle—I think I'll take some of the pink tea that is so fashionable now.—West Shore.

KING OF ALL TRAMPS.

How Wilson Becker Earned This Questionable Title.

Traveling from Boston to San Francisco and Return in Twenty-One Days Without Spending a Single Cent for Food or Fare.

Wilson Becker, alias "Sailor Kid," the regularly elected king of the tramps, has just completed a trip, which gives him a perpetual claim on the throne of American vagrancy. In May, the young man, whose proud boast is that he "never done a lick o' work" in his life, was made the subject of a wager at Boston. His backer bet a large sum that the "Sailor Kid" would travel from the Hub to San Francisco and return in the space of twenty-one days without spending a cent for railway fare or food. The feat was accomplished, and the sport who risked his money on the tramp presented him, the other evening, with $500 of his winnings, says the Baltimore Herald.

His majesty now offers to venture this sum—the most money he ever had in his life—on the proposition that he can beat his way around the world under the same conditions as those of his transcontinental trip, in 102 days. Meanwhile he basks in the homage of his ragged subjects, who declare that "der king can't be downed by any man wot works der road."

It may be interesting to note how this lad, not yet twenty years old, has solved the problem of living without labor and gained the names by which he is known. He was born in Demarara, British Guiana, and was christened Wilson Becker. At the age of nine he ran away. Working on the sympathy of sailors by romantic but untruthful tales of woe, he made voyages to Calcutta, Hongkong, Honolulu and England.

HIS MAJESTY, WILSON THE FIRST.

After an absence of eighteen months he reached home. But the fever of traveling was in his veins, and he next essayed land journeys throughout the United States with a success that has no interruption up to the present time. In 1877 young Becker, who, because of his nautical experience, was known to the fraternity as "Sailor Kid," attended a big convention of tramps at the Nanticoke (Pa.) coal breaker. It was decided at this convention to choose a king. The convention developed two candidates of about equal strength — Patsy Bolivar and "Sailor Kid." Each was popular and had a large following. After several unsatisfactory ballots, numerous fights and the consumption of oceans of beer, the contending factions made a compromise. It was agreed that the crown should grace the brow of the candidate who made the quickest trip from New York to San Francisco and back, via New Orleans. Becker won with hands down.

While en route he chanced to learn that Indians were allowed to ride free on trains crossing the Western prairies, and while "Patsy" Bolivar "plugged along" slowly in freight cars, the "Sailor Kid," with feathers in his hair, paint on his face and a blanket over his shoulders, sped westward on the platform of a lightning express. This was but one of the many schemes he found available, and as a result he gained the insignia of royalty. It took twenty-six days to make the race for the throne and on the twenty-eighth his majesty assumed the scepter with the title of Wilson I. and received the submission of his motley gang of subjects.

LONDON'S LORD MAYOR.

The Gentleman Who Was Recently Made Chief of the Great Municipality.

Alderman Joseph Savory, the new Lord Mayor of London, whose induction with great pomp occurred, is descended from a French family who came to England on the revocation of the edict of Nantes. His ancestors became prominent in the city more than one hundred and fifty years ago, establishing the business now so well known as the Goldsmiths' Alliance. Mr. Savory, who was born in 1843, finished his education at Harrow, and on leaving school joined his father in the firm of A. B. Savory & Sons, with which he is still actively connected. The new Lord Mayor began his association with the corporation in 1882, when he became sheriff, and on the expiry of his term of office, on Sir Sidney Waterlow's resignation, he was elected alderman for Langbourn. Mr. Savory, who is a J. P. for Bucks, is a churchman and a Conservative. He has always taken great interest in educational matters, and besides his numerous other offices is a member of the school board, an almoner of Christ's Hospital, governor of the Royal Holloway College, chairman of the Princess Helena College and a governor of the United Westminster Schools. He is also a governor of Queen Anne's Bounty and of the Royal Hospitals.

LORD MAYOR SAVORY.

ALLEGED HUMOR.

AN UNREASONABLE RULE.

Uncle Hiram—Wal, wal; I'm not used to sleepin' in a room with a light burnin' in it; but if that's the rule of the house I'll have to do my best."—Munsey's Weekly.

A TIMELY REPORT.

Inky Johnsing—Huh! What a swell! Dem close ob yours are 'bout loud 'nuff ter make de face ob a clock blush.

Chrome Yallerby (in thick-skinned cheerfulness)—Ob a clock, Mose? Dat's all right—dey's second-hand!—Texas Siftings.

NON-COMMITTAL.

Colonel Ascomb—What does that J. in the middle of your name stand for?

Mr. Bascomb—Oh, I don't care to say whether it's for Uncle John or Uncle James. Both have money and both hate one another desperately.—Puck.

He Held It Up.

Teacher—Who was Atlas?

Tommy—A road agent.

Teacher—How do you make that out?

Tommy—A road agent is a stage-robber, isn't he?

Teacher—Yes, that's what he's called sometimes.

Tommy—Shakespeare says: "All the world's a stage."

Teacher—Yes.

Tommy—Atlas supported the world, didn't he?

Teacher—Mythology says so.

Tommy—Well, then (triumphantly), Atlas held up the stage.—Texas Siftings.

On the Wrong Road.

Mr. Bullfinch—No use; no use askin' about my son; he's gone to the bad. He's a professional swindler an' nothin' else; he's a confidence man in New York.

Old Friend—You don't say so? Doesn't he come home when he gets broke?

Mr. Bullfinch — Broke? Why, he makes money hand over fist. He could make a person believe black was white without half tryin.' The police say he's the most accomplished liar in the hull city.

Old Friend—Well! well! What a pity he didn't go into politics!—Puck.

A Valuable Testimonial.

Lady (to applicant for position as domestic)—My goodness! This reference is signed by Mrs. Upton.

Applicant—Yes, mum, she signed it herself, mum, after I'd been there a week, mum.

"But Mrs. Upton has been dead for five years."

"Is that so? Well! well! It's one place after another I've been getting on that char-ac-ter for seven years, an' never heard before that the poor leddy was dead. Heaven rest her soul!—The Jury.

Just What He Wanted.

Gus De Smith—I wish I had appealed to Harrison for a post-office or clerkship, or something of the kind.

Ferguson—What good would that have done you? You would have been left out in the cold.

De Smith (mopping his perspiring brow)—My dear boy, that's precisely what I want.—Texas Siftings.

The Ballet's Baggage.

Dailey—An opera troupe that went from here to San Francisco had to pay $500 for excess baggage.

Dumley—How was that—had they so much scenery?

Dailey—No. It was because the ballet dancers had so many trunks.—West Shore.

Wanted to Know the Depth.

Bagley—Say, Brown, there's been a railroad accident down below here, and your mother-in-law, who was on the train, was buried in the debris.

Brown—How deep?—Puck.

BURNED BY HOT IRON

Horrible Explosion in a New Jersey Foundry.

FIVE MEN FATALLY INJURED.

The Accident Caused by the Carelessness of an Employe.

He Poured Water on a Mass of Molten Iron Just Taken from the Furnace—Men Knocked Down Like Sticks and Their Flesh Set on Fire—One Man's Eyes Burned Out.

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 23.—A horrible explosion occurred at the New Jersey Steel and Iron Works at about 2 p. m., and five men were probably fatally injured. Two of them are at the hospital now and are not expected to live. The other three are badly burned about the neck, body and face, and they present a most horrible sight, with their flesh pealing from their bones.

The men were injured by the explosion of a "cinder," or a mass of molten iron which had just been taken from the furnace at white heat. When the iron is taken from the furnace there are men standing ready with buckets of water to throw over it, for the purpose of cooling it. This is done only upon the order of the man in charge of the furnace, who is the judge of the proper time for the use of the water.

Michael Funda did not heed the orders of the furnace man and threw the water too soon. No sooner had the water struck the molten mass than the hot iron exploded with a lond report, and hunks of iron weighing hundreds of pounds flew in all directions about the rail mill where the furnace stood. The men were knocked down like so many sticks and their clothing and flesh were set on fire.

The sight was sickening. Michael Funda had his eyes burned out and a large hole burned in his neck and body. George Lintall is also badly burned. The flesh on many parts of his body was burned off. Michael Gossula is so horribly burned as to be unrecognizable and Michael Goperip has a gash in his abdomen, and his physicians say he cannot recover.

INDIGNANT DOCTORS

At War With County Supervisors for Cutting Down Their Fees.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Dec. 23.—In several counties of this State, notable Dutchess and Columbia, the physicians are at war with the boards of supervisors for cutting down their charges for examining indigent lunatics from $10 to $5 each. They assert that in the majority of instances they are damaged pecuniarly by being taken from the care of their own patients, and that the service they perform for counties takes not only time for examination, but also for appearances at court, etc., and that cutting the bill down to $5 puts them on a level with unskilled labor.

Dr. John P. Wilson procured a writ of mandamus for the Dutchess County Supervisors, and at the hearing Judge Barnard decided that, as there is no law on the subject, the Board had a right to use its discretion in auditing the bills.

A movement is on foot to have each County Medical Society send representatives to the meeting of the State Medical Society expressly to agitate this subject and to get the State Society to appoint a delegation to go to the Legislature and have, if possible, a law enacted fixing the rates for examining indigent lunatics at $10 each, and to fix a satisfactory date for making autopsies.

Highbinders Again at Work.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 23.—The Chinese highbinders after a month's quiet, renewed hostilities last night with the result that Wong Lee, who runs a sewing machine, now lies in a hospital with a bullet wound clear through his body. His assassin was Chey Fook, with whom he quarrelled a few days ago. As both belong to highbinder societies the music of revolvers will probably be heard again soon, for if Lee dies his society will expect life for life.

No Trouble at Pine Ridge Agency.

PINE RIDGE S. D., Dec. 23.—The friendlies have not yet started for the Bad Lands. They went over the hill and had a big talk, but were back by noon. Col. Stanton reports to Rapid City that he has chased a bunch of reds from Bad River to the White River. Everything is quiet here. Slow Bull came in to ask Gen. Brooke to give the Bad Land braves the earth as a Christmas present. No arrests, no punishments, no taking of guns heap more rations, forgiveness, love, are a few things on the list.

Sitting Bull's Warriors Surrender.

OMAHA, Dec. 23.—A special received here says: "Sitting Bull's band of 150 warriors, led by Big Foot, has just surrendered to Colonel Sumner, who, with 200 soldiers, succeeded in surrounding them in the vicinity of Standing Rock, while they were making for the Bad Lands."

Indian Police on the Move.

REGINA, N. W. T., Dec. 23.—A detachment of thirty Indian mounted police left town yesterday afternoon for Chief Piapole's reserve in response to intelligence that a number of runners from across the border had arrived there. Another detachment of thirty police left for the same place to-night.

Found Dead in Their Cells.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Dec. 23.—John Holoran, aged 48 years, who was sent to jail for intoxication and Thomas F. Marshall, 52 years of age sentenced for the same offense were found dere in their cells this morning. Alchoholism is supposed to be the cause of death.

A NEW WAGE SCALE,

The United Mine Workers to Hold an Important Convention.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., Dec. 23.—The United Mine Workers of the entire coke regions will hold an important convention here Friday next. The new scale, as finally prepared by the wage committee, which adjourned Saturday, will be fully discussed before adoption. The objections of the Mahoning and Shenango Valley furnace men to the coke prices, and their demand for a reduction from $2.15 to $1.50 per ton is causing considerable agitation in labor circles. Labor leaders generally uphold the maintenance of the existing prices, on the ground that the concession of this great reduction will necessarily reduce the wages of the miners and cokers.

At a meeting of the executive board held here resolutions were passed favoring a temporary suspension until the yards could be cleared of the heavy stocks of coke caused by the prevailing car shortage. The convention will also act on the question of the distribution of work growing out of the banking of the ovens.

NEW HAMPSHIRE'S FIGHT.

The Democrats File a Petition Praying for an Injunction.

CONCORD, N. H., Dec. 23.—Harry Bingham of Littleton and others, representating the Democrats in the House of Representatives, filed a petition at Laconia for an injunction enjoining Stephen S. Jewet, clerk of the House, from placing upon the roll of membership the names of certain additional, conditional, "if entitled" Representatives.

Two petitions were also filed by persons who claim to have been legally elected members of the next Legislature for a mandamus commanding Clerk Jewett to place upon the roll their names and names of representatives elected in towns specifically enumerated and specified in the statutes.

Copies were also delivered to Clerk Jewett. Application will be made to Chief Justice Doe at Dover to-morrow to fix upon a time for a hearing.

Cut in Two by Cars.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., Dec. 23.—Thomas Carney of Syracuse, a Central-Hudson freight brakeman, was instantly killed at Little Falls early in the morning. He was just leaving his caboose to flag an approaching train when the train he was about to flag crashed into the caboose he had just left, catching him between the two trains and cutting him completely in two.

P. T. Barnum's Condition Improved.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Dec. 23.—The condition of P. T. Barnum, the veteran showman, is much improved and his friends are beginning to be more hopeful. He rested a great deal easier, and ate considerable food for a sick man. Dr. Loomis of New York, who is attending him, will not allow any one to see him at present except members of his family.

Trying to Corner Fireworks.

WEYMOUTH, Mass., Dec. 22.—Parties representing a syndicate with a capital of $2,500,000 have been in town negotiating for the purchase of the fireworks business of E. S. Hunt & Son. The syndicate intends to control the manufacture of fireworks throughout the country. R. G. Hunt, a member of the firm, states tha as yet no sale has been consummated.

Signor Succi in Boston.

BOSTON, Dec. 23.—A number of physicians were present at the informal reception given to Signor Succi, the Italian faster, at the Crawford House. Succi's face has an unusual pallor and his cheekbones show with great prominence, but his step is steady and the grip with which he greeted strangers upon introduction was strong and firm.

Mrs. Burke-Roche Secures a Divorce.

WILMINGTON, Del., Dec. 23.—A decree of absolute divorce was granted in the Superior Court to Mrs. Francis Burke-Roche, daughter of Frank Work of New York, from her husband, Hon. James Burke-Roche. There was no opposition to the application, Mr. Burke-Roche not being represented by counsel.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Dec. 23.—A desperate fight took place at Ben's Creek, a mountain mining town 10 miles east of this city, between Huns and Slavs. Mining picks and pistols were used. The fight occurred in a Hungarian shanty. Three of the participants, including one woman, are reported fatally hurt.

SENATORS BUNCOED

A Baltimore Sharper Works a Clever Scheme.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT A VICTIM.

A Baby Receives Many Presents from the Dignified Legislators.

They Were Rejoiced to Find the First-Born Named After Them—Only Three Senators Failed to Respond—The Story Leaks Out and the Distinguished Victims Compare Notes.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—The greatest joke of the season on the United States Senate has just leaked out. A confidence man in Baltimore has been writing to the Senators flattering them and saying that he he has just named his baby after the illustrious Senator from such and such a State.

The letter is written in the most flattering language and expresses the delight of the happy father in having such a splendid baby boy, and that he is able to name him after a United States Senator. The letter ends with a delicate little appeal to the recipient that a little token for the baby would be thankfully received.

Vice-President Morton was so pleased at the letter that he sent a beautiful silver cup to "Levi P. Morton Duval," who he supposed lived at 853 East Baltimore street. Senator Evarts bought a beautiful Washington souvenir silver spoon and had engraved on the back "William Maxwell Evarts Duval." Senator Morrill of Vermont was one of the first, and sent a silver mug marked "Justin Morrill Duval, from Justin Morrill of Vermont." The only Senators who were not caught were Mitchell of Oregon, Davis of Minnesota and Dixon of Rhode Island.

The story came out by Senator Manderson showing his letter. Then 35 letters were brought forth and with them 35 certificates showing that the supposed baby has been baptized by a clergyman by the name of the Senator receiving the letter. The letters were all signed William Duval, and gave the address as above.

Senator Gorman refused to say what he sent, but Vest went down in his pocket for $5. Carlisle was the first Democrat caught, while, so far as amounts sent, Senator Higgins was the most generous. He sent a crisp new $10 bill. Blair sent a pretty letter and $5.

The Democrats are shy of saying what they were caught for, but the Republicans laugh over the joke, and now every one in the Senate is asking how the baby is to-day.

Mrs. Duvall Is Innocent.

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 23.—The wife of William Duvall, who lives at 305 North Eden street, learned yesterday evening for the first time of the large number of first-borns credited to her and the distinguished names they bore.

William Duvall, who was a letter carrier under Postmaster Brown, used the opportunities his position gave him to become familiar with the names and politics of the various Senators, and being now out of employment determined to make use of his information.

He does not live with his wife, who is childless, and the scheme, as well as the children, are the offspring of his fertile brain.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

A Resolution Introduced to Investigate the Death of Sitting Bull.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—The Senate devoted most of the day's session to the discussion of the Federal Elections bill. Mr. Higgins made a long speech in favor of the bill and Mr. Voorhees another long address in opposition to it.

It is probable that a concurrent resolution will be passed by the House this afternoon providing for a recess until the holidays end.

Mr. Blanchard introduced a resolution for the appointment of a committee to investigate the killing of Sitting Bull and the cause of the Indian outbreak. The preamble to the resolution says that the killing of Sitting Bull appears to have been accomplished under circumstances recognized neither by the laws of peace, nor those of war. It is provided that the committee visit the Northwest, and to sit during the present Congress and after final adjournment.

Narrow Escape.

ALBANY, Dec. 23.—A narrow escape from a serious wreck and attendant loss of life occurred on the Saratoga division of the Delaware & Hudson road shortly after midnight. As the Montreal sleeper passed Ballston it dashed into a freight standing on a switch, knocking several cars off the track and smashing two of the sleepers. Fortunately no one was injured.

Successful Trial of the Newark.

HELP FOR STRIKERS.

The Newark Spinners Receive Support from the National Association.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Dec. 23.—The meeting of the executive committee of the National Cotton Mule Spinners' Association remained in session two and a half hours. Nine delegates were present, representing unions at Lewiston, Me., Newark, N. J., Nashua, N. H., Kearney, N. J., Lawrence, Lowell and New Bedford and this city.

The meeting was called to consider what should be done to help the Newark strikers who left work without the consent of the committee. The strike was endorsed and the delegates pledged to extend all possible support. It was voted to give $150 from the National fund to support the strikers, and it was further voted to call meetings of the unions everywhere to grant money from the treasuries or levy assessments on all members.

The delegate from New Bedford explained the cause of the strike in that city, and it was voted to instruct Secretary Moore to write all branches, asking the mule spinners to keep away from New Bedford and Newark. Addresses were made on the policy to be pursued by Senator Howard and Secretary Moore.

BAPTIZED IN BLOOD.

Terrific Battle Among Hungarians at a Christening.

PASSAIC, N. J., Dec. 23.—There was a christening of a Hungarian child in the colony of that nationality at Dundee, near here, last night. The affair ended in a terrible battle between the half-civilized men who attended the affair, and the babe was in reality baptized in blood.

John Pickott received several stab wounds from a butcher knife in the hands of John Slykowski. The furniture in the house in which the christening was held was wrecked, and when the police arrived several persons were more or less bruised and cut.

Slykowski tried to escape, but was finally captured. Upon his person was found a long knife covered with blood. He was taken before Justice Ross, who committed him to the county jail in default of $600.

The child is still alive.

A Family's Long Tramp.

EPHRATA, Pa., Dec. 23.—Wm. Shanman, wife and child, who moved from this section some years ago and settled in Kansas, have arrived here, having walked the entire distance, with the exception of about 100 miles. Their home in Kansas was destroyed by fire some time ago, and the family escaped with only the clothing they wore. The family will settle in Lancaster county, where they have friends who will help them.

New England Society Banquet.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—The annual banquet of the New England Society of New York took place in the large concert room of Madison Square Garden last night. Among the speakers were Hon. Joseph H. Choate, Chauncey M. Depew, Hon. A. B. Cummins of Iowa, ex-Gov. Wilson of West Virginia, Rev. Francis Patton of Princeton College and Gen. O. A. Howard. J. Pierpont Morgan presided.

A Young Woman Frozen to Death.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Dec. 23.—Last Wednesday afternoon Amelia La Bompard, 19 years old, started to walk from Wolf Pond, Franklin County, where she had been visiting, to her home in Malone, a distance of 14 miles. She did not arrive at Malone, and diligent search failed to discover her whereabouts until last night, when her body was found about three miles from where she started, she having been frozen to death.

New Trial Refused.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—The United States Court in banc has decided to deny the motion to suspend judgment and for a new trial in the case of General Peter J. Claassen, pres dent of the Sixth National Bank, which he tried to wreck. As the court was unanimous there can be no appeal to the United States Supreme Court. The extreme penalty is ten years and $5,000 fine.

The Trouble on the B. & O.

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 23.—The grievance committee of employes of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company had an interview with General Manager Odell. The conference was held in private, and what was said or done was not made public. Mr. Odell stated emphatically, however, that the trouble would be amicably settled and that there would be no strike.

Trouble Over a Kiss.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—Mrs. Kate Brogan of Harlem informed her husband that a young man had tried to kiss her on the street. Brogan started out to find the fellow, but got into a quarrel with Thomas Sheehy. A fight followed, during which Sheehy's skull was fractured and Brogan was badly cut about the head. Brogan was arrested.

Pittsburg Club Organized.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 23.—The Pittsburg National League Club has been organized by the election of J. Palmer O'Neill as president, H. R. Rhea, vice president; Lew Brown, treasurer, and A. K. Scandrett, secretary. A manager will be chosen Tuesday, December 30, and as all interested are a unit for Ed Hanlon the honor will be conferred on him.

Several Buildings Burned.

RUTHERFORD, N. J., Dec. 23.—A fire started in one of the group of real estate and other offices opposite the railroad station about 10 o'clock last night, and several of the buildings, which were small, were destroyed before it was extinguished.

Elevated to the Archbishopric.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 23.—News of the elevation of Bishop Frederick Katzer of Green Bay, Wis., to the archbishopric made vacant by the death of Archbishop Heiss has been received at the residence of the archbishop.

PARNELL DEFEATED

Sir John Pope Hennessy Elected in Kilkenny.

HIS MAJORITY LESS THAN 600.

The Priests Blamed for Actively and Openly Influencing Votes.

Parnell Goes to Avondale and from There to Paris—He Is Glad that the Contest Is Over—He Will Not Resume Hostilities Before New Year's—Irishmen Excited Over the Result.

KILKENNY, Dec. 23.—John Pope Hennessy is elected, but his majority will probably be less than 600.

The counts of the vote was commenced this forenoon but is not yet officially announced.

Scarcely two-thirds of the total registered vote was polled, the Tories stopping away from the polls almost to a man. In Castle-Comer, where 2,301 men were registered, only 930 votes were cast. In Gowran, where 1,205 men are registered, only 775 votes were cast.

The votes in smaller divisions fell off in proportion. Parnell proved the strongest among the farmers and field laborers, while his opponents captured the miners.

It was an exciting day, replete with petty rows at the polling booths, but except in one instance there was no serious violence.

Parnell takes his defeat calmly and says he will not change his determination to fight each constituency seat by seat. He says this was one of the worst districts for him to contest.

The town is intensely excited, but no disorder has occurred. The streets are full of people eagerly discussing the election.

The Priests Active.

The most conspicuous feature of the day was the activity of the priests, who all day long worked like beavers, leading bands of anti-Parnellite voters to the polls, raising cheers for Hennessy on every possible occasion, and keeping up a constant fusilade of exhortation, amounting to intimidation, against voting for Parnell. Considering the awe in which the mass of the people hold the priesthood, there seems to be a moral, if not a legal basis for the declaration of the Parnellites that the result should be questioned on the ground of undue influence. Mr. Parnell was intensely irritated by the action of the clergy, and stated most emphatically that he would immediately file a petition for a new election.

What Parnell Says.

In an interview Mr. Parnell said he expected the majority would be small. He hoped the bitterness of language that marked the contest would be forgotten; and in fact, considering all things, he thought the battle had been fought with little ill feeling on either side.

Mr. Parnell said that his eyes were much better. He will go to Avondale to-night and will remain there a day, proceeding thence to Paris. He will not resume the campaign in Ireland until January.

Dispensing With League Officers.

DUBLIN Dec. 23.—Considerable surprise was created by the appearance of a circular, just issued by the McCarthyites, which informs the branches of the Irish National League in Great Britain that, owing to the financial position in which the League finds itself, the services of most of the paid officials of the organization will be dispensed with.

The Parnellites Rooted.

KILKENNY, Dec. 23.—At Carrick-on-Suir last night a crowd of Parnellites attempted to burn publicly a number of copies of Davitt's paper, the Labor World. Davitt's friends rallied in great force and routed the Parnellites. Several of the combatants were injured in the fray.

IMPORTANT DECISION.

A Mormon's Wife Not a Competent Witness Where Polygamy Is Charged.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—The Supreme Court of the United States rendered an important decision in a Mormon polygamy case, holding that a wife is not a competent witness against the husband when polygamy is the crime charged.

William E. Bassett was in 1886 found guilty of polygamy on the testimony of his first wife, from whom he had been divorced after he took a second wife. The former wife's testimony was the only direct evidence produced, and it was upon her testimony that Bassett's conviction was secured.

He took an appeal to the Supreme Court of Utah, contending that his wife's testimony was not properly admissible, and when the Territorial court decided against him brought the case here. This court reverses the decision of the Territorial court and holds that the wife was an incompetent witness.

Barker Bros. to Resume.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 23.—All the creditors of Barker Bros., who failed a few weeks ago for $1,000,000, have signed a paper granting them an extension of one year. They will resume business in a few days.

Wrestler Leonard Defeats Gallagher.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Dec. 23.—Hugh Leonard and Dennis Gallagher wrestled last night for a purse of $500. Leonard won in two straight falls. About $5,000 changed hands.

Another Visit from the Grip.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 23.—This city is undergoing another visitation of the grip. Though not as serious as last year, doctors report hundreds of cases.

The Great Strike in Scotland.

GLASGOW, Dec. 23.—There are signs that the great strike of railway men is likely to be settled speedily.

THE SAWTELLE MURDER.

Gradually Weaving the Thread of Guilt Around the Defendant.

DOVER, N. H., Dec. 23.—In the Sawtelle murder trial William Dunham of Worcester, Mass., and Jed Morrill of Rochester testified to the wagon tracks in the snow around Morrill's barn February 10.

Postmaster Greenfield of Rochester testified to discovering the grave of the murdered man. It was levelled off and pine boughs scattered over it. Witness also found the collar buttons, a bullet and empty cartridge shell, and clotted blood on the leaves. The appearance was as if something had been dragged from a wood pile to the grave. The grave was eighteen inches deep and not long enough to admit the body with the head.

Others of the searching party corroborated this evidence with unimportant additions.

Officer Shields of Boston testified to finding one of Isaac's sleeve-buttons in the grave and the mate in Isaac's cell. Witness had known Hiram Sawtelle, but could not identify the body without the head.

Detective Withom of Boston, who knew Hiram, said he identified the body by the shape of the right foot; he also identified the shoes found on the body as Hiram's.

Dr. John S. Daniels described the post-mortem examination, which showed that two of the three bullets fired into the body would have caused death.

William Sinclair testified to selling Isaac the lamp February 5, and swore he saw a perfectly smooth shaven man in the carriage with Isaac at that time, and that the latter was driving as the team departed.

A double business block and six dwellings, all owned by John Beusch, were burned at Kingston, Pa. Loss, $15,000; no insurance.

Jennie and Lillian Allen, sisters, residing in Toledo, Ohio, were probably fatally injured in a runaway accident while carriage riding yesterday in Chicago.

Witnesses in the cases against S. A. Kean & Co.'s bank, which recently failed in Chicago, testified that various depositors were allowed to overdraw their accounts.

Fairfield, Tex., is in a state of intense excitement over the scourge of spotted fever, or, perhaps, meningitis. Business is almost entirely suspended. Eight or ten deaths have occurred within the last two days.

Charles F. Foley, aged 50, was burned to death in his carpenter shop at Cambridge, Mass., during the night. He was presumably asleep at the time as it was his custom to sleep there. The fire is supposed to have originated from an overheated stove.

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—Bargains in holiday gifts at Edsall's.

—A very fine wide stone flagging has been laid around St. Mary's church and in front of the rectory.

—The young men's auxiliary and mechanical drawing classes will meet at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-night.

—Anyone wishing to purchase holiday goods would do well to call on J. M. Harper 75 Park avenue. He is offering great inducement in prices of books, etc.

—E. A. Embury will teach free of charge another boys' singing class. Those interested are invited to meet him at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-morrow at 4:30 p.m.

—The advertisement in THE PRESS last night, of a poor widow who had lost a $5 bill, brought to the office of THE PRESS this morning a man with the missing money.

—In the struggle to set aside the will of the late William Moore of this city, there has been much evidence to show he was incapacitated. The testimony of Sergeant Lynch has been specially strong.

—The marmosets in one of the windows of Randolph's Pharmacy attract a great deal of attention, but the handsome display of goods offered soon takes the eyes of the people away from even these delightful pets.

—The Rice-Shotwell suit for damages was to begin to-day at Somerville, but as Corporation Counsel Marsh, the attorney for the plaintiff, is engaged in the "Uncle Billy" Moore will contest, the former case was adjourned to Monday.

—"There is no limit to the possibilities of genius." If the author of that remark had lived to survey the princely array of goods at Collier's, 3 Park avenue, he would have added—"Nor to the surprise which is occasioned by the discovery that the very best products of genius in the jewelry line can be obtained at the most reasonable rates."

—Why fill a store with goods and then keep dark about it? It costs money every day and hour to carry a stock of goods. Let the public know what you have to sell. Interest the people—attract them—do not allow them to forget you or your crowded shelves. Turn on the lights, especially the brilliant, steady and far-reaching light of advertising.

—Within the last eighteen months Union county has laid and macadamized with rock and ballast thirty-eight miles of roadways at a cost of $300,000. The result of this work has been so satisfactory that farmers and rural residents who were opposed to issuing bonds for the work are so well converted that they are putting in their demands for the improvement of lateral roads.

—A physician, in commenting on the fact that few smokers realize the extent of the harm done to the mouth, heart and nerves by tobacco, mentions a simple and effective method of rendering tobacco entirely harmless, without destroying its aroma. This consists of a small piece of ordinary cotton wool steeped in a five or ten cent solution of pyrogallic acid inserted in the pipe or cigar holder. This, he says, will neutralize any possible ill effects of nicotine.

—More criminals were pardoned in New Jersey during the past fourteen months than in the States of New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Maine and Delaware combined. Some newspapers are disposed to make a great fuss over the matter, and condemn the authorities for the leniency, but as none of them are supposed to know the grounds upon which the pardons are granted, perhaps they had better keep cool and not unnecessarily excite themselves.

—A New York taxidermist says that he has "set up" forty of those rare birds known as snowy owls during the month past. He has been in the business thirty years, and he declares that he has mounted more Arctic owls the present season than in all the previous years taken together. Who can account for the phenominal influx of these beautiful birds? They belong to the far North, but their capture this Winter in these parts is becoming an almost every day occurrence.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Robert Gaston Smith, of 111 Broadway, is convalescent from a severe illness which has kept him home from college several weeks.

The grand jurors from North Plainfield chosen on the Somerset County panel to-day were John Bodine, Robert Cook, Israel C. Coon and Hiram H. Tunison.

Miss Arletta Cutler of London, Canada, a student at Swarthmore College, Philadelphia, is spending the holidays with her cousin, Miss Chellie Vail, at 67 Park avenue.

The Usual Nightly Frolic.

Another row at Day's saloon occurred last night. Two arrests resulted. This morning City Judge Codington sent Michael Kelly, one of the guilty parties, to the county jail for forty days, and Thomas Kelly for twenty.

Who not, when you have a cold, take a remedy that you can depend upon to cure you? Hires' Cough Cure is a remedy above all others. It has cured a larger percentage of cases, where it has been tried, than any other cough preparation made. Do not forget it.

THE COMING COUNCIL DEADLOCKED.

Messrs. Smith and Ginna for President, and Messrs. Coward, Leonard and Dunham for Clerk.

As the incoming Council stand 5, 4 and 2 on organization, and as 6 is necessary for a choice, so far nothing is apparent but a deadlock.

The 4 Democrats being the political minority, consider themselves as not in the fight, and view from afar the division amongst the Republicans. 5 of the latter Bushmore, Ackerman, Ginna, Johnson and See—are for Ginna as President, while Roberts and Smith are for the latter. Thus is the deadlock created, and it really seems as if there is no key for it.

Councilman Smith is probably more entitled to the office of President than is Councilman Ginna. The former's past year of active, effective and faithful service, deserves reward. The latter is but newly elected—and then he is not half so broad or progressive a man as Councilman Smith. Councilman Roberts appreciates all this fully and "he'll stick by Smith." Councilman See, however, who owes his election to Messrs. Smith and Roberts more than to any other two men, has deserted them at the very start.

The Democrats will probly cast their four votes for President Moffett with the occasional straying of one or two to Roberts or Smith as a slight token of the esteem of the Big 6 for one another. Councilman Hetfield will also be tendered many a complimentary vote, and there are signs just now that point to him as the key to open the deadlock. The Council could not have a better presiding officer, and as to fitness—the place is just made for such as he. But then it is a Republican Council, and although they will all tell you they do not allow politics to influence them in municipal affairs, they all say what is not so.

The entrance of Councilman Dunham into the arena as a candidate for the office of City Clerk, also complicates affairs. The present Clerk, Mr. Coward, and the ex-Clerk, Mr. Leonard, had been dividing the seven Republican votes between them, but now Mr. Dunham claims at least three and hopes to add thereto the ballots of some Democrats. So you see it's quite a battle, as it stands.

Another Clergyman Turns Editor.

The initial number of Our Church, the new monthly publication issued by the Congregational church under the editorship of the Rev. Charles Lyman Goodrich, appears today. In his salutatory the pastor speaks as follows:

"The paper will not aspire to literary excellence, nor will it expect to interest any but our own congregation. It will be devoted to the interests of the church. It will represent the various organizations, will contain reports of what takes place in the church, will be open to short contributions from members of the congregation and good suggestions from anyone. In it the pastor will find opportunity to say some things which are not so conveniently said in a sermon, officers and superintendent will find it a means for getting their ideas and wishes before the people, and that it may be very popular there will be a corner in it for those who wish to grumble."

The Ranch King.

Joseph D. Clifton and his excellent company appeared before a good house at Amphion Hall, last night, and a more delighted set of people never left the house. Mr. Clifton has indeed a company superior to any that has ever appeared in the Hall. As the Ranch King he shows himself an actor of no mean ability, and he acquitted himself in a most commendable manner. Miss Louise Agnott as Pug sang and danced herself into the hearts of her audience. The specialties of Messrs. Smith and Bryant and Miss Merrill, were also commendable. Taken altogether, the performance of "The Ranch King" will long be remembered by the people. Mr. Clifton will repeat it to-night, to-morrow and Christmas matinee.

An Excellent Work by Dr. Hurlbut.

"Scripture Lessons for Daily Reading," prepared by the Rev J. L. Hurlbut of this city, is now published by Hunt & Eaton on a new plan. The purpose now is to give a reading for each day in the year and to complete the Bible in a year, selecting the most appropriate portions, well suited in length and subject, for private devotion, family worship or the public service. The first month's readings are from Genesis, the second from the gospels, alternating each month between the Old and New Testaments. They are arranged, as far as practicable, in chronological order, interspersed with selections from the Psalms. The print is large and clear, and the binding firm and strong.

A Confederate General's Pretty Daughter at Music Hall.

The St. Louis Republican, in speaking of the star who is to appear at Music Hall, Christmas Day, says: "Miss Alberta Gallatin, who is the pretty daughter of Gen. Jenkins of the Confederate Army, filled the role of the "Baroness" in Sardou's play of "Princess Andrea," with almost marvelous dignity and adroitness—we are tempted to say with such cunning and perfection as very few genuine Baronesses could display under like demands of real life."

$500 Reward.

So confident are the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy in their ability to cure chronic nasal catarrh, no matter how bad or of how long standing, that they offer, in good faith, the above reward for a case which they cannot cure. Remedy sold by druggists at 50 cents.

PLAINFIELD WINS AGAIN.

Elizabeth's Proud Bowlers Fall Like the Pins Before the Crescent League.

Just a week ago the bowlers of Elizabeth, in the height of practice and crowned with the laurels of many victories, came to this city perfectly satisfied that they had a snap. They quickly discovered their error, however, and finished 207 pins behind. On the way home they all agreed that the Crescent League bowlers were too much for the Elizabeth Athletic Club's "second team," and so last evening when the Plainfield boys went to Elizabeth to roll a return game, they found a much stronger team awaiting.

Again was the Elizabeth Club sure of victory. In fact their team was made up not only to win but to have big revenge. Yet under all this feeling their good fellowship was not buried. They intended to mop and swab the alleys with the Plainfield boys, but at the same time they prepared a good supper to console their visitors with after all was over.

The members of the Crescent League should be full of thanks to their bowling committee, Messrs. Burnet, Emerson and Thiers, for the fine team they have selected and which under Captain VanEmburgh has brought such credit on Plainfield. The score of the Crescents last night has only been excelled twice on the alleys of the Elizabeth champions. It was wonderful bowling when is considered the fact that it was against 12-inch pins 12 inches apart, and the Crescents have only before bowled against 18-inch pins 11 inches apart.

Dilts was high man of both teams, and Pelletreau second. Krewson had the worst breaks and spreads that ever fell to the lot of a bowler. His luck was the very hardest that can be imagined. Teel rolled in great shape, and after Reed's fourth frame no one excelled him. The two Vans kept their ends up—Captain VanEmburgh only breaking in the 2d and 3d frames, and VanWinkle only in the 3d and 5th.

It was a glorious victory, and the Crescent League members who accompanied the team to Elizabeth can easily be excused for shouting themselves hoarse and going crazy. The Club's mascot, James Moore, 2d, was there and helped along the victory by his presence. The score was:

MARRIED IN SPITE OF ALL.

The Bride, Though Death Seemed Nigh, Said that Her Nuptials Must Proceed.

Rebecca Dunson, the colored woman who was seriously injured by leaping from the platform of a flying express train at Netherwood last Thursday morning, would not let a fractured leg, a broken head, and a mass of bruises, interfere with her nuptials, which had been set for yesterday, so she was married, in the afternoon, to James Long, sexton of the Trinity Reformed church. When Miss Dunson was injured she was on her way to New York to have a last look at her wedding trosseau before having it shipped to this city. Her prospective bridesmaid was to meet her at the Netherwood station. Miss Dunson by mistake boarded an express train which leaves the Plainfield station earlier than the local train she was to have taken, and though the express flew past Netherwood at full speed she determined not to fall in her appointment, and so leaped from the car platform to the ground.

Her injuries were not at first, and are not now, supposed to be fatal, but Miss Dunson, hearing it suggested that some minor part of her anatomy having a big Latin name had been damaged, got the idea that she was going to die. Monday was, however, to have been her wedding day, and she insisted, and her lover acquiesced, that the ceremony should be performed just as though nothing had occurred to mar its joyousness. The Rev. J. A. Stafford therefore conducted the marriage at Miss Dunson's bedside as far as possible just as had been planned months before.

The bride has banished from her honeymoon the idea, born of romantic melancholy, that she is going to die, and now says that she's the happiest woman in the world and can't get well too quick.

She May be Seen Every Night at Amphion Hall.

At the close of a performance of "The Ranch King" at Worcester, recently, the doorkeeper was surprised at the tumultuous appearance of an elderly gentleman armed with a huge bouquet, who excitedly demanded to be conducted to the presence of Louise Angott, soubrette of the company. On being ushered into the presence of the actress, the old man remarked that he had lived ninety-one years, sixty of which had been spent in entire abstinence from intoxicating liquors, and that never before had he been so captivated by any one's personality. In token of this he begged the lady to accept the bouquet. Miss Angott was a trifle stunned at first, but soon recovered sufficiently to accept the testimonial, and now claims to hold the world's record in regard to aged adorers.—Dramatic News.

Eclipses for 1891.

In the year 1891 there will be two eclipses of the sun, and two of the moon, besides a transit of Mercury across the sun's disc. A total eclipse of the moon will take place May 23, but will be invisible here. An annular eclipse of the sun will take place June 6, visible in the Western portions of the United States. There will be a total eclipse of the moon November 15, which will be visible, beginning at 5:39 p. m. The transit of Mercury will take place May 9, and will be visible in the Western part of the United States but barely noticeable here.

No Likelihood of Financial Legislation.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—The prospects of financial legislation are as dubious as ever. It looks more and more as though the Eastern Senators are quite willing that the session shall drift to its end without action on a financial bill. Most of them openly avow that they care nothing for the bill, which was agreed upon in caucus, and that they shall vote to modify it if it is taken up for consideration.

Beware of $5 Gold Pieces.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 23.—The Mint authorities here have discovered a counterfeit five dollar gold piece designed and executed with such remarkable skill that few of the experts can distinguish the spurious coins from the genuine. It differs from the true coin only in size, being slightly larger in diameter. In order to retire the spurious coin from circulation the mint officials will purchase the bogus coins at their face value and then destroy them. The counterfeits have an intrinsic value of $4.40.

Steinitz Won the Seventh Game.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—Steinitz won the seventh game of the chess match with Gunsberg. This puts Steinitz in the lead with three games won to two for his opponent.

THE TAX COLLECTOR'S SALARY.

John Johnson Says He Will Brook No Reduction, But He May Have to Work on a Percentage Hereafter.

The plan to reduce the salary of Plainfield's Tax Collector has been abandoned, temporarily at least. The ordinance which was to fix the Collector's income at $1,200 instead of $1,500 was left on the table indefinitely at a special meeting of the Common Council held last night, and whatever change is to be made must therefore come before the new Council, as the only remaining meeting of the present board of city fathers is to be an adjourned session at which the matter could not be brought up, Dec. 29.

The matter was freely discussed, however, last evening. Councilman Johnson said that Collector Johnson had told him positively that he would not continue in the office if his salary were reduced. The bond of the Collector had been increased from $10,000 to $25,000, and he would not furnish such a big increase of surety for any less money than he had been in the habit of receiving. Councilman Smith said that Collector Johnson did not do the work of the office; he was inactive, lacked energy, and much of his collections had to be made by a delinquent collector, which added to the city's expense. The idea of the proposed ordinance was to make the $300 saved on the reduction of the Collector's salary pay for the delinquent collector's work. Councilman Rushmore suggested that the collector be vested with the powers of a special police officer so that he might do the work of the delinquent collector and frighten, with threats of arrests, the delinquents into paying up their arrears. Councilman Hetfield stated that when the Collector had an annual levy of only $74,000 to handle he was paid, by either salary or percentage, from $1,500 to $2,000 for his work; and suggested that surely now when the yearly levy was $132,000 he ought to receive fully as much. The plan he favored, he added, was to have the matter of income fixed by a percentage, thus offering an incentive to sharp collections. This plan seemed to meet with general favor, but the matter was left in abeyance so that the new Council might have something to wrestle with.

The ordinance prohibiting the tearing up of the streets for laying water mains, gas pipes, or similar fixtures, was unanimously adopted on its third reading and final passage.

The Councilmen present at the meeting were Messrs. Hetfield, Johnson, Moffett, Newhall, Roberts, Rushmore, Smith and Spangenberg. Councilman Dunham hitched his horse to a post in front of the hall just as the reporters were leaving the building. Councilman Jenkins didn't show up at all.

Our Modern Santa Claus.

An epidemic of giving and receiving presents, like that existing during the Christmas holidays, entails long hours of work on thousands of weary toilers, who assist in making this exchange of gifts. Santa Claus, that mysterious genius responsible for a large share of all this ante-holiday toil, could he only be caught, would be mercilessly ducked in Tier's Lake, or projected to some other planet, by thousands of willing hands that are now busy until midnight in order that expectant children may dance with glee on Christmas morning.

As Christmas draws near, the post-office clerk and carrier especially hold up their hands and groan. If all who send their little Christmas tokens of affection and remembrance through the post could see the flood of holiday mail that is poured into the Plainfield Post Office, both coming and going, they would wrap their packages more securely, tamp them more properly, direct them with more care, and then drop them into the box with a little sigh for the additional trouble they were going to cause the postal man. The past two weeks have been oppressively busy for the careful and efficient men who handle Plainfield's mail, and as Christmas draws nigh each day becames more and more a burden to the overworked employes. The carriers are absolutely loaded down, all day long, with parcels, packages and bundles, which they as Uncle Sam's envoys are called on to deliver. As they go about the streets, with great strings of Christmas gifts trailing all about them, one cannot but think how much more humane Christmas giving was in the old days, when jolly St. Nicholas, with his never-failing sack, and his perennial smile, bore gladly all the burdens which to-day crush the modern Santa Claus, the postman, with their weight.

End of a Time-Honored Custom.

"Violet," the charming young Mt. Freedom correspondent of the Dover Iron Era, announces the sad tidings that "spitting tobacco juice on the floor of the Presbyterian church, by persons well known, is to be stopped, notice having been given." Thus endeth another delightful custom which for many years hath been a charming feature of church service in "Violet's" rural neighborhood. Thus "the worm, the canker and the grief" abridge the joyous spirit of liberty which gave Mt. Freedom its name. Alas, poor Yorick! How fleeting is human happiness! Even in "Violet's" sequestered realm the gentle happinesses of the yokel are to be abridged.

A COMMUTER'S UTOPIAN DREAM.

Some of the Perfections Which the People Would Like to See at Our Railway Station—Things Which Shorten the Lives of Harassed Travelers, and How to Abolish the Evils.

Plainfield commuters naturally have considerable to say, from time to time, concerning the managements and mismanagements of the Jersey Central road. The views of some of them have already appeared in these columns, which as everybody knows are always open to the discussion of matters of public importance; and to-day there is published another presentment of commuters' grievances, as viewed by T. W. Moore, of 76 Broadway. Some of Mr. Moore's ideas concerning the railroad improvements which he suggests were developed from the lesson taught by the recent narrow escape of two score of people at the North avenue railway station, where but for night baggage-man Smith's vigilance they all must have suffered wholesale slaughter. The following is the interesting monologue which Mr. Moore delivered to a PRESS reporter as the result of a conversation on the subject last night:

"Whether the freight house is to be removed or not, there are some changes which if made would certainly add to the comfort and convenience of those going to the North avenue station from the South side. I have been a commuter from Plainfield over twenty-four years and I do not think that during that time there has been a single injury to a passenger on any train or ferry boat between here and New York. The most of that time I have been accustomed to pass to the station through Peace street. After the track was elevated we had a good comfortable stairway up the South side for the convenience of those a little late, but when the coal yard was altered that was taken away. Then for awhile we could catch a train by running up the grade next to the bridge on the North side if necessary, but since the iron fence was put up that chance is taken from us and we must go around the park to the front of the station. That would do very well if one were always in time, but when a little late it is rather hard on legs and lungs, and if in spite of extra exertion the roundabout path prevents reaching a starting train it is not always conducive to an amiable frame of mind—provokes remarks not suggestive of an agreeable future for those responsible for the change; if earnest prayers are not answered, their ears at any rate are bound to burn. The iron fence is very nice; we like style and improvements, as a rule, but some are too sweet to be healthy—'too rich for our blood', as the saying is. An old Vermont farmer returning from his first and only trip to New York, as the Hudson River train began to move out, shouted to the conductor 'Hole on a few minutes! Here's a man I hain't seen afore in twenty year': but it's no use shouting to our conductors; they must move on the minute. If the railway company would cut some nice wide steps next to the North side of the bridges on both Peace street and Park avenue, up to covered platforms, like those at Westfield and Roselle, extending to or near the station, they would save us much running around, and would save also its accompaniments; and the covered platforms would be a great comfort while waiting for trains. The front of the present station is not large enough to accommodate one-fourth the passengers to several of the morning trains, particularly in bad weather.

"And, while on the subject, as there is no law against talking about railroads, which are sometimes regarded as rather public institutions, would it not be an improvement if the passenger trains were run on the two North tracks? Most all of the stations are on that side, which may show an intention to run trains as I have suggested; at any rate, it looks to an outsider as though such a plan might be much better, for when we take some of the morning trains there are often several freight trains waiting for us to move on. It has been said that the stopping and starting of heavy trains add largely to the expense of running them; considerable time is certainly lost, which also costs money. [I should, by the way, like to save money enough for the road to enable it to turn on the gas in the cars at Jersey City ten minutes earlier, so that we may read our papers.] If the freight trains ran on the two South tracks and a fence were built between them and the passenger tracks opposite the stations they could be run right along without regard to the passenger trains; and, while talking about fences, why not put a fence with sliding gates to come opposite the ends of the cars between the two passenger tracks? Express trains moving East could go straight through when a local going West is at or coming up to a station, and locals would not be obliged to stop before reaching a station and thus start up again on account of another train coming from the opposite direction. The East-bound train would come up to the station; then when all was clear the conductor would step off the first car and pull a lever, which would open all the gates. Express trains from the East should always whistle when approaching a station. Bars or gates might be put across the South side steps of the cars to prevent passengers gettting off on that side; in fact, steps would be needed on only the North side of the cars. Then if passengers would leave the cars by the forward ends only those getting on could enter at once by the rear, thus saving time and often in bad weather a wetting."

THE HOUSEHOLD.

ODORS DELECTABLE.

Storing Pleasant Fragrance of Flowers for Future Enjoyment.

There is a special charm about clean linen, with a faint, delicate perfume of lavender, violet or rose clinging to it; and all who live where they have access to growing plants can prepare satisfactory stores of "sweet-smelling herbs" and fragrant leaves for their own use.

Not every one who loves and admires roses in their grace of bud and perfection of bloom knows how much may be done in the way of storing their pleasing fragrance for future enjoyment. The very simplest way of preserving the scent of the rose is to gather the petals as they are ready to fall from "the roses past their prime," and dry them.

A pillow filled with dried rose leaves is one of the daintiest gifts for a little baby. Fig. 1 shows a pillow of this kind that will be sure of appreciation from baby's mamma. A case of white muslin about ten inches long and fourteen inches wide is filled with the rose leaves. Over this is drawn a cover of white surah silk, embroidered with clusters of roses and buds in a manner shown in the illustration.

This design (Fig. 2) is worked with colored silks, either in satin stitch or outline. The colors are delicate shades of green, reddish brown and rose.

FIG. 2—DESIGN FOR ROSE PILLOW.

If preferred, the surah may be of a creamy tint, and the flowers worked with embroidery silk of the same color. The pillow is finished with a frill of soft lace.

A pleasant odor may be given to a room by a fancy bag filled with these fragrant leaves, and hung on the back of a chair or some other convenient place. Figure 3 shows a simple and handsome bag for this purpose. It is made of dark green silk, and lined with silk of a lighter shade. The bag is nine inches long and six wide. It is left open at each side above the casing. This allows the contrasting color of the lining to show. Through the casing, which is about two inches from the top of the bag, a narrow ribbon is drawn. It is left in long loops at each side by which the bag is suspended. A graceful spray of blush roses with their light green leaves is painted on one corner of the bag. If one does not paint or has not time, a China silk of a pale green ground and a rose figure may be selected for making such a bag.

FIG. 3—SCENT BAG.

The odor of lavender and sweet clover is particularly liked for bed linen. In drying them the principal things to be observed are the same as in drying rose leaves—shade and thoroughness. However, the lavender and clover, being cut with long stems, may be tied in rather small bunches and hung up to dry. The old-fashioned ambrosia of our grandmothers is another pleasant odorous plant that will repay preserving.

These bags are pretty, made of linen scrim four inches wide by seven long, hemmed across the top and tied with a white, green or lavender ribbon.

When not wanted for immediate use the dried leaves may be put in paper bags, which should be pasted up. Thus stored, they will keep their fragrance for years.—Margaret Ryder, in Country Gentleman.

The Preservation of Pulleys.

Any thing which tends to aid in the economic transmission of power, says the Age of Steel, is of interest and importance to those engaged in manufacturing pursuits. A new method of covering pulleys for the transmission of power by belts has recently been brought forward, and from what we are able to learn of it will add materially to the methods now in common use. By this means, which comprises the following points, a large per cent. of power is gained and the slipping of belts is reduced to an inperceptible factor. A specially prepared leather is made use of as a covering for the pulley, which is very soft and elastic and will not become glazed by the wearing and friction of the belt, as is the case when ordinary leather lagging is used. This leather is made secure to the pulley by a specially prepared cement which adheres most tenaciously and always remains soft instead of becoming hardened, as ordinary glue or cement does. When this covering has once been carefully and thoroughly put on the pulley it will last for years and will only become loosened when worn out.

F.E.C. Medicine Co., Rochester, N.Y.:
For seven or eight years my wife has been troubled with some kind of kidney trouble. She tried many different remedies but all in vain. She continued to grow worse. Last fall I induced her to try the F. E. C. Remedy, and before using one bottle she began to improve, and now, after using six bottles, she is entirely cured. I have recommended it to many and it has benefitted in every case heard from.

Reduction in Prices for Cash!
TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.
AFTER DECEMBER 15, 1890,
The Plainfield Produce Company
Will Sell All Goods Strictly for Cash!
We will present a few reasons for making this change in our manner of doing business. In the first place we have our Hay, Grain and Produce inspected and bought direct from the Producer for Cash. Thereby obtaining better quality, also saving one profit, which would go to the commission merchant if bought from sample the usual way.
In the second place any concern doing an extensive credit business must get larger profits to offset slow and worthless accounts, of which with the greatest care there will be some. And the customer who is ready to pay and does pay his bills when presented, is the one who must pay these larger profits.
By selling for cash we avoid losses from such accounts, and can afford to sell for smaller profits.
We ask for a share of your patronage. Give us a call and we will show you how low we can sell for CASH, instead of how high we must sell for credit.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

THE WOE OF THE WINE-BIBBER.

Oh! dark is the night, and the wild storm doth rattle,
And swift falls the cold, driving sleet;
And the white pavement groans with the dull heavy shuffle
Of a poor drunkard's slow-moving feet.
Oh! 'tis wine in the cup with its bold, subtle glitter,
And its foam like the crest on the wave,
Bearing many a young man whom it floats like a bubble
Over its foam to a wine-bibber's grave.

Oh! dark is the night, and a poor dying mother
Sorely grieves as the long moments drag;
And the worn, helpless form of a child she doth cover
With its poor, scanty clothing of rags.
Oh! 'tis wine in the cup with its bold, subtle glitter,
And its foam like the crest on the wave,
Bearing once-precious wife with the child on her bosom
Over its foam to a lone pauper's grave.

Oh! dark is the night, and a poor aged father
Sadly peers through the deep falling gloom;
And his heart fills with dread as the form of his darling
Totters home from the cursed saloon.
Oh! 'tis wine in the cup with its bold, subtle glitter,
And its foam like the crest on the wave.
Bearing poor dying souls where they float like a bubble
Over its foam to a wine-bibber's grave.

Oh! dark is the night, and the hands of a Nation
Press the curse to the lips of their sons
Till their once noble forms fall from honor's high station,
And their truth and their manhood are gone.
Oh! 'tis wine in the cup with its bold, subtle glitter,
And its foam like the crest on the grave,
Bearing many poor souls where they float like a bubble
Over its foam to a wine-bibber's grave.

THE RIGHT TO SELL DRINK.

Decision of the Supreme Court Regarding the Sale of Liquor.

The Supreme Court of the United States has rendered a decision in a liquor case that goes down to the roots of the question. A California dramseller was denied a renewal of his license, for keeping a disorderly house. He persisted in selling without a license, and found himself in durance vile for his contumacy. A district judge released him on habeas corpus, holding that the license law of California was a denial of the citizen's right to choose his own occupation and freely pursue it.

The case went to the Supreme Court, which, through Justice Field, declares that no man has an inherent right to retail intoxicating liquors, but that the business has been regarded by all civilized nations as one that involves great risks to society, and is therefore subject to strict limitations, and special safeguards. There is no question of the right of a State to limit the number that may engage in it, and to restrict the business by such guards against abuse as the welfare of society may seem to require.

The language of the court is well worth reading. It says:

"It is urged that as the liquors are used as a beverage, and the injury following them, if taken in excess, is voluntarily inflicted and is confined to the party offending, their sale should be without restrictions, the contention being that what a man shall drink, equally with what he shall eat, is not properly a matter for legislation.

"There is in this position an assumption of fact which does not exist, that when the liquors are taken in excess the injuries are confined to the party offending. The injury, it is true, falls first upon him in his health, which the habit undermines; in his morals, which it weakens; and in his self-abasement, which it creates. But as it leads to neglect of business and waste of property and general demoralization, it affects those who are immediately connected with and dependent upon him.

"By the general concurrence of opinion of every civilized and Christian community, there are few sources of crime and misery to society equal to the dram shop, where intoxicating liquors, in small quantities, to be drunk at the time, are sold indiscriminately to all parties applying. The statistics of every State show a greater amount of crime and misery attributable to the use of ardent spirits obtained at these retail liquor saloons than to any other source.

"The sale of such liquors in this way has, therefore, been, at all times, by the courts of every State, considered as the proper subject of legislative regulation. Not only may a license be exacted from the keeper of the saloon before a glass of his liquor can thus be disposed of, but restrictions may be imposed as to the class of persons to whom they may be sold, and the hours of the day, and the days of the week on which the saloon may be opened. Their sale in that form may be absolutely prohibited. It is a question of public expediency, and public morality, and not of Federal law. The police power of the State is fully competent to regulate the business, to mitigate its evil, or suppress it entirely.

"There is no inherent right in a citizen to sell intoxicating liquors by retail; it is not a privilege of a citizen of a State, or of a citizen of the United States. As it is a business attended with danger to the community, it may, as already said, be entirely prohibited, or be permitted under such conditions as will limit to the utmost its evils. The manner and extent of the regulation rest in the discretion of the governing authority.

"That authority may vest in such officers as it may deem proper the power of passing upon applications for permission to carry it on and to issue licenses for that purpose. It is a matter of legislative will only. As in many other cases, the officers may not always exercise the power conferred upon them with wisdom or justice to the parties affected. But that is a matter which does not affect the authority of the State, or one which can be brought under the cognizance of the courts of the United States."—United Presbyterian.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON said: 'The highest test of civilization is, not the census, nor the size of the cities, nor the crops, no, but the kind of man the country turns out. The saloon system, with either a high or low license fee, turns out the worst kind of men.

How Mr. Bumpers Got Into Trouble.

William Bumpers—Maw, was you ever an actress?

Mrs. Bumpers (bridling)—The idea! Certainly not!

W. Bumpers—Then why did you dress like a ballet girl?

Mrs. Bumpers (amazed)—I never did! What's got into the boy?

W. Bumpers—Well, paw's got a photograph of a ballet girl, and when I caught him looking at it he said it was your picture.

Mrs. Bumpers (with deadly calm)—Oh, yes, to be sure! William, tell your paw I want to speak to him.—West Shore.

THE FARM-YARD DRAMA.

Assistant Manager—I'm afraid it will be impossible to give a performance tonight.

Manager—Why, which of the actors is sick?

Assistant Manager—The men and women are all right; but there's distemper among the cows, and two of the cleverest mules have the glanders.—Light.

A Wrong.

Two men were talking in the street. "That man," said one, pointing to a passer-by, "did me a great wrong once."

"Why, I thought he was a man of integrity. How did he wrong you?"

"Well, he and I were candidates for aldermen, and he withdrew in my favor."

"I should think that he attempted to befriend you."

"But he did not. He used his influence and elected me."

"Was that a wrong?"

"Well, yes. I had not been in the council very long until he tried to bribe me."

"You don't say so! That was a wrong."

"Yes; but making me a propositor was not the worst wrong."

"It wasn't?"

"No."

"What was, then?"

"Why, he backed out."—Arkansaw Traveler.

Settled Him.

An old fellow who had served one day on the jury stepped into the court-room several days afterward and exclaimed:

"Jedge, got that two dollars yit?"

"What two dollars?" asked the astonished jurist.

"The money you owe me for serving on your jury. Been hangin' round here two or three days, but I see that you don't intend to pay me."

"Go to the circuit clerk."

"That's played out, jedge. I went to see the Governor and he told me to come over here. Now you want to put me off. Blamed—"

"Mr. Sheriff," said the judge, "arrest this man for contempt of court."

"Never mind the money, jedge. I'm willin' to trust you. What, take me to jail? This settles me with the Democratic party."—Arkansaw Traveler.

A WOMAN'S REASON.

Clara—Jack intends to have every thing his own way when we are married.

Clara's Mamma—Then why do you marry him?

Clara—To relieve his mind of a false impression.—Life.

Bad Memory.

"Captain," said a grocery-keeper, addressing a well-known gentleman, "do you remember that sack of flour you ordered some time ago?"

"Oh, yes, I remember it."

"I suppose so, but I don't remember that you ever paid for it."

"My dear sir, I am not responsible for your bad memory. I have remembered my part of it. Memory is a peculiar faculty, and is susceptible of great cultivation. Some of the Grecians could repeat volumes of poetry. Well, good-morning."—Arkansaw Traveler.

Always Ready.

"Did the plumber come down to inspect the pipes this morning?"

"Yes."

"What did he say?"

"He said there was nothing the matter, but he could very soon remedy that."—N. Y. Sun.

A Natural Idea.

Totling—I have heard it called the fodder-land.—Judge.

TRAVELING SALESMEN.

Their Opportunities and Dangers Discussed by a Man of Experience.

We take pleasure in copying from the Boston Daily Journal, for the benefit of the many young men engaged in business, the following report of an address by W. H. Baldwin, president of the Boston Young Men's Christian Union, upon "Traveling Salesmen: Their Opportunities and Their Dangers." For twenty-five years Mr. Baldwin was engaged in active business in Boston, previous to his accepting the presidency of the Christian Union in 1868.

In opening his address Mr. Baldwin spoke of the almost universal custom in all lines of trade of selling by traveling salesmen or drummers, and, if properly conducted, with mutual advantage to both buyer and seller. He would not, however, he said, stop to discuss the question as to whether or not it would be better to do away with the system altogether, but would deal with the system as he found it. The system itself was of modern growth, having originated not over forty or fifty years ago, and was vastly different now from what it was then. Much of the secrecy at first enjoined upon the salesman was now removed, and men in the same line of business started off together, traveled together, and sold customers in the same city.

One important factor in the change of the system was the progress in the means of public travel. In 1802 it took seventy-four hours to go by stage from Boston to Albany or New York, while in 1890 the time to either place is six hours, and there are six trains to the former and thirteen to the latter place daily.

To the traveling salesman who had faithfulness, truth, a keen sense of honor toward the firm and toward his customers, perseverance, patience and a lively attention to business, there were grand and ever-increasing opportunities. One of these was the opportunity to make the acquaintance of a large number of buyers who had been or would prove to be true business friends. Another opportunity was that of seeing the country and thus obtaining an idea of its extent, its wealth and its resources. Still another opportunity was that to make such a mark in business as would lead to fuller confidence on the part of the firm, and finally to partnership. All of these and other opportunities should be made the most of and improved on every occasion.

Dangers of many kinds assailed the traveling salesman, and to guard against them advice from older men or from the firm should be given and taken. Chief among the dangers was the temptation to other than strict uprightness. A young man if he would get ahead must make up his mind to start right, go right and keep right. Success in business was seldom won by luck, but by hard and persevering work.

Physical dangers would be encountered, and nothing could avert them but a strict attention to the laws of health. Good hotels and regularity in meals were to be sought and early hours kept. Economy in personal expenditure should be studied and also in traveling expenses which the firm had to pay.

Moral dangers were more insidious than all the others, and should be more strictly guarded against. The social glass should be avoided, and no young man ever need fear that an honest and steadfast refusal to drink would lower him in the estimation of any customer worth retaining. No warning against the social evil or gambling could be too strong. One of the worst things a young man could do was to allow himself to be drawn to the gaming table to pass an idle hour or for the sake of "killing time." Often times the first step was the fatal one. A taste for reading could be cultivated and many an otherwise idle hour could thus be profitably spent. One maxim the young man should always observe was "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." The Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath. It was a necessity for rest and communion with God, and should always be observed. Nothing should tempt a young man to do any business upon that day.

In closing Mr. Baldwin said: "Young men, I have spoken very plainly to you upon a subject which I deem of vital importance to all young men who now have or may have in the future the position of a traveling salesman. I have spoken to you from my own personal observations in the past, and not from hearsay alone or printed information. I have packed my trunk with samples of merchandise, started for the far West, have stopped at the principal towns and cities between Boston and the Mississippi, and I assure you that the words of counsel, warning and advice I have now given you are such as you will need, and such, if you will take them to heart, as shall help you to become true men, successful in the real meaning of the word, an honor to society and a blessing to the world."

A Congregation Aroused.

An up-town minister, to get even with a sleepy congregation, sang out in loud voice: "Wake up, here; there is a man standing before you with half a shirt on his back." The sleepers awakened, and the sisters of the congregation presented him later on with a dozen span new shirts. He then explained that he was really not in need of shirts. He had a whole shirt on when he made the announcement, but half was on his back and half on his front. All present smiled and enjoyed the joke, as they now saw it.

Good as a Nurse-Girl.

A California paper tells how a mountain lion lay down beside a little boy in a field and guarded him from danger until his mother returned. The story is just as good as if it were true, as the moral is there. The said moral is: "Discharge your nurse-girl and hire a mountain lion in her place."

Not the Right Color.

An Ohio poet having written a poem on "The Little Red School-House," some one stepped out and began inspecting, and of one hundred and thirty-two country school-houses he found only two painted that color. It's the little white schoolhouse which takes the cake in the country.

PAWNED HIS MONEY.

An Actor's Queer Expedient for Curtailing Expenditure.

HERE is a good story told of an impecunious actor who is very fond of wine when it is red. On a recent salary day he pulled himself together and made a wise resolve. The money due him on account of previous advances was not large, and after the payment of certain little debts and the settling of his board bill a $20 bill represented all that was left to him.

He determined to save the greater part of this, but the question of how this was to be accomplished troubled him. Finally he hit on a novel plan. He determined to pawn the money. The gentleman of the three-ball sign willingly made out the ticket and lent him $5 on the $20, charging the usual rate of interest. With this $5 the actor at once proceeded to get inebriated. It was about eight o'clock in the evening when he got back to the pawn-broker's, with the intention of getting his money out and continuing his spree.

But the place was closed and the owner refused to come out and see him, so he proceeded to wait. He knew he was not in condition to go to the theater, so he straggled about the neighborhood, and at last fell asleep on a door-step near by. When he awoke in the morning the place was open, so he went in to get his money. Another surprise awaited him. Although he had the ticket and the man recognized him, and the $15 was enough money out of which to pay the $5 he had borrowed and the interest on it, the pawnbroker refused to pay back the money till he received what was due him. So the actor had to go out to a friend's, explain the circumstances and borrow enough money to get his $20 bill out of pawn, and now when he wants to save his money he is going to put it in the family Bible or some other secret place but seldom pried into.—Nashville Banner.

Pleased and Grateful.

New York City, May, 1890.

I express my entire satisfaction with Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son, who is now nineteen years of age, had been afflicted with epileptic fits since he was six years of age. I tried everything that money could purchase, but no permanent relief was effected, now I can cheerfully recommend, and deem it my duty to advise sufferers to at least try Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son has not had any symptoms of the disease since he used the remedy. I am therefore pleased and grateful.

GLADSTONE PLEASED

Hennessy's Election is Hailed With Delight.

PARNELL NOT DISHEARTENED.

Greeted by Friendly Crowds on His Way to Dublin.

He Says the Election Was Not a Fair Test—Davitt Makes Another Attack on the Irish Chieftain—O'Brien to Edit the New Newspaper—Anxiety About the Paris Conference.

LONDON, Dec. 24.—The Parnellites will file a petition for the setting aside of the Kilkenny election, but there is much doubt as to the success of their efforts in that direction.

The doubt as to the fate of the Parnellite petition is not confined to the Parnellites themselves, and the weight of opinion is that it will fail. There seems to be no question that under the Reform bill of 1867 the grounds on which the contest will be made is well taken, for "undue influence of the clergy" is expressly named in that act as one of the causes upon which an election may be set aside. "Undue influence," however, is an elastic phrase, and a Conservative court may take a different view of the evidence on this point from that taken by a Parnellite layman.

Hennessy's election is hailed with delight by the Liberals, who profess to believe that it means the political deathknell of Parnell. Sir William Harcourt said that he had no doubt that the Irish party, under its new leadership, would soon be working in complete harmony with the Liberals, and that all the ground lost during the recent demoralization of the Irish contingent would speedily be recovered.

Everybody is now looking forward with curiosity to the outcome of the Paris conference. Arthur O'Connor is quoted as saying that Mr. Parnell still wields an influence not to be despised, and that, if willing to listen to reason, he will find his opponents also reasonable.

DAVITT'S BITTER ATTACK.

He Calls Parnell an Unmitigated Trickster and Enemy of Ireland.

LONDON, Dec. 24.—Michael Davitt's newspaper, the Labor World, renews the onslaught recently made upon Mr. Parnell through its columns. In the course of a long attack upon the "Uncrowned King," it says that if by any compromise Mr. Parnell remains leader of the Irish party, a number of anti-Parnellite members threaten to abandon public life, which would be disastrous to the party at large.

Mr. Davitt adds that Mr. Parnell is a greater danger to Ireland than any outside enemy ever has been. No foreign force, he says, has ever so endangered Ireland's liberty and honor as this "new pretender, unmitigated trickster and unscrupulous enemy of liberty and democracy who attacks Ireland's honor in its most vital part, and who betrayed his trust of honor committed to his care."

THE ENVOYS PLEASED.

The Kilkenny Election May Reunite the Irish National Party.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—Messrs. Dillon and O'Connor, the two remaining Irish envoys on this side of the Atlantic, have issued the following statement in reference to the Kilkenny election:

"We learned the result of the Kilkenny election with great pleasure. The majority is greater than we had hoped for. It is a vindication of the patriotism and sagacity of the constituency, because it shows that consideration of the good of the country and the safety of the cause have prevailed with the electors over natural feelings of gratitude and affection for a great leader like Mr. Parnell, which have blinded so many to the true issue at stake.

"The result in Kilkenny, in our judgment, offers a chance of reuniting our party, and we earnestly hope that both sides will now co-operate with Mr. O'Brien in bringing about a reunion of the Irish National party."

Parnell Not Disheartened.

DUBLIN, Dec. 24.—Mr. Parnell was greeted by friendly audiences at many places along the railway on his journey to this city from Kilkenny. At several stations he briefly addressed the gatherings, declaring that he did not feel disheartened over the result of the election. There was no cause for despair. The election was not a fair test. His friends had been prevented from voting at Kilkenny, where 1,300 electors had voted blindly.

Liberals Stick to Ireland.

LONDON, Dec. 24.—Sir G. Trevelyan, M. P. publicly states that the Liberal party continues steadfast in its attitude toward Ireland; that it "was firmly resolved to give a measure of atonement and deliverance to Ireland as a nation, not because they are Liberals, but because we are Liberals."

The Irish Funds.

PARIS, Dec. 24.—It is understood that at the coming conference between the Irish Nationalists here the question will arise of the disposition of the funds now locked up from the uses of the National League, and an effort will be made to arrive at common ground as to the disposition of the money.

O'Brien to Edit the New Paper.

DUBLIN Dec. 24.—At a meeting of the National Committee, the chairman, Mr. W. M. Murphy, of St. Patrick's, said that Mr. Parnell had disregarded Ireland's voice, and must be stopped in his mad career. The committee will start a new daily newspaper, with Mr. O'Brien as editor.

LIFE AND DEATH STRUGGLE.

A Rejected Suitor Forced to Follow a Girl He Threw in a Stream.

WATERTOWN, N.Y., Dec. 24.—Z. B. Marrian, a carpenter, attempted to murder Miss Josephine Demarsh in this city last night. Marrian, who is a widower with six children, had been paying attention to Miss Demarsh for a year or more, but of late she had treated him coldly.

Last night he bought a revolver and followed her toward her home, overtaking her on a bridge crossing the Black River, in the outskirts of the town. He renewed his suit, only to be again rejected. He seized the girl and attempted to throw her into the stream. She clung to his clothing, and in the life and death struggle that ensued Marrian was dragged with his intended victim into the water.

The screams of the woman brought help, and both were rescued as they were about to be swept over a high dam.

The girl, though very low, will recover. Marrian was arrested.

WRECKERS ON TRIAL.

John Reed, the K. of L. Striker, Before a Court in Troy.

TROY, N. Y., Dec. 24.—The trial of John Reed, one of the Knights of Labor who confessed to wrecking trains on the Central & Hudson Railroad last September during the strike, has begun in the Court of Sessions.

He is jointly indicted with Thomas Cain and Arthur Buett on a charge of misplacing the "cabbage switch south of Greenbush, on the night that the Montreal sleeper was wrecked. The men will be tried separately.

Every man belonging to a labor organization is challenged by the people, while the defence will accept no one connected with railroad corporations.

MRS. BIRCHALL WILL WED.

And the Other Contracting Party Will be Her Late Husband's Chum.

LONDON, Dec. 24.—It is stated on the highest authority that Mrs. Birchall is engaged to be married to Arthur Leetham, of Montreal, her late husband's college chum.

Inquiries at the office of Mr. Stevenson, Mrs. Birchall's father, who for many years has been connected with the London & Northwestern Railway, disclosed the fact that he had resigned from the service of the company in consequence of the disagreeable notoriety the murder trial had given him.

It is added, on the same authority, that the marriage will occur soon, and be made as private as possible.

Gen. Spinner Slowly Dying.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 24.—The Times-Democrat's Jacksonville, Fla., special says: Geneeal F. E. Spinner, ex-Treasurer of the United States, residing in this city, is comfortable, but his life is gradually ebbing away. Saturday he sustained a sinking spell and it was thought he could not rally, but he did. The cancer on his face has eaten a deep hole near the eye and nose, and the pulsation of the brain can be plainly seen through it. He is receiving every attention possible, but his case is a hopeless one.

A Rejected Lover Kills Himself.

DUNBAR, Pa., Dec. 24.—Frank Zebley, aged 22, shot himself through the heart, dying instantly, last night. He was in love, and had twice been rejected in his suit. Upon receiving the second refusal from the young woman to whom he was attentive, he drew his revolver and fired. She ran screaming from the room. For several days Zebley had not eaten, and it is supposed that his despondency had affected his mind.

Grip as Bad as Yellow Fever.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 24.—The weekly report of the city's mortality shows 238 deaths—the largest number during any one week recorded here save when yellow fever prevailed in epidemic form 12 years ago. This large death rate is due, in the opinion of prominent physicians, to the prevalence of the grip, of which there are nearly 30,000 cases under treatment here.

Tornado in Ohio.

AKRON, Ohio, Dec. 24.—A fierce tornado struck Barberton, five miles south of here, last evening. The Creedmoor Cartridge Company's new brick shop was demolished and seven men buried in the ruins. John Triplett, of Newport, aged 29, was instantly killed. Frank Stuver and Louis Cannalla, of Akron, were probably fatally crushed, and the others were badly injured.

The Argentine Plot.

BUENOS AYRES, Dec. 24.—The rumor to the effect that a plot to overthrow the government existed, and that several persons had been arrested for complicity in the conspiracy, has been confirmed. The plot, however, is not an important one, and the public is not excited.

Twelve Girls Drowned.

BERLIN, Dec. 24.—A sad occurrence is reported at Selenter Lake, in Holstein. Twelve girls were crossing the lake on the ice, when the ice suddenly gave way beneath them, and all were drowned.

MR. JUSTICE BROWN

The President Fills the Supreme Court Vacancy.

THE NOMINATION A SURPRISE.

The Guessers at the Capital Have All Been Astray.

Full Text of the Cloture Bill Offered in the Senate—Schemer Duval Was After Cabinet Officers—The House Recess—A Free Coinage Amendment—Sutherland Nominated for Surgeon-General.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—President Harrison set political prognostications all awry by the nomination of Henry Billings Brown as successor to the late Justice Miller on the Supreme Court bench.

Up to the last moment friends of Attorney-General Miller entertained strong hopes that he would be named. Admirers of Senator Spooner, too, have within the past week insisted that he could have the nomination if he would accept it.

The President, however, seems determined to make no changes in his Cabinet at present, and doubt as to Mr. Miller's confirmation by the Senate, perhaps, influenced him in passing by the Attorney-General.

[Henry Billings Brown, the new Supreme Court Justice, was born in Lee, Mass., March 2, 1836. He graduated at Yale in 1856, studied law, and after practicing a few years was appointed a United States District Attorney. In 1868 he became Circuit Judge of Wayne County, Mich., and in 1875 became United States District Judge at Detroit. He is the compiler of a volume of "Admiralty Reports" published here in 1875.]

THE CLOTURE RULE.

Full Text of the Resolution Offered by Mr. Aldrich.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—The full text of the cloture rule reported to the Senate by Mr. Aldrich is as follows:

"When any bill, resolution or other question shall have been under consideration for a reasonable time, it shall be in order for any Senator to demand that debate thereon be closed. On such demand no debate shall be in order, and pending such demand no other motion except one motion to adjourn shall be made. If such demand be seconded by a majority of the Senators present, the question shall forthwith be taken thereupon without debate. If the Senate shall decide to close debate on any bill, resolution or other question, the measure shall take precedence of all other business whatever, and the question shall be put upon the amendments, if any, then pending, and upon the measure in its successive stages according to the rules of the Senate, but without further debate, except that every Senator who may desire shall be permitted to speak upon the measure, including all amendments, not more than once, and not exceeding 30 minutes.

"After the Senate has decided to close debate as herein provided, no motion shall be in order but a motion to adjourn or to take a recess, when such motion shall be seconded by a majority of the Senate. When either of the said motions shall have been lost or failed of a second, it shall not be in order to renew the same until one Senator shall have spoken upon the pending measure or one vote upon the same shall have intervened.

"Pending procedure under the foregoing rule no proceeding in respect of a quorum shall be in order until it shall have appeared upon a division or the taking of the yea and nay vote that a quorum is not present and voting. Pending proceedings under the foregoing rule all questions of order whether upon appeal or otherwise shall be decided without debate, and no obstructive or dilatory motion or proceeding of any kind shall be in order."

Schemer Duval's Game.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—William Duval, the Baltimore man who victimized a large number of Senators, tried the same scheme upon Postmaster-General Wanamaker. He received a letter from Duval, enclosing tickets for an entertainment for his benefit, and adds: "Little John, your namesake, is getting along well. He is quite big now." The police are investigating the matter.

Senator Ingalls Prospects.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—Senator Rusk, a leading Republican of Kansas, informs the party managers here that in the Senatorial fight in his State that a Republican can easily be elected if Senator Ingalls will retire from the race. The Alliance men seem still determined to prevent his re-election.

The Little Korean Dead.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—The little son of the Korean Charge d' Affairs, Mr. Ye, is dead. This child was born in this city last October, and was the first Korean born in the United States. In honor of the city of his birth his parents named him Ye Washon, which is the Korean translation of Washington.

HIS LAST CRIMINAL CASE.

General Butler Announces in Court that He Will Retire.

BOSTON, Dec. 24.—An interesting incident in connection with the case of the United States vs. Carrie E. Johnson, was the statement of General Butler, in the course of his argument for the defence, that this was the last criminal case he would ever try.

The woman was charged with an attempt to defraud the Pension Office by swearing that Johnson, the deceased soldier, was her first husband, ignoring a marriage contracted many years ago to a man named Stevens, who is now living in Vermont and from who she had never been divorced. The defence was that, being but 14 years old at the time, the laws of Vermont rendered the marriage ceremony void.

General Butler made the closing argument for the defence, and District-Attorney Allen for the government, and both gentlemen did themselves credit by their able pleas.

It is somewhat a blow to learn that the verdict given was that the woman was guilty, and that the old hero had lost his last criminal case.

WILHELM TO VISIT FRANCE.

The German Emperor to See the Sights of Gay Paris.

PARIS, Dec. 24.—The Gaulois announces that Emperor William has decided to visit Paris. The Emperor will travel in strict incognito, and will not take up his residence at the German Embassy. Subsequently, according to the newspaper mentioned, the German Emperor will proceed to Cannes and San Remo.

It is also stated that the subject of the Emperor's contemplated visit has been discussed between Chancellor von Caprivi and M. Herbette, the French Ambassador at Berlin. The matter, it appears, was eventually referred to M. Ribot, the French Minister of Foreign Affairs, and on December 18 the French Cabinet, with M. de Freycinet presiding, fully discussed the Emperor's proposed visit.

JUMPED THE TRACK.

A Passenger Train Wrecked and Several Persons Injured.

BRADFORD, Pa., Dec. 24.—A passenger train on the Western New York & Pennsylvania Railroad jumped the track at Watsonville, 16 miles north of this city, and 21 of the 38 passengers on board were more or less injured.

The wreck was caused by spreading of the rails, two passenger cars and a baggage car toppling over an eight-foot trestle.

A relief train was sent from here, and prompt medical aid given the sufferers.

Fortunate New Yorkers.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 24.—Several residents of New York State will profit by the will of Edward H. Broadhead, the millionaire banker, which has just been filed for probate. His nephew, Jacob F. Broadhead, of Gardner, Ulster County, gets 500 shares of United States Express stock; his niece, Eugenia Turner, of Kingston, 500 shares of American Express stock; his sister, Susan Church, of New Paltz, 100 shares of Adams Express stock and 400 shares of American Express stock.

A New Formula of Smokeless Powder.

NEWPORT, R. I., Dec. 24.—A smokeless powder is being manufactured at the United States Torpedo Station. The formula is a new one by Prof. Monroe, the government chemist at the station. A number of experiments already made show that it not only smokeless, but also of a higher explosive power than the ordinary powder, 10 grains being sufficient to drive a bullet into a pine board to a depth of 20 inches, while 70 grains of service powder can make the missile penetrate but 14 inches.

Broke Up a Prize Fight.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 24.—At an early hour the police broke up a prize fight between Andy Read, a white man, and a colored man named Brooks. The mill was in progress in the Hennessey Building on Canal street. It was for $300. Much blood was found in the building. No one was arrested, for when the police had broken in the spectators of the fight were holding a meeting, two chairmen being in the act of calling the crowd to order.

Neither Contestant Got It.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—The spirited contest between Mr. Reyburn and Mr. Harmer for the vacant place on the Naval Committee of the House has resulted in both the gentlemen being disappointed Mr. Harmer was particularly anxious to be restored to his old place. The Speaker settled the matter by naming Charles W. Stone, of Pennsylvania, for the committee.

The Clark Mills Still Idle.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 24.—The Clark Thread Mills were again opened all day for the reception of all the operatives except the ten spinners who received notice of their discharge last week. None of the locked-out operatives responded. The strikers are firm in their demands and will not go back until they are granted.

May Escape the Guillotine.

PARIS, Dec. 24.—Murderer Eyraud suffering from an aggravated case of Bright's disease, and will, in all likelihood, soon be removed to the prison infirmary. He is dying by inches and will never live to be guillotined unless the execution should be ordered at once.

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 24.—To-morrow, Friday and Saturday will be observed as the Christmas holidays in the grain and provision markets here.

A Boston Schooner Wrecked.

HALIFAX, Dec. 24.—The schooner Elizabeth, from Boston for Nova Scotia, is a total wreck here. The crew was saved

STARTLING MOVEMENT ON FOOT.

Annexation to the United States the Living Issue.

A Threat that Blood Will Flow in the Spring—The Stars and Stripes Will Fly Over the Island If England Does Not Do Her Duty—Hatred of France Expressed on All Sides.

HALIFAX, N. S., Dec. 24.—Reports from Newfoundland represent the people of that island as being in a furious state of indignation over the official announcement that the modus vivendi between England and France is to be extended another year, and that meanwhile England undertakes a settlement, with or without the assent of the Newfoundland Parliament.

The Colonist denounces Lord Knutsford's dispatch as the most nambypamby State paper ever issued from the Colonial Office. The Times advocates the transfer of the colony to France. The Herald says: "We are determined that only one flag shall fly over Newfoundland, and that flag will be the Stars and Stripes if England doesn't do her duty. There is a movement on foot in connection with this matter that will startle people when Parliament meets."

Discussing the situation, the official organ of ex-Premier Sir Robert Thornton, Sir aJmes, Winter and other opposition leaders says: "We are struggling now for emancipation from the slavery under which we have groaned for half a century, and nothing can be more exasperating than Great Britain's temporizing policy. Under no modus vivendi will France retreat from the new and obnoxious pretensions which have so passionately excited the people of Newfoundland. The mere name is hateful to us, associated as it is with the most flagrant attempt which Great Britain has ever made upon the liberties of the colony. Great Britain must be answerable for the consequences of prolonging the modus vivendi.

Bloodshed May Follow.

"What can avert bloodshed next spring, now that this attempt is made to prolong the period of our slavery? Where shall we find the man who will preach peace and forbearance to his fellow countrymen? The new fangled claims of France are set up merely to be compromised at the expense of Newfoundland. It smites us with shame, even here in the colonies, to hear a British Minister proclaim that the imperial government will permit France to enforce upon British subjects an interpretation of treaty rights which is at direct variance with that held by Great Britain. If peace has been preserved between the two nations, it has been at the expense of the honor of Great Britain, but the people of Newfoundland will find a way of settling these matters after her own wishes."

TARIFF REFORMERS MEET.

Big Gathering of Prominent Democrats at a New York Banquet.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—The Tariff Reform Club held a banquet last night at the Madison Square Garden to celebrate the recent Democratic victories, which the club views as a vindication of its principles.

Covers were laid for 500 persons, and the galleries were well filled by an audience of which the ladies formed a prominent part. The decorations were very elaborate and beautiful.

Among those seated at the tables were ex-President Cleveland, John G. Garlisle, Everett P Wheeler, who presided; Horace Boies, of Iowa; Gov.-elect Russell, of Massachusetts; E. Ellery Anderson, Congressman Wilson, of West Virginia; Hon. Carl Schurz, W. U. Hensel, of Pennsylvania; T. L. Johnson, of Ohio; Luzon B. Morris, of Connecticut; H. Villard, D. S. Lamont, Senator Brice, W. L. Trenholm and ex-Gov. Hoadley, of Ohio.

At 8:30 Mrs. Cleveland and party entered one of the boxes. Her appearance was greeted with cheers, to which the lady bowed her acknowledgements.

Ex-President Cleveland replied to the toast, "The Campaign of Education," and after the applause had subsided Hon. John G. Carlisle, of Kentucky, spoke on "Popular Government." He was followed by Congressman Wilson, of West Virginia, and W. U. Hensel, of Pennsylvania. Gov. Hill was not present.

Mr. Cleveland was presented with a cup bearing a representation of Jefferson's mill and residence.

Roger Q. Mills, who was to speak to the toast "Reciprocity," sent his regrets, he being unable to attend.

It was after 2 o'clock this morning when the last speaker finished.

Four Workmen Badly Hurt.

SALAMANCA, N. Y., Dec. 24.—While workmen were raising up a heavy tress at the round house here it overbalanced and fell, carrying the scaffolding with it. Four workmen were badly hurt. Albert Lent, of Salamanca, had his right leg crushed above the knee, causing the bone to protrude through the flesh. George Light, also of this place, was hurt about the back and hips. James Welch, of Buffalo, was cut and bruised seriously, and Thomas Clancy, of Buffalo, was injured internally. Lent will have his leg amputated at the hip, and his injuries are so severe that he is not expected to recover.

Levis & Co. in Difficulties.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 24.—The firm of Samuel G. Levis & Co., cotton and woollen manufacturers of Darby Creek, near Clifton Heights, are in financial difficulties. The mills are known as the Glenwood Mills, and were started in 1862. They have about 5,000 spindles and give employment to 2,000 hands.

SAYS SHE IS HIS WIFE.

A Doctor's Housekeeper Springs a Surprise When Arrested for Larceny.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 24.—Miss Kate Makepeace, housekeeper for Dr. John Montgomery, proprietor of a North Ninth street herb store, and Miss Lizzie Anderson were before Magistrate Pole charged with robbing the doctor's safe of $2,095 in cash and hiding a large portion of it in Lizzie's pin cushion. The charge is based upon a confession after arrest of Miss Anderson, who said that Miss Makepeace took her duplicate key of the safe, opened it and extracted the money.

When confronted with the charge in court Miss Makepeace said she was Dr. Montgomery's wife, having lived with him as such for 14 years, and been so introduced by him thousands of times. As such she could not be held under her husband's charge of crime. Moreover, she said that Miss Anderson was entirely innocent of abstracting the money.

The magistrate will let a higher court decide whether a marriage certificate is really necessary to quash this prosecution or not.

Why Not a Princeton Club!

Since the members of the Plainfield Yale Club always have a splendid time at their annual dinners, and since there are more Princeton men here than there are Yale, it seems somewhat strange that the Jersey alumni don't "get together" in a similar way and perpetuate their love for their alma mater.

THE ROMANCE AND THE FACT.

What Did and What Did Not Happen to a Plainfield "Artist."

The arrest of George W. Bilyeu at the North avenue railway station, last evening, furnished the New York World with opportunity for the following lurid story:

STRUGGLED HARD TO DIE.

A MAD ARTIST THROWS HIMSELF BEFORE A COMING TRAIN.

HE FOUGHT AND CLUNG TO THE RAILS, DETERMINED TO END HIS LIFE.

A THRILLING SCENE AT A RAILWAY STATION AT PLAINFIELD—A CROWD OF PEOPLE WITNESS A STRUGGLE WITH A WOULD-BE SUICIDE—FOUR MEN DRAG HIM TO A POINT OF SAFETY AND BIND HIM.

PLAINFIELD, Dec. 23.—Great excitement was caused at the North avenue station of the Jersey Central Railway this evening by the attempted suicide of George W. Bilyeu, an artist of local reputation. The young man has met with much discouragement, and for some time has spent days and nights brooding over financial troubles. Of late from morbidly watching the holiday gayety all about him he has been especially despondent, and to-night in a fit of madness he rushed from his studio crying.

"I must die! I must die!"

The platforms of the North avenue station were crowded with people waiting for the train when he dashed up the steps of the railway embankment and threw himself prostrate on the tracks, moaning and twisting his fingers in his long locks till the hair came out by the roots. For an instant the people thought the antics those of a man intoxicated and smiled pityingly, but next moment they were spellbound with horror, for one of the lightning express trains of the blue imperial Washington service was rushing towards the station threatening a frightful death for the man on the track.

Seconds that seemed interminable passed before any one moved. Baggagemaster Garretson and Express Agent Staats, together with one of Bilyeu' brothers, who had followed him from his home, sprang forward and sought to drag the artist from the fast approaching train. At first Bilyeu clung firmly to the rails and pleaded to be allowed to die. Then his hold was released and he fought desperately with hands, feet and teeth.

The crowd witnessing the terrific life and death struggle groaned in an agony of suspense. Children screamed and women fainted at the sight, for it seemed as if all four men must surely be ground to pieces by the relentless wheels of the oncoming train.

The madman was sufficiently the master of the others to keep them within the danger point, and was chuckling and gloating horribly over the thought that they would all perish together, when Policeman McCue came to the rescue. The four men succeeded in tearing Bilyeu from the track just as the train, its engineer applying the brakes, shot swiftly by.

Before the insane artist could be securely manacled he made an unsuccessful effort to break loose an hurl himself before a train on another track, but he was as quickly as possible bound hand and foot and taken to the police station. He will be sent to an asylum to-morrow.

The fact of the matter is that Bilyeu was under the influence of liquor, and that policemen McCue after vainly endeavoring to get him to go home was obliged to place him under arrest. Then the prisoner tried to throw himself under the wheels of a moving train, but with the assistance of one or two other men, and by the use of hand-cuffs, McCue was able to handle him, and soon had him in the lock-up. This morning Judge Codington imposed on Bilyeu a fine of $5, which was paid, and gave him some good advice. This was the young man's first offense, he has promised his family, who are greatly distressed over the affair, that it shall be his last.

"'E Broak a Man's Jaw."

The English stable man who had his colored fellow-workman arrested for "choaking 'im so that 'e could 'ardly get his wind again" was very vituperative against the prisoner in court this morning, and as Judge Codington could not find out who had been most to blame in the quarrel he dismissed them both with a warning to behave themselves in the future. The Englishman said that the colored man would just as lief kill a man as look at him, and threw out mysterious hints about the darkey's misbehavior in Hartford; and the colored man laughed sardonically. "Hi wants to keep haway from 'im"—he said.—"Hi'm afraid hof my life. 'E broak a man's jaw down in 'Artford, and his proud hof it."

Chance for a Speculation.

Now don't all run at once for your wallets and check books! It isn't corner lots in Chicago, Minneapolis, Kansas City, or the "Future Great." It isn't options on wheat, corn, pork or lard, nor "puts" or "calls" on Northwestern's or Southwestern's, nor yet is it gas, oil, telegraph or telephone stock. It is better than any or all of these. It is a deposit in the Bank of Health, which every one can make by the purchase and use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets in all cases of chronic biliousness, dyspepsia, headache, "liver complaint," and the like. Sold the world over.

ALMA MATER FLOREAT.

A Royal Good Time at the Yale Club Banquet—An Excellent Dinner, and Very Happy Toasts.

The third annual dinner of the Plainfield Yale Club last night was a merry affair. Covers were laid in the Bicycle Club House for twenty-two, and an excellent dinner was served by Caterer Stephenson of North avenue. The men sat down at eight o'clock, and after the feasting and speeches were over, at 11:30, they drew their chairs up to the great log fire roaring in the open fire-place, and passed another delightful hour singing college songs and relating reminiscences. The members of the Club present were J. Evarts Tracy, '57, Samuel Huntington, '63, John M. Whiton, Samuel St. J. Mc Cutchen, '70, William R. Richards, '75, William D. Murray, '80, J. Frank Raymond, '83, James R. Joy, '85, Howard C. Tracy, '87, Louis K. Hyde, '87, Evarts Tracy, '90, Harry Opdyke, '90, Frank De L. Hyde, '91, E. Dean Ryder, '91, Howard Huntington, '92, Irving C. West, '92, Arthur Lovell, '92, Fred W. Yates, '93, Clifford W. McGee, '93, and Walter F. Murray, '94.

The menu and the list of toasts were contained in a neat little brochure bearing on its title-page an appropriate and artistic design by Evarts Tracy. The toasts were put in first-rate style by toast-master Joy, and the responses were very happy indeed.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Charles Potter, Jr., returned from a business trip to Chicago, this morning.

There will be no books circulated at the library to-morrow. The reading room and art gallery will be open at the usual hours.

The marriage of Miss Susie Gilbert, one of the Plainfield public school corps of teachers, to Mr. Taylor, a Newark teacher, took place to-day. They will make their home in the latter city.

Captain Coombs has just purchased through the real estate agency of E. C. Mulford, the house that he has been living in on Westervelt avenue, formerly Bay street, this city. The former owner was Edwin Loomis.

Henry E. Bowen, of Belvidere avenue, arrived home to-day after a 6,000-mile trip through the West. He was gone fifty-six days and visited sixty cities. Everytime he entered a Western city half the size of Plainfield, and found it provided with electric street cars, water works and sewerage, he felt ashamed of his own home. He has hopes in the next Council, however, although Ivins was defeated.

Thanks for Their Light.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—The Woman's Christian Temperance Union take great pleasure in thus publicly thanking Mr. Moore of the Electric Light Company, for so generously donating the electric light used at the Bazar on the evenings of Dec. 9, 10 and 11. For all such favors we are very thankful.

Fie, Sonny: For Shame!

A horrid young man says that his sisters are so numerous and so tall that when jolly old Santa Claus comes to see the length and the variety of their new imported stockings he very much fears that he will accuse good-natured Chief Thad Doane of putting up a job on him by loaning out the hose of the fire department.

A Gate Post for a Bee Hive.

One of the big gate posts at the entrance to James Martine's place on Broadway, blew down last night, and this morning fifty pounds of luscious honey, deposited there last Summer by industrious bees, were extracted.

—Christmas gifts seem to abound on every side, but is not there some Christmasless home you can make bright and cheery by a little expenditure?

Who not, when you have a cold, take a remedy that you can depend upon to cure you? Hires' Cough Cure is a remedy above all others. It has cured a larger percentage of cases, where it has been tried, than any other cough preparation made. Do not forget it.

How the Crescent League Bowlers Compare With the Champion Amateurs.

The only two match games yet rolled this season by the bowling team of the Plainfield Crescent League, have both been against the Elizabeths, and both were victories by scores of 1,563 and 1,650—an average of 1,606. This, as will be seen by the following scores already made in the Amateur Bowling Association, is way above all the crack teams except the Elizabeths, who beat it but a point. These are the championship scores of this season:

Oritani — 1,529; 1,510; 1,545; 1,505. Average—1,522.

Staten Island — 1,466; 1,479; 1,475. Average—1,473.

Palma — 1,598; 1,491; 1,579; 1,621. Average—1,572.

Jersey City—1,578; 1,533; 1,525; 1,527. Average—1,541.

New Jersey—1,586; 1,366; 1,388; 1,276 Average—1,404.

Riverside—1,572; 1,408; 1,596; 1,470. Average—1,511.

Elizabeth—1,658; 1,617; 1,632; 1,559; 1,573. Average—1,707.

How Elizabeth Saw the Game.

(From the Elizabeth Journal.)

Those men from Plainfield are bowlers without a doubt. For a club to put up a total of 1,650 is an evidence that they have bowled before. When the second team of the Elizabeth Athletic Club went up to Plainfield and were beaten last week, it was, after the game, thought an easy matter for the Elizabeth men to do up the Plainfields at this place. There was quite an aggregation of onlookers from both of the contesting clubs present at the E. A. C. Monday evening. The Plainfield men especially made the air hideous with their shouting. On the first frame the men from up the road took the lead and held it during the entire contest. On the last frame Elizabeth made a strong spurt, putting up 184, but Plainfield had attained such a lead in the early part of the game that they had a good hold on the game. Dilts rolled a total of 211, having but one break. His man Price, of the E. A. C., was highest on his own side, he rolling 185.

Bogus Candidates for Marriage.

The Elizabeth Journal utters a note of warning to the clergy, and cautions them to look out for bogus candidates for marriage. It says: Beware of a couple who may come to you pretending a desire to be united in holy matrimony. They go through the ceremony; tender the officiating minister a $20 bill; ask for $10 or $15 back in change, and disappear. Meanwhile the bill turns out to be bogus, and the unhappy cleric is out the amount of change he supplied to the bogus recipients of matrimony.

"Such a couple has worked Union county outside of Elizabeth with magnificent success, having taken in no less than 49 members of the clerical profession. At last accounts they were on the lookout for the fittieth, with every prospect of success."

New Officers of Anchor Lodge.

At the annual communication of Anchor Lodge, F. and A. M., of this city, held last evening, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Worshipful Master—P. M. Frank O. Herring, District Deputy of the Grand Lodge of New Jersey.

Senior Warden—Henry H. Lowrie.

Junior Warden—Thomas C. Pollock.

Treasurer—James E. Turrill.

Secretary—James A. Demarest.

Trustees—William A. Freeman, Orville T. Waring, Benjamin O. Bowers.

Representatives to the Masonic Association—William A. Freeman, Orville T. Waring, James E. Turrill.

Proxy to Grand Lodge—William R. Cock.

Entertaining the Boys.

The entertainment given the members of the Boys' Club Monday evening was a decided success. There were present about one hundred and thirty boys and forty visitors. Following is the programme:

Remarks	By the Superintendent.
Male Quartette	Colored Boys.
Recitation	Mr. Saltonstall.
Remarks	Mr. Wm. Wadsworth.
Male Quartette	Colored Boys.
Tricks	Elwin Miner.
Recitation	Mr. Saltonstall.
"The Little New Year"	Miss Patton.

Resigned to His Fate.

James Emmons was arrested for intoxication last night. This morning he pleaded not guilty, and asked for a lawyer. The policemen who arrested him were home asleeep, and could not be disturbed, so trial of the case was set down for Friday morning. "I'll go back to my cell"—said Emmons, in a deep bass voice full of dramatic melancholy, and a big tear rolled down his face, and his mustache quivered—"I'll go back to my cell, and spend my Christmas in jail."

A New Central Station.

The first floor of the Chotola building on North avenue opposite the station, has been leased for a term of five years by the N. Y. & N. J., Telephone company, to be used as a central station for Plainfield. This will bring the company's office down out of the sky at the corner of Front street and Park avenue, to a where the people can get at it. The multitude of wires will be run in the new station underground.

—"A girl comes here for cigarettes every other day," says a local dealer; "and I know she smokes them herself".

Oh! ye who teach the ingenious youth of our great nation, let them learn the noble art of self-defense, as Salvation Oil is the specific for hurts.

A Plainfield Orator.

From the Fort Wayne, Indiana, Sentinel of December 15th, is clipped the following notice of a well-known and highly respected citizen of Plainfield:

"Mr. S. A. Haines, the chaplain of the National Commerical Travelers' Protective Association, delivered addresses at the Y. M. C. A. rooms Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon, and also spoke at the Second Presbyterian church yesterday morning and last evening to large audiences. Mr. Haines is a commercial traveler, and for years has been selling goods for his firm, the S. A. Haines Company, but finds time in his busy, active life to always speak at some place on Sunday in the interest of religion and temperance, to both of which he is devotedly wedded and for which he is speaking telling blows. He is an earnest, forcible and interesting speaker and his audiences in this city were charmed with his grand eloquence and his able and convincing way of telling truths in support of the causes which he loves to champion. His speeches are replete with incidents taken from real life and his admirable way of telling them, with his eloquent manner of arguing the questions that he presents for consideration, keeps his audiences interested at all times.

His address Sunday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. was on "Five Words Ending with ty." It was to young men and treated of the elements of character that they should possess in order to make life a success. First of all, he said they should have ability. They should enter a calling in life for which they are fitted and for which they have the necessary qualifications. Men often make a failure because they have chosen the wrong calling. Find out what business, trade, profession, or calling in this world you are intended for and then give all your energies to making yourself a success in it. Don't put a square auger in a round hole, he said, or a round auger in a square hole. If you do you will be sure to make a failure. Add to ability for your chosen calling integrity, fidelity, sobriety and Christianity, and God will crown your efforts with success. He spoke of each of these at length, and closed with an appeal to the young men to lead honest, sober, virtuous, Christian lives.

In the evening at the Second Presbyterian church his address was upon the subject: "The Home Against the Saloons." It was a magnificent temperance speech—one of the best ever delivered in this city. The home, he said, is building up honesty, virtue, morality and everything that is true, noble and grand in life, and the saloon is doing everything in its power to tear them down. The saloon costs the people of the U. S. $1,000,000,000 every year and sends a hundred thousand lives to untimely graves, and yet the Government and the Christian people of this country not only protect it, but by their actions encourage it in its nefarious business. He drew vivid pictures taken from his own personal knowledge, of three homes which the saloons had ruined—homes which had been bright and happy before, but which after the fell destroyer had laid its hand on them became homes of sorrow, of shame, of death—and said the instances were but types of thousands of other homes in which the saloon had done the same work. The saloon, Mr. Haines believed, was the greatest foe that America had. A hundred years ago, he said, our country had arisen in its grandeur and thrown off the yoke of England's tyranny; a quarter of a century ago it had broken the shackles of slavery; to-day it was fawning at the feet of a foe that was doing our people more injury than either of these, and yet Christian men fold their arms and allow the saloon to carry on its work of destruction and death. He pleaded for an awakening of the Christians of this country upon this great question and urged them by their influence, their acts, their votes, to rise up and crush this giant evil.

Mr. Haines is to speak in Reform Hall next Sunday evening on "Tears: or, Stop Crying!" This occasion will doubtless be worthy of a crowded house.

Vagrant Postal Packages.

The confidence that is displayed these days, either in the protective potency of the postage stamp or in the integrity of the American people, is touching. One scarcely sees a mail box, in this time of holiday gifts, that is not piled on the top with packages of all kinds, from the obvious newspaper to the mysterious Christmas bundle, waiting for the postman to come and collect them. The display of confidence comes from the fact that there is absolutely no protection in the postal laws of the United States for packages or mail matter of any kind, deposited outside the proper receptacle. Doubtless there is more of ignorance in many cases than there is confidence. Many persons labor under the impression that a package decorated with a postage stamp is put at once under the protection of the Government. This is not true, not even true of a letter. No postal matter is under Government protection until it has been put into—not on—the box provided by the postal service. Matter deposited anywhere else is virtually abandoned, and as far as certainty of safety goes might as well be left on the doorstep or the curbstone. Owing either to the ignorance of people of their rights to carry off such parcels, or to native honesty, this vagrant and unprotected mail matter usually does reach its destination, but it is altogether a matter of good fortune, if it does.

Little Annie yesterday told us in her way what a good medicine Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is; it had cured her of a very severe cold.

A Word for the Clerks.

It is no new thing to speak favorably of those men of enterprise and local patriotism who establish places of business here, and who work up a good trade by keeping a large stock of goods and selling at fair prices. But as a rule the great body of clerks are overlooked. Yet they are, at this season of the year, worthy of having a good word said in their behalf. In the first place not a few of them have exhibited rare taste, ingenuity and invention. The decorated windows all along the business streets of Plainfield are not a mere jumble of Christmas goods, indiscriminately thrown together. They are arranged with a definite purpose, one article bringing others into notice, and the whole window bearing evidence of brain-work, skill, and a high order of taste. In this work the clerks have contributed in no small degree to the pleasure and convenience of the people.

But the work that they have done and are still doing entitles them to a kind thought and to a fair share of holiday appreciation. Early and late they address themselves to the wants of customers, always obliging, always courteous, answering innumerable questions not all of which are sensible or seasonable, packing and unpacking, doing everything at once only to do it over again, yet all the while as affable as the season itself and much more so than many of the shoppers. At this season of the year they are a hard worked class of very good people, and they are at least entitled to a kind thought and a word of encouragement

What Others Think of Her.

Selections from varied papers are as follows concerning the star that is to blaze on Music Hall stage, to-morrow afternoon and evening:

Miss Alberta Gallatin as "Julia" was charming, and looked and acted the part to the complete satisfaction of her audience.—Boston Herald.

Miss Gallatin clothes the character (Rosalind) in a garb at once aristic and full of grace, and in this resembles much the presentation made by Modjeska. Miss Gallatin's conception is purely her own and she has every reason to be proud of it.—Landmark, Norfolk, Va.

Miss Alberta Gallatin is by all odds the best performer in her line in the country. She put an admirable amount of bright airiness into her part, and was graceful and fascinating.—Boston Advertiser.

Ontario Center, N. Y.
May 7, 1890.
F.E.C. Medicine Co., Rochester, N.Y.:
For seven or eight years my wife has been troubled with some kind of kidney trouble. She tried many different remedies but all in vain. She continued to grow worse. Last fall I induced her to try the F. E. C. Remedy, and before using one bottle she began to improve, and now, after using six bottles, she is entirely cured. I have recommended it to many and it has benefitted in every case heard from.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS!

And the Place to Buy Them.

"'Tis without an equal in Plainfield," is said of our display of Christmas Goods, and 'tis true; as we have spared neither pains nor expense to bring together a line of goods that would suit almost everyone in quality and price.

Dolls, we have enough to supply every child in Plainfield; too many of them we think, but they must be sold this week, so we are cutting prices.

We call special attention to our line of Iron Toys. They are the best kind to buy, as they are the kind that never break; there are fire engines, hook and ladder trucks, hose and cart, locomotives, cars, etc.

How about an Umbrella for some one? We have them from $1 to $3.25.

There came in this morning about 500 Plush Boxes; ought to have been here two weeks ago, but were delayed on the road. Handsome goods they are, consisting of glove and handkerchief boxes, jewel cases, writing desks, &c. You can buy them just 25 per cent. less than they are worth.

There is an endless assortment of cups and saucers, fancy plates, brass goods, photo albums, work baskets, scrap baskets, pictures, etc.

And then you will want Christmas cards. Ours are bought direct from the manufacturers, and we save you money on them. Prices 5, 10, 15 and 20c.

Lamps make a useful present; we have them in all kinds and styles. Hall lamps, $1.75; handsome parlor lamp, $2.50; piano lamps, $8 75 for a beauty.

Come in this week, select what you wish, and we will deliver when wanted.

Reduction in Prices for Cash!

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

AFTER DECEMBER 15, 1890,

The Plainfield Produce Company

Will Sell All Goods Strictly for Cash!

We will present a few reasons for making this change in our manner of doing business. In the first place we have our Hay, Grain and Produce inspected and bought direct from the Producer for Cash. Thereby obtaining better quality, also saving one profit, which would go to the commission merchant if bought from sample the usual way.

In the second place any concern doing an extensive credit business must get larger profits to offset slow and worthless accounts, of which with the greatest care there will be some. And the customer who is ready to pay and does pay his bills when presented, is the one who must pay these larger profits.

By selling for cash we avoid losses from such accounts, and can afford to sell for smaller profits.

We ask for a share of your patronage. Give us a call and we will show you how low we can sell for CASH, instead of how high we must sell for credit.

FADS OF ONE WOMAN.

With a Goblet of Water She Gets Nerve Control.

She Practices Laughing and Says Like a Hound to Strengthen Her Diaphragm—Her Clubs and Classes and Hypnotized Husband—Nursery Parties.

[COPYRIGHT, 1890.]

The dear, delightful, inconsequent little woman! I never tap at her door without expecting behind those pale blue curtains to stumble on some odd surprise. This morning her "Come in," had a preoccupied sound. She did not turn her head as, with one eye out for cushion pitfalls, I steered my way among screens and "occasional" tables and ottomans to a couch so cushion-covered that one seated one's self in an absurd, nervous fear of disturbing a nest of kittens.

In front of a great mirror oddly tied up with ribbon bows on the protuberances of its gilt frame, she was poised like a flying mercury, on tiptoe, one arm and one foot in air. I watched till my head grew giddy her goblet of water flash in the sunlight, as it went round and round. It was a fragile toy, thin as a soap bubble film. She filled it to the brim from a pitcher; then she grasped it by the stem, held it at arm's length, and swaying on tiptoe, precariously balanced, she moved it slowly through circles that grew smaller and smaller and then almost imperceptibly began to expand. Now the glass was hovering about a point, and now in its deliberate sweep it would take in the room.

The eye followed with a fascinated curiosity. Her gaze never left the trembling water. A drop must fall, but when and where? She was a picture of strained attention.

A yellowish white terrier rose from his padded basket, stretched himself and yawned.

Glass, water and poised figure plunged forward on an ottoman.

"Fido, be still! Your cold is so bad you must not stir."

Fido lifted a wet paw and shook it as a cat might, daintily.

"Do you know, dear" (this in my direction), "I'm concentrating my mind."

"On—?"

"Fido. Yesterday I opened a window after Mr.—— had gone; he's that dear delightful man, you know, who spends all his time working in the slums. I promised him $25 for his poor children's Christmas tree, but I do hope he will send after it and not come, for I feel obliged to air the house out after him—there is no knowing, passing his life in such places, what diseases he might bring. Now, you may not believe it, but I positively went out and left Fido in the cold room. The poor child was ill all night; but he seems a little better this morning."

GETTING NERVE CONTROL.

"And you are—?"

"Getting mental balance.—Did mamma splash oo?" This to Fido. "Come and let her hold oor itty paws up to the fire.—They say you do it through the eyes. I mean to practice an hour and a half a day—There, baby, mamma didn't mean it—You fix your whole mind on the glass and the water; you say to yourself: 'Now I will not spill it,' and the first thing you know you have nerve control. It's awfully interesting, the nicest thing I've struck since Delsartism.

"Come, you shall see me do it again, or shall I go through my throat exercises?

"Fidele, Fidele, where are you, Fidele? Fido hasn't had his drops this morning.

"Fidele is my new maid and I've named her after Fido. When I went to Saratoga this summer I took them both along in good style. The hotel people wouldn't admit Fido, so I had to board him, with Fidele to take care of him, outside. Of course when I wanted her to do my hair or lace my frock she was never around. 'Why don't you come,' I asked her, 'when I send for you?' 'How can I leave Fido, ma'am?' she answered; 'if he's by himself a minute he's sure to cry.' A person so devoted is a great treasure.

"About those throat exercises. You know the ——'s parlors where we are to have our private theatricals at Christmas are rather large, and so—

"Oh, the throat exercise is for strengthening the tone, and then, do you know, I'm practicing laughing.

"Don't you think you can always tell a good deal about a woman by the way she laughs? I never could bear that dreadful Mrs. A——, the one who wears the red bird in her bonnet, and until lately I never knew why, but it is because she laughs in an I; people who do that are sure to tell tales about you as soon as your back's turned. Then there's that big Mrs. B——they wanted us to have for president of the Woman's Rudyard Kipling Society; she laughs in O, and I'd wager any thing she'd always insist on having her own way.

"Now, I never understood about these things until I joined Mr. Sellrus' class. Wasn't it funny? There was one man at the first lecture. He looked as out of place as could be. Of course we spoke to Mr. Sellrus about it, and he smoothed it over to the poor forlorn fellow as nicely as possible, but told him he had better stay away.

"Mr. Sellrus is teaching us to laugh in a Latin A. That means you have a lovable character. How do I get it? 'A, A, A!' No, that was a little too loud; more like this: 'A, A, A!' I try it in front the glass as not to spoil it with the eyebrows and mouth lines, every time I am alone. It's positively a duty, you know, to study one's best points so as to appear to advantage in society."

You see the little woman hasn't a mission of any kind. She has plenty of money, plenty of energy and nothing to do, and she devotes herself to doing it as busily as possible. She belongs to nineteen societies for the promotion or suppression of different things, and eight or nine classes for the acquisition of ornamental knowledge. "Don't you find it inconvenient," somebody asked her husband, who grubs with might and main in Wall street, "to have your wife so active?"

"It's all one," he answered, "whether she joins a new club or gives an extra hour to her manicure."

Her heart is as open as the daylight to melting sympathy, and she has spent the last week buying a doll for one of the great Christmas trees for the children of the poor and discussing with the most fashionable man milliner in the city the design of its gown. Yesterday the doll came home in a hansom cab trailing magnificence to the extent of $150, and ready to flaunt its glories in the face of the wolf down in Cherry street, when the fire burns low and the beast growls. But the little woman is as innocent of mockery as the morning, or as the baby locks that wave above her brow. They are baby locks in good earnest, for the hair dresser cut them from the head of the little woman's child.

"I don't approve of false hair," she tells me confidentially, "but the case is different when it is your own little Ethel's curls; besides, I never could find any other bangs that didn't need doing over constantly."

"This," said the little woman to a group of intimates one morning a week ago, "is Ethel's birthday; shall we visit her in the nursery?"

In that apartment was something soft and pink lying on a rug in a patch of sunshine. It was two-year-old Ethel clad only in her babyhood and her curls, kicking with her bare fat toes in evident distrust of Fido.

"There, be good children," cried the little woman, lifting both dog and baby. "The Brightlights, of West Fiftieth street, told me about this; they say it's the famous Dr. Krankson's latest discovery. Clothes cramp a child's movements, they hinder the development of the muscles and are enfeebling. Now, it's my highest ambition to have Ethel grow up with a perfectly natural body, like, you know, the Greek maidens; so after she's bathed she's put down on the floor like this, and nurse has orders not to dress her till she goes out for her ride after luncheon. Ever so many people are following the Brightlights' example."

It seems rather cold weather for experimenting on Ethel, but where a new theory is concerned the little woman knows no hesitation. I've seen her leave guests in her parlor and sit down in her own room and wrap herself in calm, when somebody said there was a flurry in Wall street, believing she was soothing and cheering by hypnotization that husband of hers in the arena of bulls and bears.

WITH SHOE HORN AND SWEET OIL.

She's an interesting little woman, and the civilization which is responsible for her pets her and is puzzled by her.

ELIZA PUTNAM HEATON.

THE GOOD IT WOULD DO.

Enough Money Spent for Drink to Extinguish Poverty and Crime.

There are in New York and Brooklyn fourteen thousand licensed liquor saloons, usually situated upon street corners, so that the average frontage of each must be at least twenty-five feet. If these saloons were extended in a straight line side by side and touching each other, there would be a row of groggeries extending three hundred and fifty thousand feet, or a trifle more than sixty-six and one-quarter miles in length. This is just about two-thirds the distance between New York and Philadelphia. On an average it is estimated that fifteen dollars per day, five thousand five hundred dollars a year, is spent in liquor in each; a less amount and they would fail. Multiply this by fourteen thousand, and we have an expenditure of seventy-six millions and six hundred and fifty thousands of dollars every year and for strong drink alone in the metropolis and its suburbs. This gives an average of twenty-five dollars for every man, woman and child within the specified area. Let us suppose this seventy-six million six hundred and fifty thousand dollars applied to the rent, food, fuel and clothing of the class from which it is chiefly drawn. What would that mean? It would mean the abolition of dire poverty. It would mean the wholesome apartments, nourishing food, and decent clothing. Properly speaking it would mean the extinction of mendicancy and pauperism. It would also mean the rearing of children in decency, so that the next generation would be far above the present. It would mean the beginning of a new era. Widening our observation from the metropolis to the entire country, we find that two hundred thousand saloons withdraw four hundred thousand men from productive industries, and absorb outright one hundred million dollars. These stupendous facts tell their own story and draw their own moral. Let us suppose that these millions of dollars spent for beneficence, for the building of beautiful homes, and for the endowment of schools devoted to science, art, industries, education and religion! What might not be the status of the United States could this money only be withdrawn from the endowment of paupers, lunatic asylums, hospitals, prisons and potter's fields?—N. Y. Evangelist.

HE TASTED THE WINE.

How a Childish Inquisitor Cornered His Mother.

I was visiting at one time, says a writer, a very dear friend, whose little son had not yet dropped his lisping accent. The pastor, who was a frequent visitor, was dining with us, and the little boy, a remarkably well-behaved child, was allowed to sit at the table. The flow of conversation passed without interruption, and not a word was spoken by the child, until the desert was served, with a very delicious sauce prepared after the most approved recipe, with the required proportion of wine incorporated. Then he asked: "Mamma, what ith thith thauth made of? It tathes very, very good." The mother replied: "Butter and sugar," thinking that would satisfy the young inquiring mind. He tasted again, then asked: "What elth ith it made of? I tathe thomething elth." A glance across the table from the minister, seemed to say to the mother: "You are in a corner now; I wonder how you will get out of it." She then mentioned the spices and other ingredients, still omitting wine. The child said again: "It ith very good," and continued eating. Presently he looked up, as if from a brown study and said: "Mamma, aren't you glad we are not the kind of folkth that eath whithky?"

All present yielded to unrestrained merriment, except the mother, to whom the artless question came like an accusation, and made an impression which lasted through her life-time. The resolution was formed, there and then, that her boy should never become familiar with the taste of wine or other liquors at her table, and thus fall an easy prey to temptation in after years. From that time she never allowed one drop of intoxicating liquor to enter into any part of the food of the family.

The little questioner is now a strong Temperance man, and doing good, faithful work as a missionary of the American Board in China.—Union Signal.

SPECIAL MENTION.

THE Supreme Court of Massachusetts has given an opinion that, if it can be enforced, will prevent the sale of wines and spirits in clubs located in local option towns of that State.

THE Young Men's Christian Temperance Unions have now a membership of thirty thousand, and raised and expended over thirty-five thousand dollars in their work during the past year.

WITH a delicate frame and nervous temperament, I have been enabled, by Temperance, to do the work of a strong man. But it has only been by more and more Temperance.—Richard Cobden.

THE Bible Standard and Gospel Record says: "News comes from Africa that the Arabs at Khartoum have been holding an indignation meeting, protesting against the Christian nations inundating Africa with their infernal liquor. They also resolve to sell into slavery every one found engaged in the traffic."

SINCE the establishment of the Vienna free kitchens the number of drunkards is said to have greatly diminished. The medical profession testify to enormous improvements in the health of the lower classes. Derangement of the stomach, formerly the most frequent cases in Vienna hospitals, have decreased to one-third the number of ten years ago.

WHEN will the Nation learn that every form of shame is born of the saloon, and that every degree of vice and crime is the sure result of the drinking habit. Saloons full of men mean fewer customers in the bakery and the grocery, kitchens and dining-rooms empty of food, while jails and prisons are crowded with patrons. "In at the spigot and out at the bunghole," was the old saw for wastefulness. Never more true than in the economics of license.—National Temperance Advocate.

WIT VS. ELOQUENCE.

A Bombastic Orator Knocked Out in One Round by His Opponent.

HERE is a member of the Kansas City bar who is a most excellent lawyer and genial man. One of his attributes is a voice which he can and does make a rival to thunder itself when heated in argument. Nevertheless, he is very persuasive and convincing and a dangerous opponent. The other day he was making an address to a jury. His case was fairly strong, he was himself much in earnest, and his trumpet tones made every thing ring. Finally in a perfect hurricane of sound he closed his argument and sat down. The jury looked serious and, thoughtful and were evidently very much impressed. Unless the effect of the harangue could be dispelled the other side was in danger. The lawyer opposite had a sad, watery eye and a face like a hatchet. He was a very quiet man and quite another sort of orator. He sat patiently and in silence through the thunder gusts of his friend, and after the reverberations of the closing crash had ceased he arose.

"As I listened to the rather thunderous appeals of my friend Judge Stentor," he said, addressing the jury in a drawling tone, "I recalled a fable which I heard in my youth. You will remember, gentlemen, how once the lion and the ass entered into a compact to slay the beasts of the field and divide the spoil. They divided the work; the ass was to go into the thicket and bray and frighten the animals out, while the lion was to lie in wait and kill the fugitives as fast as they appeared. Well! the ass sought the darkest part of the jungle, and lifting up his awful voice brayed and brayed and brayed. There never was heard such an infernal din. The ass was quite intoxicated with his own uproar, and thought he'd return and see what the lion thought of it. With a light heart he went back and found the lion looking doubtfully about him, pale in the face and trembling in every limb.

"'What do you think of that for braying?' said the exultant ass. 'Don't you think I'll scare 'em?'

"'Scare 'em?' repeated the lion, in an agitated tone. 'Why! you'd scare me if I didn't know you were a jackass!'"

The jury began to laugh and the effect of the judge's sonorous eloquence was visibly weakened. He lost the case.—Kansas City Star.

How He Prevented It.

You often have wondered no doubt with the rest,
When you've noticed John Chinamen dressed in his best,
What on earth of practical good he could do
With his singular, lengthy and silken-haired queue;
But look you how apt we essay to make plain
It's use as suggested by John's heathen brain.
—West Shore.

He Was Very Successful.

Ticks—You remember young Grabber, who went West a couple of years ago, don't you?

Wickles—Yes; how'd he do?

Ticks—Do? Why, simply great. He cleared five thousand dollars the first year.

Wickles—I want to know! And how did he do the second year?

Ticks—Well, the second year he cleared the country.—Boston Courier.

Why She Liked Them.

After three-year-old Frances' little guests had departed, her mamma asked:

"Frances, do you like little girls to visit you?"

"Yes'm; I like little children to come unto me, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."—Jury.

Clear Glass.

"Why does Captain Thomas wear a glass eye?" asked Johnnie.

"Ho! Don't you know?" queried Sallie, scornfully. "So's he can see through it, stupid."—Harper's Young People.

A Footstep in the Night.

The Youth (hearing a step)—Is that your father coming home?

The Maiden—I think not. I fancy it must be your mother coming after you.—N. Y. Sun.

The Dear Girls.

Ethel—How do I look in this dress?

Maud—Charming. Isn't it wonderful how much a dress can do for one?—Munsey's Weekly.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

Sleeplessness Cured. 4

I am glad to testify that I used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic with the best success for sleeplessness, and believe that it is really a great relief for suffering humanity.

E. FRANK, Pastor.
St. Severin, Keyserton P. O., Pa.

Pleased and Grateful.

New York City, May, 1890.
I express my entire satisfaction with Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son, who is now nineteen years of age, had been afflicted with epileptic fits since he was six years of age. I tried everything that money could purchase, but no permanent relief was effected, now I can cheerfully recommend, and deem it my duty to advise sufferers to at least try Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son has not had any symptoms of the disease since he used the remedy. I am therefore pleased and grateful.

Utah House, 360, 8th Av. N. LENHARD.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

SAWTELLE TO HANG

Found Guilty of Murder in the First Degree.

AN IMPRESSIVE SCENE IN COURT

The First Tuesday in January, 1892, Set for the Execution.

The Prisoner Received the Sentence in a Cool Manner—To be Confined in State Prison Until the Day Designated for His Death—His Counsel Take Three Exceptions.

DOVER, N. H., Dec. 26.—Sawtelle was found guilty of murder in the first degree, and was sentenced to be hanged on the first Tuesday in January, 1892.

Lawyer Edgerly, in his argument for the prisoner, after speaking of the importance of his case, alluded to the rules of law necessary for them to understand, and applied his explanation of the evidence.

The indictment, he said, contained two counts, one charging wilful murder of his brother in Rochester; the other that he had hired, induced or procured some party in the State of New Hampshire to go into Maine and commit the crime. Counsel claimed that the evidence failed to show conclusively that Hiram Sawtelle was in Rochester at the time the murder was committed; that his identity had not been fully established.

The Attorney-General outlined the history of the trouble between Isaac and Hiram over their father's property, claiming that Isaac found he had to get Hiram out of the way, or abandon all hope of obtaining complete possession of the property. He could have assassinated him in the city, but he could not get rid of the body, and finally decided upon this diabolical plot. He then sketched the movements of Isaac, and claimed a perfect chain of evidence against the prisoner.

Judge Doe then charged the jury. He defined the law bearing upon the case in a very clear manner. He stated that if the murder had been committed it was murder in the first degree. He was not aware of any evidence of any other murder. At his conclusion the case was given to the jury and the court room was cleared.

Rendering the Verdict.

The jury filed in 1 hour and 51 minutes after they left their seats, and the clerk called the roll. The foreman then rose, and in answer to Judge Doe's question, "Have you agreed upon a verdict?" said "We have."

"What say you, gentlemen of the jury," said Judge Doe, "as to the first count: Do you find the prisoner guilty or not guilty?"

"We find him guilty," was the answer.

"Of what degree of murder?"

"Of murder in the first degree."

The Sentence.

Attorney-General Barnard immediately moved for sentence. After a moment's consultation with Judge Bingham, Judge Doe wrote the sentence and handed it to the clerk, who then read it as follows:

"Isaac B. Sawtelle, the sentence of the law, you being found guilty of murder in the first degree, is that you be imprisoned in the State prison at Concord until the first Tuesday of January, 1892, and that you then be hanged by the neck until dead."

The scene was impressive in the extreme. The prisoner was pale, but did not make a motion, except that he respectfully turned his head toward the clerk when the sentence was read, and there was nothing else in his manner to indicate that he had just been sentenced to death.

Defendant's counsel have taken three exceptions: First, to the testimony of Marion Sawtelle; second, to the admission of the copy of Jeanette Sawtelle's telegram to Isaac; third, the testimony of a witness in regard to the amount of travel on the Marsh road. They will be raised on briefs and arguments will be given before the court, whose decision will be rendered the day appointed for the execution of the sentence.

A Life Prisoner Dead.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Dec. 26.—News has been received here of the death of Henry T. Button, the Otsego county wife murderer, who was serving a life sentence at the Auburn State prison. He dropped dead of heart failure in the prison kitchen. He was nearly 60 years old and his relatives have claimed his body for burial.

Saw His Son Drown.

CAMDEN, N. J., Dec. 26.—William W. Hewitt, the 16-year-old son of W. J. D. Hewitt, Inspector of the Nassau Gas Light Company, of Brooklyn, was drowned while skating on Evans' Pond, at Haddonfield. Mr. Hewitt, who was on a visit to his son, was nearly drowned in endeavoring to rescue him.

The Entire Plant Destroyed.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 26.—Early in the morning fire was discovered in the Varwig Manufacturing Company's establishment. The loss is estimated at $40,000, and insurance about $80,000. The entire plant was destroyed, but the building is thought to be intact.

Senator Hearst's Condition.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—Senator Hearst is better than he has been for several days. No one but his nurse is permitted in his room. He is a very sick man, but his physician feels greatly encouraged by his patient's favorable symptoms.

Coming to be Married.

A Curious Corporation Organized With a Capital of $25,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—The Bureau of American Republics has received information of the organization of a curious corporation in Brazil under the name of the "Companhia Nova Era Rural do Brazil," with a capital of $25,000,000, a large part of which has been furnished by bankers and merchants of Europe and the remainder by local investors.

The object of this corporation is to establish 20 agricultural settlements upon the public lands of Brazil, which are given free of cost by the government to aid the enterprise, to construct lines of railway for placing these settlements in communication with each other and their markets; to carry out other engineering works, mining operations and the manufacture of sugar, bricks, tiles, lime and other articles for export as well as for local consumption.

This company proposes to select 5,000 families in Europe, consisting of skilled agriculturalists and mechanics, and transport them free of cost to Brazil, where houses will be provided for their occupancy, and tools and implements for their use. These colonists will be divided into villages and scattered over the estate as the nucleus for the emigrants who are to be brought there later.

The federal and several State governments have offered a guaranty of 5 per cent. upon one-third of the capital invested in the enterprise.

STEAMER IN DISTRESS.

She Arrives in Boston With Engines Broken Down and Lifeboats Gone.

BOSTON, Dec. 26.—The steamer Liscard, of London, Captain Campbell, from New York for Lisbon with 90,000 bushels of wheat, put in here last night in distress, with engines broken down, lifeboats gone, decks swept and 21 inches of water in her hold and otherwise damaged.

The vessel sailed from New York December 15, and was 700 miles from port when she was obliged to head for Boston. The first two days out were fair, but afterward the steamer encountered a succession of heavy gales with high seas. On the 20th she lay nearly 14 hours in the trough of the sea entirely unmanageable and almost submerged. Next morning the storm abated and she was able to proceed for Boston.

The Liscard is anchored in the lower harbor, but will be docked at East Boston, when a survey will be made and the cargo probably discharged. Repairs will then be made at once.

Two Men Burned to Death.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 26.—A special from Holden, Mo., says: The house of Samuel Malone on West Fifth street was burned to the ground during the morning. As the firemen arrived on the scene one side of the house fell out, and by the light of the fire they saw Mr. Malone and John Hicks, his brother-in-law, crawling to a door in their bedroom, attempting to escape. Then the roof fell in, and the unfortunate men were hidden from sight. Their charred bodies were found in the ruins. It is believed that Malone and Hicks were drugged, the house robbed and then set on fire. An investigation is being made.

Stole 7,000 Stamped Envelopes.

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 26.—Edward E. Fay, of this city, has confessed the theft of 7,000 stamped envelopes from the United States Envelope Works here. The theft was committed two years ago, when Fay was night watchman of the building, but it was not found out at that time. Two or three days ago, Supt. Chapman, of the envelope works, found that stamped envelopes were being sold in this city at the face value of the stamps. The matter was investigated, and resulted in proving Fay to be the guilty person.

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 26.—Captain William McDonald was arrested here on a charge of forgery. He is accused of forging a will in Lancaster, England, recently, under the name of George Brooks, and through the forgery came into possession of a considerable sum of money. He afterward came to America. McDonald makes general and specific denials of the charge. He declares that he has not been in England for six years. He has been in business here several months.

MR. O'BRIEN IN PARIS

He is Warmly Received by Prominent Irishmen.

HE WILL NOT BE INTERVIEWED.

Envoy Sullivan Arrives in Queenstown and is Presented With an Address.

Parnell Says He Knew Beforehand that He Could Not Carry Kilkenny—He Denounced the Action of the Priests and Says There is Good Cause for Appeal on Account of Intimidation.

PARIS, Dec. 26.—The steamship Obdam, having on board Messrs. O'Brien and Gill, the Irish delegates, arrived at Boulogne at 11 a. m.

A tug having on board Messrs. McCarthy, Sexton and Condon, Father Humphreys and Mrs. O'Brien's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Raffalovitch, met the steamer Obdam outside the harbor, and the party welcomed Messrs. O'Brien and Gill, and took them ashore in the tug.

On the way to the pier, Mr. O'Brien entered into an animated conversation with his political friends in reference to general matters, but declined to express to the reporters his opinion of the situation. He excused himself on the plea that, before saying anything for publication, he desired to have some little time to inform himself more fully of the details that had transpired since his departure from America.

Mr. Byrne, editor of the Dublin Freeman's Journal, had an interview with Mr. O'Brien, lasting two hours. Mr. Byrne reported his position as a Parnellite, and endeavored to prepare a way for the holding of a conference of the leaders of the two sections of the Irish party in Paris.

On the arrival of Mr. William O'Brien and wife and Mr. T. P. Gill in this city, the party were driven at once to the house of M. Raffalovitch on Avenue Hoche.

PARNELL TALKS.

He Condemns the Priests for Intimidating Kilkenny Voters.

DUBLIN, Dec. 26.—Mr. Parnell, in an interview before leaving this city, said that he knew beforehand that the carrying of the Kilkenny election was almost hopeless in view of the character of the opposition that he had to meet. The conduct of the priests, he thought, was very blamable. They brought a pressure to bear without which the masses of the people would have voted differently. Had the people been allowed to exercise their own judgment without intimidation, they would have sustained Mr. Parnell. It was hardly in keeping with the functions of the priesthood to hold over their flocks threats of spiritual penalties for the exercise of individual judgment in political matters.

Mr. Parnell was asked: "What view do you hold of the prospects of the different parties?"

To this question he replied: "Should a dissolution occur soon Mr. Gladstone will have very little chance of returning to power. As to my position time is on my side. I expect on Monday to start for France to meet Mr. O'Brien. On my return from Paris I shall take a few days' rest. I intend to resume the campaign in Ireland early in the new year, opening at Limerick. From there I go to Ennis, Waterford and other centres.

Sullivan Presented With an Address.

CORK, Dec. 26.—Mr. T. D. Sullivan has arrived from America. He was presented with an address by a committee of McCarthyites, and in his reply said that when he left Ireland the party had a leader noted for his sagacity, reticence and statesmanlike qualities; he did not recognize those qualities in the Parnell of to-day. The majority of intelligent Americans were opposed to Parnell's continuance in the leadership. He hoped Mr. O'Brien would succeed in bringing about an agreement, but he firmly believed that the action taken against Mr. Parnell was the proper course to pursue, and that it should not be reversed.

Great Socialist Demonstration.

BRUSSELS, Dec. 26.—The funeral of the noted Socialist Paepe took place during the day, and was made the occasion of a great Socialist demonstration. There was an enormous concourse of people in the procession that followed the body to the grave. Five hundred Socialist associations in all parts of Belgium were represented by large deputations with bands and banners.

MUTILATED HER BODY.

A German Peasant Woman's Horrible Representation of Christ's Wounds.

BERLIN, Dec. 26.—The village of Watterhim, in Rhineland, is undergoing considerable excitement over a peculiar case of religious frenzy that occurred there yesterday.

Barbara Pfister, an unmarried woman, 23 years of age, horribly mutilated herself and then appeared before a large number of people who had assembled at her home to participate in a religious ceremony. She presented a frightful appearance, being wounded in several places and bleeding profusely. Her hands and feet and her head were gashed, and there were several wounds in the neighborhood of her heart.

Standing before the terror-stricken assembly, she exhibited her bleeding wounds, and declared that they were a wonderful example of the crucifixion of Christ. As soon as the authorities heard of it, the woman was arrested and taken to the jail, in order that the district physician might make an examination.

The wounds are in the inner and outer sides of the hands, as well as around the wrists, and there are small ones on the feet. The is a square cut on her forehead, and at the back of her head, under the hair, are several bleeding eruptions.

The woman at the time she was arrested was surrounded by more than 100 peasants, who were taking money and food to her.

The gendarmes, who were sent to take her to the jail, were obliged to force their way with drawn swords through the crowd of admiring and awe-struck spectators.

A CHILD'S SHOCKING DEATH.

Mysteriously Assaulted in the Cellar of Her Home.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Dec. 26.—The village of Richfield, Otsego County, has been thrown into a state of great excitement by the death of nine-year-old Tirez Vanneizer. She had been sent to the cellar to get some wood, and remained so long that her mother called to her. The child responded, but did not return, and after a further lapse of time Mrs. Vanneizer went to the cellar. On reaching the bottom of the stairs she was horrified to discover her daughter lying unconscious on the floor.

Picking the child up in her arms, the mother carried her upstairs and physicians were speedily summoned, but Tirez died in a few hours without regaining sufficient consciousness to disclose the cause of her death.

An examination revealed the fact that she had been assaulted. Oneonta coroners were notified, and the villagers are determined to have a thorough investigation. Two strange men who had been loitering about the village are now missing.

THE GREAT STRIKE

Business Paralyzed by Scotland's Railway Trouble.

OVER NINE THOUSAND MEN OUT.

All Idea of a Settlement Abandoned by the Companies.

The Strikers Deny Any Share in the Wrecking of Trains—Steamers and Factories Cannot Obtain Coal—The Strike Spreading—Pennsylvania Miners Make Their Demand for a New Scale of Prices.

LONDON, Dec. 26.—The Scotch railway companies have abandoned all idea of a settlement with the striking employes, and are making efforts, thus far with poor success, to obtain English workmen for their places.

The strikers deny any share in the wrecking of trains or in other outrages charged against them.

Service has been partially resumed between Glasgow and Edinburgh, and the mails are forwarded with some regularity. There is still, however, a virtual embargo on traffic, and trade and commerce are paralyzed by sea and land. The sugar refineries at Greenock are closed, while thousands of tons of refined sugar are awaiting steam transportation to England, which cannot be obtained for lack of a coal supply. The Clyde shipyards are also closed, as there is no coal for the forges and furnaces.

The strikers show no signs of weakening, although the supply of funds is not sufficient to prevent privation among them. Their application to the English unions for aid is being considered.

It is now estimated that about 9,000 men are out on strike on the various railways in Scotland. Traffic on the North British Railway has almost ceased. The company will suspend the operation of its steamers on Loch Lomond and the Clyde, in order to obtain employes to work on the railway. Two engineers, who refused to quit work, were pelted with stones by a number of strikers near Glasgow, and were seriously injured. Many minor assaults by strikers are reported.

The employes of the Caledonian Railway Company are gradually joining the strikers.

The Glasgow docks are closed.

An attempt was made last night to derail the night express between Glasgow and Kilbride, by means of a piece of railway iron attached to the track. The obstruction was discovered just in time to save the train from destruction. The company allege that the dastardly act was the work of the strikers, but the men emphatically deny that any of their number was connected with the outrage.

The Strike Spreading.

HULL, Dec. 26.—About 1,000 railway men at Hull have decided to strike for better wages and shorter and more regular hours.

Miners Make Their Demand.

ALTOONA, Pa., Dec. 26.—The miners of the Central Pennsylvania coal regions have served notice on the coal operators demanding a change in the price of mining from 50 cents gross ton to 50 cents net ton, and a new scale of working prices, which they want to go into effect on the 1st of January. If the demands are not granted the men, to the number of 15,000, will quit work on the first of the year.

MURDERED A MESSENGER.

Two Prominent Young Men Arrested for Complicity in the Crime.

BRADFORD, Pa., Dec. 26.—An express messenger named Vosburg was murdered last night during a drunken row in a house of ill-fame on Newell avenue.

Said Her Husband Was a Murderer.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Caleb Bass, a colored man, was arrested early this morning, charged with assaulting his wife. Mrs. Bass told the police that her husband was a murderer and a fugitive from justice from Sumpter, S. C., where he had shot and killed a colored man named Prince Robertson last November. Bass admitted that he killed a man, but said that a coroner's jury had exonerated him. Inspector Byrnes telegraphed to Sumpter, asking if Bass was wanted there.

Warrants Served on Railroad Officials.

I., Dec. 26.—A warrant has been served on the officials of the Old Colony and the New York, Providence & Boston Railroads for their appearance before the Supreme Court in April, to respond in a suit for $25,000, brought by the widow of Engineer George K. Burnham, who was killed in a collision near Branch avenue bridge in November, 1889. The suit is brought against the two roads jointly.

SEVERE SNOW STORMS.

Country Roads Blockaded and Business Suspended in Many Places.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—It is snowing hard here with every indication of a protracted storm. News comes from Harrisonburg, Va., that a severe snow storm set in there during the morning. The country roads are yet blocked from the snow storm of December 17 and 18, and travel is almost entirely suspended. At Staunton, Va., snow has been falling all day, and is now four inches deep. The country roads are blockaded and business partially suspended.

The Signal Office furnishes the following special bulletin:

The present storm promises the greatest amount of snow in any single storm for several years. Warnings were sent Thursday morning to railways in Pennsylvania and New York of coming heavy snows, which during to-day will extend to Southern New England. From three to seven inches of snow have fallen in the Ohio valley. The snow now extends from Indiana to Virginia.

Heavy easterly gales, with snow and low temperature, are expected from North Carolina to New England.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—The chief assistant at the Signal Service Office said:

"The storm may not be another blizzard, but I reckon it will tie up the railroads, and we shall have a gale that will shake navigation up.

"It seems to be headed straight for New York and Philadelphia, gathering force all the time as it comes nearer. There are just the right conditions of the barometer to give it free play."

First Blizzard of the Season in Kansas.

TOPEKA, Dec. 26.—The first blizzard of the season which reached here Thursday has made a change in temperature of twenty-five degrees in the last forty-eight hours. At noon snow commenced falling and at night the ground was covered to a depth of three inches with prospects of more. The snow will be of great benefit to the growing wheat crop.

SYNDICATES IN CUBA.

New York Capitalists Investing Heavily in Sugar Plantations.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—A dispatch from Havana to the Bureau of American Republics reports that a syndicate of New York capitalists has within the last few days purchased, for $600,000 in gold, the sugar plantation and factory known as San Ramon, one of the largest in Cuba, and is making arrangements to construct lines of transportation throughout the estate in order to increase the cultivation area and reduce the cost of production. The plantation already produces 50,000 bags of sugar annually, and it is the intention to produce from 90,000 to 100,000 bags next year.

The same dispatch also reports that another New York syndicate is negotiating for the estate Luisa, near the town of Sagua, and that agents of other syndicates are in the country prospecting for similar purposes.

Another dispatch reports that a syndicate of capitalists is preparing to run a line of tank steamers for the transportation of sugar between Cuban ports and those of the United States—a scheme by which the packing of sugar and molasses in hogsheads will be avoided, and the rate of transportation very much reduced.

SAWTELLE TO HANG

Found Guilty of Murder in the First Degree.

AN IMPRESSIVE SCENE IN COURT

The First Tuesday in January, 1892, Set for the Execution.

The Prisoner Received the Sentence in a Cool Manner—To be Confined in State Prison Until the Day Designated for His Death—His Counsel Take Three Exceptions.

DOVER, N. H., Dec. 26.—Sawtelle was found guilty of murder in the first degree, and was sentenced to be hanged on the first Tuesday in January, 1892.

Lawyer Edgerly, in his argument for the prisoner, after speaking of the importance of his case, alluded to the rules of law necessary for them to understand, and applied his explanation of the evidence.

The indictment, he said, contained two counts, one charging wilful murder of his brother in Rochester; the other that he had hired, induced or procured some party in the State of New Hampshire to go into Maine and commit the crime. Counsel claimed that the evidence failed to show conclusively that Hiram Sawtelle was in Rochester at the time the murder was committed; that his identity had not been fully established.

The Attorney-General outlined the history of the trouble between Isaac and Hiram over their father's property, claiming that Isaac found he had to get Hiram out of the way, or abandon all hope of obtaining complete possession of the property. He could have assassinated him in the city, but he could not get rid of the body, and finally decided upon this diabolical plot. He then sketched the movements of Isaac, and claimed a perfect chain of evidence against the prisoner.

Judge Doe then charged the jury. He defined the law bearing upon the case in a very clear manner. He stated that if the murder had been committed it was murder in the first degree. He was not aware of any evidence of any other murder. At his conclusion the case was given to the jury and the court room was cleared.

Rendering the Verdict.

The jury filed in 1 hour and 51 minutes after they left their seats, and the clerk called the roll. The foreman then rose, and in answer to Judge Doe's question, "Have you agreed upon a verdict?" said "We have."

"What say you, gentlemen of the jury," said Judge Doe, "as to the first count! Do you find the prisoner guilty or not guilty?"

"We find him guilty," was the answer.

"Of what degree of murder?"

"Of murder in the first degree."

The Sentence.

Attorney-General Barnard immediately moved for sentence. After a moment's consultation with Judge Bingham, Judge Doe wrote the sentence and handed it to the clerk, who then read it as follows:

"Isaac B. Sawtelle, the sentence of the law, you being found guilty of murder in the first degree, is that you be imprisoned in the State prison at Concord until the first Tuesday of January, 1892, and that you then be hanged by the neck until dead."

The scene was impressive in the extreme. The prisoner was pale, but did not make a motion, except that he respectfully turned his head toward the clerk when the sentence was read, and there was nothing else in his manner to indicate that he had just been sentenced to death.

Defendant's counsel have taken three exceptions: First, to the testimony of Marion Sawtelle; second, to the admission of the copy of Jeanette Sawtelle's telegram to Isaac; third, the testimony of a witness in regard to the amount of travel on the Marsh road. They will be raised on briefs and arguments will be given before the court, whose decision will be rendered the day appointed for the execution of the sentence.

BRAZIL'S LATEST SCHEME.

A Curious Corporation Organized With a Capital of $25,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—The Bureau of American Republics has received information of the organization of a curious corporation in Brazil under the name of the "Compannia Nova Era Rural do Brazil," with a capital of $25,000,000, a large part of which has been furnished by bankers and merchants of Europe and the remainder by local investors.

The object of this corporation is to establish 20 agricultural settlements upon the public lands of Brazil, which are given free of cost by the government to aid the enterprise, to construct lines of railway for placing these settlements in communication with each other and their markets; to carry out other engineering works, mining operations and the manufacture of sugar, bricks, tiles, lime and other articles for export as well as for local consumption.

This company proposes to select 5,000 families in Europe, consisting of skilled agriculturalists and mechanics, and transport them free of cost to Brazil, where houses will be provided for their occupancy, and tools and implements for their use. These colonists will be divided into villages and scattered over the estate as the nucleus for the emigrants who are to be brought there later.

The federal and several State governments have offered a guaranty of 5 per cent. upon one-third of the capital invested in the enterprise.

STEAMER IN DISTRESS.

She Arrives in Boston With Engines Broken Down and Lifeboats Gone.

BOSTON, Dec. 26.—The steamer Liscard, of London, Captain Campbell, from New York for Lisbon with 90,000 bushels of wheat, put in here last night in distress, with engines broken down, lifeboats gone, decks swept and 21 inches of water in her hold and otherwise damaged.

The vessel sailed from New York December 15, and was 700 miles from port when she was obliged to head for Boston. The first two days out were fair, but afterward the steamer encountered a succession of heavy gales with high seas. On the 20th she lay nearly 14 hours in the trough of the sea entirely unmanageable and almost submerged. Next morning the storm abated and she was able to proceed for Boston.

The Liscard is anchored in the lower harbor, but will be docked at East Boston, when a survey will be made and the cargo probably discharged. Repairs will then be made at once.

Two Men Burned to Death.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 26.—A special from Holden, Mo., says: The house of Samuel Malone on West Fifth street was burned to the ground during the morning. As the firemen arrived on the scene one side of the house fell out, and by the light of the fire they saw Mr. Malone and John Hicks, his brother-in-law, crawling to a door in their bedroom, attempting to escape. Then the roof fell in, and the unfortunate men were hidden from sight. Their charred bodies were found in the ruins. It is believed that Malone and Hicks were drugged, the house robbed and then set on fire. An investigation is being made.

MR. O'BRIEN IN PARIS

He is Warmly Received by Prominent Irishmen.

HE WILL NOT BE INTERVIEWED.

Envoy Sullivan Arrives in Queenstown and is Presented With an Address.

Parnell Says He Knew Beforehand that He Could Not Carry Kilkenny—He Denounced the Action of the Priests and Says There is Good Cause for Appeal on Account of Intimidation.

PARIS, Dec. 26.—The steamship Obdam, having on board Messrs. O'Brien and Gill, the Irish delegates, arrived at Boulogne at 11 a. m.

A tug having on board Messrs. McCarthy, Sexton and Condon, Father Humphreys and Mrs. O'Brien's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Raffalovitch, met the steamer Obdam outside the harbor, and the party welcomed Messrs. O'Brien and Gill, and took them ashore in the tug.

On the way to the pier, Mr. O'Brien entered into an animated conversation with his political friends in reference to general matters, but declined to express to the reporters his opinion of the situation. He excused himself on the plea that, before saying anything for publication, he desired to have some little time to inform himself more fully of the details that had transpired since his departure from America.

Mr. Byrne, editor of the Dublin Freeman's Journal, had an interview with Mr. O'Brien, lasting two hours. Mr. Byrne reported his position as a Parnellite, and endeavored to prepare a way for the holding of a conference of the leaders of the two sections of the Irish party in Paris.

On the arrival of Mr. William O'Brien and wife and Mr. T. P. Gill in this city, the party were driven at once to the house of M. Raffalovitch on Avenue Hoche.

PARNELL TALKS.

He Condemns the Priests for Intimidating Kilkenny Voters.

DUBLIN, Dec. 26.—Mr. Parnell, in an interview before leaving this city, said that he knew beforehand that the carrying of the Kilkenny election was almost hopeless in view of the character of the opposition that he had to meet. The conduct of the priests, he thought, was very blamable. They brought a pressure to bear without which the masses of the people would have voted differently. Had the people been allowed to exercise their own judgment without intimidation, they would have sustained Mr. Parnell. It was hardly in keeping with the functions of the priesthood to hold over their flocks threats of spiritual penalties for the exercise of individual judgment in political matters.

Mr. Parnell was asked: "What view do you hold of the prospects of the different parties?"

To this question he replied: "Should a dissolution occur soon Mr. Gladstone will have very little chance of returning to power. As to my position time is on my side. I expect on Monday to start for France to meet Mr. O'Brien. On my return from Paris I shall take a few days' rest. I intend to resume the campaign in Ireland early in the new year, opening at Limerick. From there I go to Ennis, Waterford and other centres.

Sullivan Presented With an Address.

CORK, Dec. 26.—Mr. T. D. Sullivan has arrived from America. He was presented with an address by a committee of McCarthyites, and in his reply said that when he left Ireland the party had a leader noted for his sagacity, reticence and statesmanlike qualities; he did not recognize those qualities in the Parnell of to-day. The majority of intelligent Americans were opposed to Parnell's continuance in the leadership. He hoped Mr. O'Brien would succeed in bringing about an agreement, but he firmly believed that the action taken against Mr. Parnell was the proper course to pursue, and that it should not be reversed.

MUTILATED HER BODY.

A German Peasant Woman's Horrible Representation of Christ's Wounds.

BERLIN, Dec. 26.—The village of Watterhim, in Rhineland, is undergoing considerable excitement over a peculiar case of religious frenzy that occurred there yesterday.

Barbara Pfister, an unmarried woman, 23 years of age, horribly mutilated herself and then appeared before a large number of people who had assembled at her home to participate in a religious ceremony. She presented a frightful appearance, being wounded in several places and bleeding profusely. Her hands and feet and her head were gashed, and there were several wounds in the neighborhood of her heart.

Standing before the terror-stricken assembly, she exhibited her bleeding wounds, and declared that they were a wonderful example of the crucifixion of Christ. As soon as the authorities heard of it, the woman was arrested and taken to the jail, in order that the district physician might make an examination.

The wounds are in the inner and outer sides of the hands, as well as around the wrists, and there are small ones on the feet. The is a square cut on her forehead, and at the back of her head, under the hair, are several bleeding eruptions.

The woman at the time she was arrested was surrounded by more than 100 peasants, who were taking money and food to her.

The gendarmes, who were sent to take her to the jail, were obliged to force their way with drawn swords through the crowd of admiring and awe-struck spectators.

A CHILD'S SHOCKING DEATH.

Mysteriously Assaulted in the Cellar of Her Home.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Dec. 26.—The village of Richfield, Otsego County, has been thrown into a state of great excitement by the death of nine-year-old Tirez Vanneizer. She had been sent to the cellar to get some wood, and remained so long that her mother called to her. The child responded, but did not return, and after a further lapse of time Mrs. Vanneizer went to the cellar. On reaching the bottom of the stairs she was horrified to discover her daughter lying unconscious on the floor.

Picking the child up in her arms, the mother carried her upstairs and physicians were speedily summoned, but Tirez died in a few hours without regaining sufficient consciousness to disclose the cause of her death.

An examination revealed the fact that she had been assaulted. Oneonta coroners were notified, and the villagers are determined to have a thorough investigation. Two strange men who had been loitering about the village are now missing.

THE GREAT STRIKE

Business Paralyzed by Scotland's Railway Trouble.

OVER NINE THOUSAND MEN OUT.

All Idea of a Settlement Abandoned by the Companies.

The Strikers Deny Any Share in the Wrecking of Trains—Steamers and Factories Cannot Obtain Coal—The Strike Spreading—Pennsylvania Miners Make Their Demand for a New Scale of Prices.

LONDON, Dec. 26.—The Scotch railway companies have abandoned all idea of a settlement with the striking employes, and are making efforts, thus far with poor success, to obtain English workmen for their places.

The strikers deny any share in the wrecking of trains or in other outrages charged against them.

Service has been partially resumed between Glasgow and Edinburgh, and the mails are forwarded with some regularity. There is still, however, a virtual embargo on traffic, and trade and commerce are paralyzed by sea and land. The sugar refineries at Greenock are closed, while thousands of tons of refined sugar are awaiting steam transportation to England, which cannot be obtained for lack of a coal supply. The Clyde shipyards are also closed, as there is no coal for the forges and furnaces.

The strikers show no signs of weakening, although the supply of funds is not sufficient to prevent privation among them. Their application to the English unions for aid is being considered.

It is now estimated that about 9,000 men are out on strike on the various railways in Scotland. Traffic on the North British Railway has almost ceased. The company will suspend the operation of its steamers on Loch Lomond and the Clyde, in order to obtain employes to work on the railway. Two engineers, who refused to quit work, were pelted with stones by a number of strikers near Glasgow, and were seriously injured. Many minor assaults by strikers are reported.

The employes of the Caledonian Railway Company are gradually joining the strikers.

The Glasgow docks are closed.

An attempt was made last night to derail the night express between Glasgow and Kilbride, by means of a piece of railway iron attached to the track. The obstruction was discovered just in time to save the train from destruction. The company allege that the dastardly act was the work of the strikers, but the men emphatically deny that any of their number was connected with the outrage.

The Strike Spreading.

HULL, Dec. 26.—About 1,000 railway men at Hull have decided to strike for better wages and shorter and more regular hours.

Miners Make Their Demand.

ALTOONA, Pa., Dec. 26.—The miners of the Central Pennsylvania coal regions have served notice on the coal operators demanding a change in the price of mining from 50 cents gross ton to 50 cents net ton, and a new scale of working prices, which they want to go into effect on the 1st of January. If the demands are not granted the men, to the number of 15,000, will quit work on the first of the year.

SEVERE SNOW STORMS.

Country Roads Blockaded and Business Suspended in Many Places.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—It is snowing hard here with every indication of a protracted storm. News comes from Harrisonburg, Va., that a severe snow storm set in there during the morning. The country roads are yet blocked from the snow storm of December 17 and 18, and travel is almost entirely suspended. At Staunton, Va., snow has been falling all day, and is now four inches deep. The country roads are blockaded and business partially suspended.

The Signal Office furnishes the following special bulletin:

The present storm promises the greatest amount of snow in any single storm for several years. Warnings were sent Thursday morning to railways in Pennsylvania and New York of coming heavy snows, which during to-day will extend to Southern New England. From three to seven inches of snow have fallen in the Ohio valley. The snow now extends from Indiana to Virginia.

Heavy easterly gales, with snow and low temperature, are expected from North Carolina to New England.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—The chief assistant at the Signal Service Office said:

"The storm may not be another blizzard, but I reckon it will tie up the railroads, and we shall have a gale that will shake navigation up.

"It seems to be headed straight for New York and Philadelphia, gathering force all the time as it comes nearer. There are just the right conditions of the barometer to give it free play."

First Blizzard of the Season in Kansas.

TOPEKA, Dec. 26.—The first blizzard of the season which reached here Thursday has made a change in temperature of twenty-five degrees in the last forty-eight hours. At noon snow commenced falling and at night the ground was covered to a depth of three inches with prospects of more. The snow will be of great benefit to the growing wheat crop.

SYNDICATES IN CUBA.

New York Capitalists Investing Heavily in Sugar Plantations.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—A dispatch from Havana to the Bureau of American Republics reports that a syndicate of New York capitalists has within the last few days purchased, for $600,000 in gold, the sugar plantation and factory known as San Ramon, one of the largest in Cuba, and is making arrangements to construct lines of transportation throughout the estate in order to increase the cultivation area and reduce the cost of production. The plantation already produces 50,000 bags of sugar annually, and it is the intention to produce from 90,000 to 100,000 bags next year.

The same dispatch also reports that another New York syndicate is negotiating for the estate Luisa, near the town of Sagua, and that agents of other syndicates are in the country prospecting for similar purposes.

Another dispatch reports that a syndicate of capitalists is preparing to run a line of tank steamers for the transportation of sugar between Cuban ports and those of the United States—a scheme by which the packing of sugar and molasses in hogsheads will be avoided, and the rate of transportation very much reduced.

Bryant and Smith, have a new opportunity to display their special abilities.

COUNSELOR MARSH WINS

A Hundred-Thousand Dollar Christmas Present for Johnnie Moore.

"Uncle Billy" Moore, of whom everybody in town has heard, and almost everybody knew, died at his home on East Second street, Jan. 5, of this year. He left a widow and an only child, John C. Moore, by a former wife. By a will to which was attached his mark, half of his estate worth $200,000 was left to the widow. She died intestate before he was buried, and the half of his estate mentioned above descended to her heirs who were not even related to "Uncle Billy." These heirs were Patrick and Mary Muluoon, Catharine Brady and others of this city.

The will that resulted in such a disposition of property, was of course at once contested. John C. Moore, the only child, was represented by Craig A. Marsh, Esq., and Wednesday the latter won a big victory for which he and his client were overwhelmingly praised and congratulated all of Christmas day. The will was contested on the grounds of testamentary incapacity, undue influence and improper execution; and an attack was made in the shape of an ejectment suit before Chief Justice Beasley in the Supreme Court.

The land in question was a farm in Middlesex county. Although the Union county Orphans Court had sustained the will, the son appealed to the Chancellor and also brought a separate suit for the land, as is allowed by New Jersey law. Counselor Marsh forced the trial against the consent of Nelson Runyon, Esq., and Judge Cowenhoven, counsel for the executors, who wanted it put off.

The evidence of about thirty witnesses was taken during Monday and Tuesday of this week, and all day of Wednesday was devoted to the speeches of the lawyers and the charge of the Court. The jury found a verdict in favor of the son in less than five minutes. This one suit settles that John C. Moore is entitled to all the land left by his father. Other suits will of course be necessary, but the verdict above prevents any defense being made.

An appeal from Judge McCormick's decision as to personal property, will be fought out before the Chancellor and through the Court of Errors and Appeals if necessary.

Their Eighteenth Christmas.

The annual entertainment of the First-day school took place in the Peace street meeting house Christmas afternoon, and, as usual, drew together a concourse of happy children. Many interested adult visitors were also present.

After a few remarks by Superintendent Harper, the exercises opened with the reading of Psalm xci by Henry G. Adams, followed by individual sentiments, given in response to the full calling of the roll. Aaron M. Powell then delivered a very appropriate address, and three recitations by old members of the school, respectively entitled—"The Answered Prayer"—"Christmas Day" and "The Captain's Well"—were most admirably rendered. The programme, as strictly carried out, elicted hearty approval. The handing forth of an abundant supply of cream and cake, and thereafter, of candies and oranges, brought the enjoyable affair to a close. It was the school's eighteenth Christmas anniversary.

An Ovation to Peerless Jennie.

About one thousand people, including many from Newark, Elizabeth, New Brunswick, Rahway, Somerville and even Brooklyn, gathered in The Crescent, yesterday afternoon and evening, and joined in a farewell ovation to Miss Jennie Houghton that was intensely flattering though every bit deserved. As she was leaving the floor in the evening the crowd of skaters, realizing that it was the last time they would see her there, rushed in, surrounded her and almost carried her off her feet. The enormous building fairly shook with applause. Miss Houghton will make her debut on the stage, at the Eden Musee, New York city, Monday evening, Jan. 12, 1891, and among the audience will be a large number of her friends from this city.

A Cold Christmas Bath.

John Cose, a Plainfield boy, broke through the ice on the New Market pond yesterday, and thought he was going to drown. "Is there no one to help me?" he cried, and a score of boys began to heave a pile of cord wood into the water, so that he was able to keep afloat till they had leisure to help him out without getting wet themselves.

HIS PROPERTY SOLD FOR TAXES.

For Years Mayor Male Paid a Tax on a Non-Existent Lot.

Job Male, Mayor of Plainfield, was for many years a resident of Jersey City, and still owns a great deal of real estate in that place. He is always prompt in paying the taxes and assessments. Among the houses and lots he owns in Jersey City is one numbered 259 Grand street. He has owned it for many years, and has paid all the taxes assessed against it every year.

When he went to pay his taxes this year he learned to his surprise that he did not own the property. The city had sold it for unpaid taxes and assessments. Mrs Mary McGonnell had bought it for $1,717.75 at a tax sale. She had made a good bargain, for the property was valued at $3,200 for assessment.

Mr. Male appealed to the Board of Finance, and the investigation showed a remarkable piece of carelessness. The lot was numbered 211 on the assesment map, and forms the junction of Grand, Grove and Canal streets. It is occupied by three buildings. Mr. Male owned, as grantee of Otto Meyer, and his deed was for lot 210, street number 259, assessment block 233 Grand street. Since 1876 the tax receipts have been made out for part of lot 211, and it has been carried on the taxbooks as lot 211 ever since. James Farrell, the real owner of lot 211, was assessed for the whole lot. Since 1872 the taxes on lot 210 have been assessed to the estate of Boyd, the original owner, and remained unpaid, and were so returned to the Commissioners of Adjustment. They adjusted the city's claim at $1,495.44 for taxes and assessments. The report was confirmed, and the sale was made. Mary McGonnell, the purchaser, served notice on Mr. Male.

The case was referred to the Corporation Counsel, and he discovered that the Assessors years ago had placed upon the tax-books one piece of property more than existed in the block. The extra lot did not appear on the Water Register's map. Mr. Male had paid taxes for years on a non-existent piece, and the property on which he thought he had paid taxes was sold. The city's lawyers discovered that there was an unpaid assessment of $182.86 for sewer and pavement for work done a score of years ago, and that claim saved the city.

The Board of Finance has ordered Mr. Male to pay the assessment, with interest, the interest at 10 per cent. on the money paid by Mary McGonnell, $3.50 costs of sale and $1 for notice. It also ordered a warrant drawn on the City Treasury to refund to Mary McGonnell the amount she had paid at the tax sale.

Christmas at Holy Cross Church.

The Christmas services at the Church of the Holy Cross yesterday morning were attended by a large congregation. The interior of the edifice was decorated entirely with holly, and the graceful sprays of green leaves, jeweled and dotted with their red berries, twined about the font and lectern, hung from the pulpit and covered the handsome altar in lavish but tasteful profusion. The simple and impressive ritual of the church seemed even more beautiful than usual in the glad surroundings of the day, and the rich tones of the grand organ and sweet voices of the choristers rang with the message of Christmastide. The Rector, the Rev. T. Logan Murphy, conducted the services, preaching an instructive sermon and administering the sacrament of the Holy Communion after morning prayer. The musical programme which included the singing of Dyke's Te Deum and Clare's inspiring anthem "Sing, O Heavens," was exceedingly well rendered by the male vested choir under the leadership of Charles W. Kellogg, ably assisted by Edward N. Neilson at the organ. A collection was taken for Muhlenberg Hospital.

Christmas Hymns of Praise at St. Mary's.

Yesterday's services at St. Mary's Catholic church included a mass at six o'clock and a children's mass at 9:45, when the young people rendered the following: Adeste Fidelis and "The Star of Bethlehem," by Dressler, "O Holy Night," by Adam, and "There Were Shepherds," by Millard. At 10:45 the choir of the church sang a Gloria by Concone, Sanctus and Agnus Dei in G, by Millard, Adeste Fidelis, by Novello, and a Christmas anthem by Millard.

The soloists were Mrs. Ronan and Miss Josie Schaeffer, sopranos; Miss Maggie Conway and Miss Julia Day, altos; Messrs J. C. Traynor and J. O'Rourke, tenors; Messrs J. Harding and Lannigan, bassos. The chorus was composed of the following: Miss Flanagan, Miss Katie Reid, Miss Allie Quinn, Miss Maggie Sheehan, and several others, all under the direction of Mrs. Ronan, organist of the church.

Christmas at Muhlenberg Hospital.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Christmas was a bright day to the inmates of Muhlenberg Hospital who see so little of the brightness of life, amidst so much suffering; and those who were favored with a look at the beautiful tree placed in the hall where the patients from the two wards could see it, could not help exclaiming "How pretty it is; how thoughtful in some one to prepare such a pleasure to these faithful attendants and to the sick:" and I want to say right here, that it is to our worthy President, Mrs. Edgerton, who first introduced this custom—and which has become an annual occurence—that we would give the merited praise, for she not only furnishes the tree but the services of her efficient gardener, who is a very important personage in the decoration and superintendence of the tree.

The ladies who assisted this year were: Miss Schipper, Mrs. Huntington, Mrs. Lowe, Miss Cock, Miss Mary Tweedy and Mrs. Tomlinson, who thinking it wise to remember the needs of the hospital and give it some Christmas cheer, visited the merchants of the city, and procured for it liberal donations from the following donors whom we delight to honor: Seeley Edsal, 10 yards unbleached muslin; H. A. Pope, 22 yards unbleached muslin; S. C. Peck, 6 yards bleached muslin; Miss Clarke, 6 pairs hose; Messrs Doane & Van Arsdale, 2 pairs slippers; Horace Sherwin, 1 pair men's felt slippers; W. L. Gavett & Co., 2 bread plates, 1 vase, 2 dozen plates; A. M. Griffin, 1 coffee pot, 3 stew pans; Estelle, Taylor & Neuman, 10 pounds granulated sugar, 2 pounds coffee, 2 brooms, 1 quart white beans, 2 pounds rice, 1 package rolled wheat, 3 quarts apples. The benevolent band of Kings Daughters sent a package containing 1 quilt, 2 nightingales, 1 white apron, 1 tidy, 4 books, 1 sachet and a gift for Mrs. Walrod.

To each one of them we bestow sincere thanks, and hope by the offering a fourfold payment may come to the heart of the giver. The charity circle of Kings Daughters sang several Christmas carols, after which useful presents were presented to each of the eleven patients, and the faithful Superintendent, Mrs. Walrod, and attendants were liberally remembered. After a few more songs we left, trusting the hour would brighten both those who were served, and those who served the wearied ones.

M. D. TOMLINSON,
Secretary Ladies Auxiliary Board, Muhlenberg Hospital.

Some Christmas Weather.

It was not exactly a white Christmas, but it's a very white day after. The air of Christmes Day itself was cold and nipping, and frost and ice were abundant enough. The ice ponds of the neighborhood were thronged with skaters all day long, and the exhilarating sport was also enjoyed in the bracing atmosphere of Christmas Eve., when a bright full moon and myriads of stars shone from the clearest of skies. Christmas was almost cloudless, so far as the heavens were concerned, but it was considerably more Wintry than last year, when people sat on their piazzas in the afternoon and enjoyed the balmy air. This morning the snow is falling and blowing and drifting in such profusion that the greatest storm since the blizzard is threatened.

Mr. EDITOR
OF THE PRESS.

I wish to put in print my congratulations upon Plainfield's largest business year in its history—in my judgment.

The opinion among many merchants is that the citizens of Plainfield have done more to encourage home trade this season than ever before, and as for me I am willing to encourage its increase

In the year to come, by offering the best goods at the lowest prices, with a large assortment to select from.

The first thing after the great Holiday rush is over, is to look after the Winter stock, and see that it is got out of the way for the Spring goods.

THERE will be an excellent opportunity to get bargains in all such articles at Edsall's now, as his house will put a price on them that will make them move off lively.

THIS SEASON'S trade has gone away ahead of previous years, and we are just in humor to give our patrons a chance to save some money on what they may need in this line.

Fur Capes and Muffs are not wanted in our store now. Their room is better than their company, and they must go.

Woolen Underwear and Mittens, and such like, will be obliged to leave our counters; they can be excused.

You had better come in and see what we are doing.

No reasonable offer will be refused for the balance of our Holiday gifts.

THE SITE FOR THE SOLDIERS' MONUMENT DEFINITELY SETTLED.

As Soon as the Funds are Subscribed the Work of Building will Be Begun—The Shaft will Occupy the Crescent Triangle, and the Eagle at the Top will Gaze Into the Big Front Window of the Church.

Another step was taken towards the erection of Plainfield's soldiers' monument, at a congregational meeting of the Crescent Avenue church held in the chapel Wednesday night. The chairman, Mayor Charles Place of the Borough, announced that the object of the meeting was to decide whether or not the Trustees should be empowered to give the consent of the church to the placing of the proposed monument on the triangular plot of ground at the junction of Broadway and Crescent avenue. The way in which the church came into possession of this land he explained—was through a purchase in which several prominent citizens co-operated. When, in 1882, the church sought to gain possession of the land Job Male was its owner, and the price set was $1,000. Of this amount the church paid $250, and several citizens, among them Mayor Male himself, Jos. W. Yates, J. B. Dumont, and others, contributed the balance. When the question of who should hold the title arose it was at first suggested that Mr. Yates should be the trustee, but it was finally decided that as the church was in perpetuity and would always exist to care for the land the title should be held by the church. The matter of selecting this land as the site for the proposed monument had been submitted to all the original purchasers of the land except one who was dead and except the church itself, and all had expressed their willingness to have the monument placed on the site suggested.

A resolution presented by I. C. Pierson, giving the consent of the church also, was unanimously adopted. By the terms of this decision of the church the Trustees are given the freedom to use their own excellent discretion as to the exact spot on the triangle for the monument, but it will probably be a little beyond the centre, near the broader end facing the church. The resolution provides that the work of construction shall not be begun until the sum necessary for the completion of the work—estimated at $17,000—shall have been deposited in the bank. As soon as the required subscriptions are paid in, therefore, the monument will be constructed.

Another wise provision of the resolution is that to establish a sort of endowment fund to cover the expense of keeping the monument in good repair when once erected. Every step the projectors of the enterprise are taking is careful and thorough, which was just what was expected of such men as General James S. Negley, Col. Mason W. Tyler, J. E. Stewart, L. V. F. Randolph, George W. Moore, Nelson W. Runyon, E. J. Olssen, Wm. H. Williams, Alex. Gilbert, E. B. Clark, J. Evarts Tracy, C. W. McCutchen, A. C. Baldwin, S. A. Ginna, Rowland S. Cox and L. W. Serrell, who are at the head of the movement.

Col. Tyler is Chairman, Judge Runyon is Secretary and John E. Stewart is Treasurer of this committee, upon which is represented equally the citizen and soldier element. The sub-committee to whom is due the credit of securing the consent of the trustees of the property to erect the monument on the site decided on, is composed of S. A. Ginna, Rowland Cox and E. B. Clark. The result of their efficient work grants the wish of THE PRESS of months ago:

Let it be erected in some such prominent spot as the junction of Broadway and Crescent avenue, and let it not be in the form of a gloomy tombstone.

The design for the monument which was shown to the church at Wednesday's meeting as the one which is to be erected at the front of their own beautiful edifice is the design pictured faithfully in today's PRESS. It is virtually the same design which the sub committee, and the general committee, after them, first accepted. This sub-committee, consisting of Mason W. Tyler, Chairman, Gen'l James S. Negley, J. Evarts Tracy and John E. Stewart of Winfield Scott Post and Comrade Edward Olssen of Major Anderson Post, G. A. R., originally threw out all the "set" and hackneyed designs submitted by the monument builders, and a design of Plainfield's own was created by Gen. Negley, carried out in detail by Edwin Forbes, the renowned war correspondent, and unanimously approved by all who were present at a meeting held Saturday evening, June 7, as published exclusively in the next issue of THE PRESS.

The top of the monument will tower fifty-five feet above the greensward at the base. The eagle will be in bronze, but the shaft and the statues will be in granite.

The following legend of the monument is from the pen of the designer himself, Gen. Negley:

THE LEGEND OF THE MONUMENT.

The design is thoroughly American in sentiment and dissimilar in its idealistic features from all existing types. Its inspiration is a votive tribute to a world of heroic memories, to a world of glorious deeds, to a world of joyous victories and to a world of devotion to the principles of justice and humanity.

The column starts with a hexagon base of classic proportion, and rises to the height of 53 feet and 6 inches. The vertical development is corinthian in its lower section, but in place of the usual architectural acanthus—i. e. bear's claw capital—there is substituted the exquisitely graceful form of the tropical palm. Its frond-like leaves bend outward and spring upward with a richness of outline and charming relief.

The capital is separated by a bold division which is charged with a limited amount of incised embellishment to relieve the cold gray monotony of the granite.

A spirited figure of an American eagle poised on the crown of the shaft, completes the national imagery of the structure.

The first section of the shaft has a polished die of sufficient dimensions to accommodate suitable inscriptions of battle records. Above the die will be fashioned an emblematic shield of bronze with trophies, State and National colors and the coat of arms of the State of New Jersey; supported by a cartridge-box all in bold relief.

Three piers or pedestals project from the base of the column at equal distances. The outward faces of these pedestals present panels enriched by sculpture in low relief; each pedestal supports a figure of heroic size, over six feet in height. One of these is idealistic, the others are realistic. Each subject is instinct with character and offers an incentive to sympathetic and profound study.

"Victory," the reclining figure, epitomizes a battle scene where heroism ennobles the life of the private soldier as he stood in the lines aflame with fire and death. There is deep pathos and genuineness of sentiment in the form and attitude of this wounded soldier.

Sir Walter Scott has woven a fadeless poetical garland for the brow of his hero Marmion, which we quote to illume our description:

A light on Marmion's visage spread, and fired his glazed eye,
With dying hand above his head
He shook the fragment of his blade,
And shouted "Victory."

"Mustered out," illustrates the strong individuality of the volunteer soldier. When slavery was discrowned and dishonored, and the shackles of the bondsmen fell at his feet to become a pledge of unity and peace, he returned his sword to its scabbard and took his place in the column of progress without a murmur of regret.

"Liberty" is represented by a Greek maiden attired in a classic diploidion with a crocale or fillet of stars encircling her brow. She holds uplifted the standard of the Union of States and offers with her right hand the laurels of fame and imperishable honor to those who defend the inalienable rights of man.

The truth and spiritual force of this ideal figure fills the full measure of historic expression and interest. Immovable like the past, faith in her rewards has survived the tragedies of every age. The oppressed of all peoples have worshiped at her shrine and the helpless victims of despotism will forever lay their perennial flowers of hope upon her altar.

"The Wife."

The engagement of Daniel Frohman's Lyceum Theatre Company in Belasco and DeMille's big success, "The Wife," at Music Hall, Monday evening, should attract a full house.

"The Wife" is a society comedy-drama treating of Americans and American life. It is powerful without brutality, and full of a bright, sparkling play of wit that is sure to charm the large element who appreciate fine comedy.

The play will be staged with all the artistic calculation of the Lyceum people.

I heartily recommend Salvation Oil for neuralgia, for it acts like a charm. J. S. McCAULLEY, (policeman,) residence 205 N. Bond street, Balto., Md.

SILENCE REWARDED.

How a Policeman Got Ten Dollars for a Small Job.

"But yer can't tell how I got that," said one of the "finest," exhibiting a crisp ten-dollar bill, and a grin of satisfaction that stretched his capacious mouth almost from ear to ear.

Wherever I have lived I have always made it a rule to cultivate the policemen on the beat. This man and I were on good terms, and I knew that he had a good story to tell me. I congratulated him on his good luck, but professed my utter inability to even surmise how it happened.

"Faith, thin, it's fur holdin' me tongue about a triflin' little job I did fur a foine jintleman that lives on me beat, so it is."

I saw that the secret was so sore a burden to him that he would have to relieve himself of it.

"Shure," he continued, "if I tell it to some won, I kin hold me tongue about it better aftherward. No won loikes to have a pace of good luck dhropped right down ot his faat an' not shpake won word about it to a livin' soul.

"Well, thin, it wass a passin' the corner of the shtrate that me foine jintleman lives on late last night, a wonderin' whither Tim Doolan had remimbered me inshtructions consarnin' where to lave the bottle of whisky, when I shpied him—not Tim, but the jintleman—lanin' against a lamp-post.

"'Pat,' says he.

"'Yis,' says I.

"'There's a burglar in me house,' says he.

"'The deuce,' says I.

"'Lastewise,' says he, 'I'm not shure that it's a burglar; but if it ain't a burglar I want yer to foind out what it is.'

"'Faith,' says I, 'I'd as lave tackle the divil himself as a burglar, so I'm the man fur ye.'

"Well, I wint wid the jintleman to his house, and inside the hall door was his lady, white as a shate, an' not drissed for company, though may be she was drissed wall enough fur a perlaceman. In won hand she'd a poker an' in the ither a pistol.

"COME OUT, YER BLACKGUARD!"

"Well, she told me they'd come home late from the thayater, an' jist before she was goin' to bed she wint to the kitchen to get somethin' an' she couldn't open the door, an' she was shure she hadn't locked the door whin she wint out; an' thin she heard a noise, an' thin she knowed a burglar had locked himself in, an' she wouldn't let her husband open the door 'cus he moight get shot.

"'Faith,' says I to myself, 'it's not much persuadin' he naded to lave the door alone, or I'm no judge of human natur.'

"But the lady's words wus moighty comfortin' and made me feel bold as a lion, for shure I knowed that burglars don't lock themselves in kitchens, if I haven't been long on the force.

"Well, they showed me the way upstairs—they lived in the third flat—an' it's moighty careful they was, too, that I wint fust. An' whin we got to the landin' they showed me the kitchin'.

"I tried the door an' found it locked.

"'What shall I do?' says I.

"'Tell him to come out,' says she.

"'Come out, yer blackguard!' says I.

"'Tell him you'll shoot if he don't.' says she.

"'I'll shoot if you don't,' says I.

"'Divil a wurd did the burglar say, 'cus, av course there wasn't no burglar there, an' it was all I could do to kape me face straight.

"'Break open the door,' says she.

"'All right,' says I.

"Wall, I put me shoulder agin it an' she an' the jintlemen kept movin' backward until they couldn't git any further without makin' a hole in the wall an' crawlin' through it.

"I boosted meself agin the door two or three times an' thin the door wint wid a nip an' a crash, an' the lady gave a scream, an', by the piper that played afore Moses, what do you think?"

I told him that I didn't know what to think.

"Out jumped a big black cat. Av course she'd locked the door afore she wint out an' locked the baste in. But I never cracked a schmile an' looked solemn as an owl, an' said it moight a been a burglar, an' burglars was moighty dangerous, an' paple ought to giv' the p'laceman a chance to get fust whack at 'em always.

"Well, the jintleman wint down-stairs wid me, lookin' moighty sheepish, an' whin we got to the bottom 'Pat,' says he quiet like.

"'Yis, sir,' says I, dacent an' respectful.

"'Do you know how to howld yer tongue?" says he.

"'By me sowl I does that,' says I, 'an', shure I niver says won word about burglars when they turn out to be cats.'

"Here's tin dollars,' says he, 'an' moind ye kape quiet about it.'

"'If I shpake won word about it to any livin' sowl,' says I, 'may me tongue niver shpake won word agin.'

"An' that's how I got tin dollars for doin' a triflin' job an' sayin' nothin' about it."—N. Y. Herald.

Reduction in Prices for Cash!

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

AFTER DECEMBER 15, 1890,

The Plainfield Produce Company

Will Sell All Goods Strictly for Cash!

We will present a few reasons for making this change in our manner of doing business. In the first place we have our Hay, Grain and Produce inspected and bought direct from the Producer for Cash. Thereby obtaining better quality, also saving one profit, which would go to the commission merchant if bought from sample the usual way.

In the second place any concern doing an extensive credit business must get larger profits to offset slow and worthless accounts, of which with the greatest care there will be some. And the customer who is ready to pay and does pay his bills when presented, is the one who must pay these larger profits.

By selling for cash we avoid losses from such accounts, and can afford to sell for smaller profits.

We ask for a share of your patronage. Give us a call and we will show you how low we can sell for CASH, instead of how high we must sell for credits.

FOR LITTLE PEOPLE.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

What shall you do in the year that is new,
Little maid?
Shall you make it a happy new year to you
Little maid?

Shall you keep your heart full of sunshine dear,
Though skies be cloudy and days be drear?
Shall you help the mother and lighten her care?
Be ready in duties to take your share?
Shall you try to make little ones happy and glad?
Be cheery and hopeful when others are sad?
Shall you aim to have life hold a little less pain
For those whom sickness or want enchain?
Shall you strive to be gentle, brave and sweet,
And to follow the Master with willing feet,
Little maid?

If this you do in the year that is new,
'Twill be truly a happy new year to you,
Little maid.
—Emma C. Dowd, in Our Youth

BESSIE'S CALLERS.

They Gladdened a Little Sick Girl's Heart When All Else Had Failed.

"Happy New Year, Bessie darling."

Mamma came into the room and kissed her little girl. Bessie gave back the kiss, but sat still, looking very mournful indeed.

Mournful on New Year's Day!

Yes, it seems a strange thing to tell of a little girl in a pleasant room, with the New Year's sun shining brightly into it. But when I tell you how it was perhaps you will not wonder.

She was just getting over the scarlet fever. She was feeling quite well, but was not yet allowed to go out of the one room.

This was bad enough, she thought, but it was not the worst of it. All the little girls and boys she knew were going to call on each other this New Year's Day. They had talked about it, and settled it just before she was taken sick. Their mothers all said they might, and had promised to let them have some nice things to eat.

And now, you see, as poor Bessie had had the scarlet fever, she was not only obliged to stay in the house, but none of the other children could come to see her for fear they might take it.

"It's so dreadfully lonely," said Bessie, looking out of the window with a very doleful face.

Mamma talked to her, and told her stories, but after awhile she grew tired of them.

"I wonder where Pussy is," she said. "She used to stay with me and play with me; but now she stays away somewhere all the time."

"So she does," said mamma. "She just comes at meal-time and gets her drink of milk, and then she goes away."

"I wish Nora would go and find her for me."

"I'll go, too," said mamma. "Perhaps she is out in the barn watching for mice."

Mamma went, and was gone a long time. Bessie got very tired of waiting. Some of the children who were going calling went by.

They waved their hands to her, and she felt more doleful than ever because she could not go too.

"And I can't have one single call, either," she said, with tears in her eyes.

Just then mamma came in with a very bright smile on her face.

"Bessie," she said, "you are going to have some calls, after all."

Bessie jumped up and down exclaiming:

"O mamma! Who?"

"Mrs. Tabbykins is bringing her three children to see you."

"Oh—I'd rather have somebody I know," said Bessie, who had never heard of Mrs. Tabbykins before. "But I'll say, 'Happy New Year,' the moment you open the door. That's the way they all do."

"Here they are," said mamma.

She opened the door, and Bessie cried:

"Happy New Year!"

Her callers were very polite, for they answered her at once.

"Meow-w-w-w!"
"Me-e-e-e-e!"
"Me-e-e-e-e-e!"
"Me-e-e-e-e-e-e!"

Bessie gave a scream of delight. In walked Madam Puss with three little kittens.

"Kittens!" exclaimed Bessie. "Tiny, soft, fuzzy kitties. Oh, you darling little things! Where did you find them, mamma?"

"Nora found them in the hayloft," said mamma. "We had quite a hunt for them."

"A gray one, and a spotted black-and-white, and this dear little white one."

"No wonder Pussy stayed away with these cunning babies to take care of," said mamma.

"No, indeed," said Bessie. "It was to take care of those cunning little dears. But you must stay with me now, Pussy, and I'll help you with your babies."

She made up her doll's bed for them. She gave them a ride in her doll's carriage. She cuddled them, and sung them to sleep; and it is pleasant to be able to say that Mrs. Tabbykins was so well contented with her new quarters that she forgot she was making a New Year's call, and stayed all day.

And when evening came Bessie said to her mamma:

"I think I've had the nicest New Year calls in the world!"—Youth's Companion.

ISSIE'S FIRST PARTY.

A Little Girl Who Thought She Must be Quiet Like She Was at School.

Issie's mamma was busy about dinner one day when Cousin Stella ran in and asked if Issie could go to school with her that afternoon. "Marion Palmer is going to take her company, and I want to take some one," Stella said. Mamma was afraid Issie would make a disturbance, but Stella told her they had played school and Issie did not whisper then. So at last mamma allowed her to go, after taking great pains to make her understand that she must not whisper or speak out loud. Issie remembered and obeyed, and won much praise for her good behavior.

A day or two later Issie was invited to a party, and although she knew nothing about one she thought it must be nice, and she chatted about it nearly all the time until the day arrived. Uncle Ned asked the privilege of taking her, as he wanted to see her enjoy it.

At last she started, and then we began to wish her back to tell us about it. Finally, we saw her coming with Uncle Ned, who had a queer, puzzled look on his face. Mamma went to the gate, and Issie gave a jump into her arms, crying out: "I was a good girl, mamma, better than some of them, for I never whispered once, nor talked out loud!"

Then Uncle Ned sat down on the door-step and laughed. When he could get his breath he said: "Well, I'm glad I know what's the matter, for that child hasn't opened her mouth to say a word all the afternoon!"

Mamma did considerable explaining to have Issie see the difference between school and party, but it was not clear to her then.

A little later she went to school again with Stella. The next morning all her dolls were trained as if at school, and of a sudden there came such a horrible noise from her corner that mamma was frightened, and ran to see what could be the trouble. There was Issie throwing her dolls around, and shrieking and screaming at the top of her voice.

"Why, Issie, what are you screaming so for?" mamma asked. "It's the recess noise, mamma, like they have at school."

After the "recess" was over, and the dolls were again in their seats, she sat quietly for a few moments and then got up and went to her mother, saying: "The school is school, and the party was recess, I guess!"

Uncle Ned thought she deserved a box of candy for thinking it out by herself, so he bought her one. She will soon be old enough for school, and then she will understand these things better.—Edna Sawyer Warren, in American Agriculturist.

A CUNNING CUB.

The Funny Performance Alice Saw From Her Window.

Alice stood at the window, watching the falling snow. "What's that?" she said, as she caught sight of something up the street.

"It's a dog; a woolly dog," she cried out. "O, no! it's not a dog, it's a little bear!"

It was a little bear cub. It stopped directly in front of the window, and, sitting up, nodded to Alice in the most friendly manner. "Oh! you amusing thing," she cried. "I'm going to feed you!" and opening the window, she tossed out a sweet cracker, which Master Bear snapped up in a moment; then, sitting up, he made another bow, and held out his paw for more. So she gave him another, but just as he was stooping to snap it up, he suddenly fell at full length on the snow; and with his forepaws over his eyes, lay perfectly still. "Why, you poor little fellow, what can be the matter?" said Allie. At the same moment she saw a man, coming very fast; he had a whip. He stopped, when he saw the cub, and snapped the whip. In a moment, Master Bear was sitting up, bowing and offering his paw.

Alice was afraid that he would be punished for running away, so she opened the window, and said, in a coaxing little voice: "Oh! please don't whip him; he's so cunning!"

"Well, I won't, Miss, if you don't want me to," said the man. "Come, Ned!" Ned understood by the tone of his master's voice that he was not to be punished; he immediately got up and clasped his paws around his master's leg and hugged him tight. "That's the way he always does when we wake up," said the man.—Annie L. Hannah, in Little Men and Women.

—"And now, children," remarked Prof. Hailes, in one of the board schools the other day, "if a family consisting of father and mother and seven children should have a pie for dinner, how much would each one receive?" "An eighth part," answered a bright boy. "But there are nine persons, you must remember." "Oh, yes, I know that, but the mother wouldn't get any. There wouldn't be enough to go around."—Spare Moments.

MADE A MISTAKE.

One Instance in Which Flattery Wouldn't Work.

"Madam," said the tramp, suavely, to the woman of the house, "you will have no objections, I hope, to my remaining on your back porch a few moments to rest myself and inhale the odor of that delicious young prairie chicken you are cooking."

"How do you know it's a young prairie chicken?" she demanded.

"Why, I—"

"How do you know it isn't quail, or venison, or Rocky mountain sheep?"

"Madam, I assure you—"

"How do you know it isn't canvas back duck, or Carolina rice birds, or blue-winged teal, or diamond-backed terrapin?"

"It smells good enough to be any of them, I am sure, and—"

"If you've got any use of that red nose of yours," retorted the woman, "you know well enough it's a leathery old barn-yard hen. She's been cooking for six mortal hours and ain't done yet, and I've got no time to waste on a sneaking, hypocritical, flattering, cold victuals loafer. You git!"

The tramp lost no time in obeying.

"The next house I tackle," he said savagely to himself as he trudged on, "I'll ask 'em for some of their fried liver scraps, by gosh!"—Chicago Tribune.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

—Life.

The Man Was There.

"Is there a man in all this audience," demanded the female lecturer on woman's rights, with a rising and fierce inflection, "is there, I say, a man here that has ever done any thing to lighten the burden resting on his wife's shoulders? What do men know of woman's work? Is there one man here (folding her arms and looking over her audience with superb scorn) that ever got up in the morning, leaving his tired, wornout, wife to enjoy her slumbers, went quietly down-stairs, made the fire, cooked his own breakfast, sewed the missing buttons on the children's clothes, darned the family stockings, scoured the pots and kettles, cleaned and filled the lamps, swept the kitchen, and done all this, if necessary, day after day without complaint? If there is such a man in this audience let him rise. I should like to see him."

And away back in the rear of the lecture-room a mild looking man in spectacles timidly arose.

He was the husband of the eloquent speaker.—Chicago Globe.

Won a Title By Her Wit.

The death of Marechale Pelissier, Duchess of Malakoff, recalls the pretty story of her betrothal. She was a near relative of the Empress Eugenie, and one day, walking in the garden of the palace, she met the gallant Marechal, who asked the beautiful girl for a rose she had just broken.

"What would you do with a rose? You like only laurels," the girl answered, but gave him the flower.

The reply captured the Marechal, who said to the Empress later: "I thought myself difficult to conquer, but in this case Malakoff has surrendered at the first fire."—Le Figaro Illustre.

SATIN SPECTACLE CASE.

A Useful Little Home-Made Gift for Grandpa and Grandma.

A gift for grandpa or grandma is often hard to choose, and nothing is so much valued as some article the grandchildren's own fingers have made.

This pretty spectacle case requires a yard of satin ribbon two inches wide, three-quarters of a yard of the same color half an inch wide, a piece of celluloid five inches long and two wide, a bit of chamois leather, and a little gilt paint.

Commence by fringing both ends of the satin ribbon to the depth of an inch, then measure six and a half inches from the end, and fold a tuck five and a half inches deep; sew the sides "over and over."

Measure five inches at the other end, fold a tuck three and a half inches deep, and sew in the same way, taking care to keep the satin side of the ribbon outside.

Draw lengthwise of the celluloid the outline of a pair of spectacles, with the bows folded across; then paint in rather broad lines with the gilt paint, and gum the celluloid on the long pocket formed by the first tuck, or make a small hole in each of the four corners, and fasten with a bow and ends of baby-ribbon. A yard and a half will suffice. If celluloid can not be had, the spectacles can be painted on the satin.

On the other end of the ribbon write with gilt paint:

The world will never Look quite right
Unless you keep
Your glasses bright.

Cut from the chamois leather a piece five inches wide and three long; round off the two lower ends, fold and slip into the short pocket. Double the broad ribbon exactly in the center, the satin side outside, and tie the half-inch ribbon tightly around it in a pretty bow and ends.—Mary J. Safford, in Harper's Young People.

HOME-MADE MUFF.

This Article Tells You Just How to Put It Together.

A muff to match the dress can be made with comparatively little expense and the making of one is not at all a difficult task if one understands just how to set about it. A convenient size is made by cutting the material for the outside twelve by twenty-four inches and the lining of soft silk eighteen by twenty-six inches. Join the ends of the material together in a neat seam, making the round for the muff and insert a layer of wool wadding. Sew the ends A and B of the lining also together and draw it through the aperture next to the wadding. Gather together on an elastic large enough to put the hand through comfortably, turn over on to the material of the muff itself and overcast neatly. Over each edge tack a piece of fur or feather trimming and put on a pretty bow for a finish.—Farm and Home.

CAST-OFF GARMENTS.

What to Do When a Gown Is Hopelessly Out of Fashion.

When a gown is so hopelessly out of fashion that it will not answer even for me wear, or when it is for any other reason hors de combat, do not hang it away in a closet, to take up room, or shut it up in a chest, to grow musty. First of all get it thoroughly cleansed. If it is composed of washing goods, have it washed in its entirety, as clean clothes are so much pleasanter to handle than soiled ones. Puffs and tucks should, of course, be taken out first, and draperies that come off easily may be removed and washed separately. If the material will not wash, brush and air thoroughly, leaving the task of removing stains, etc., till later on. When it is as clean as it is practicable to make it, rip it into its constituent parts. Such portions as are quite used up, detach and put aside, along with very small pieces, for rags—to be sold to a rag dealer, or got out of the way in any manner that seems best. Buttons and hooks-and-eyes should be put into a box kept for that purpose. They can almost always be used again. Such parts of the lining as are still sound, iron smoothly, roll into nice even bundles, and put away. The material of the gown proper which is still good press carefully out, fold like a piece of new goods, and put away in a chest kept sacred to "raw material," i. e., goods to be made up when needed. Of course it is not gowns alone that can be thus dissected. Do the same with every cast-off garment, even underwear. Then, when something new is required for one of the children—a shirt, petticoat, frock or jacket—never visit the stores till you have first looked through the contents of this chest, which is very often a "seek no further," and the convenience it is to have goods in such a shape that one can teli absolutely how far they may be made available, is, as most women will believe, very great.

It is not only the children's wardrobes that are reinforced from this source. A new house gown is often to be found by making a combination of some of the materials stored therein. Indeed, one of the much-draped skirts of a year or two ago will sometimes furnish a full gown of the present simpler fashion.—K. B. Coulter, in Good Housekeeping.

THE STORM IS OVER

The Signal Office Predicts Clear Weather.

TRAVEL ON RAILROADS IMPEDED

Much Damage Done Along the Jersey Coast and Other Sections.

Bulkheads Swept Away and Railroads Submerged—Several Persons Injured by an Accident at Albany—A Schooner Wrecked but All Hands Were Saved—Deep Snow Reported at Many Places.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—It is officially announced at the Signal Service office that the storm centre is broken.

"New Yorkers can look for clearer weather," said the observer. "The snow and hail which prevailed so violently all yesterday turned into a fine drizzle at 10 o'clock last night, but is not likely that there will be any great amount of rain."

About 12 inches of snow fell during the storm. The most remarkable feature about this was the barometric pressure. This instrument fell just one inch during 12 hours—a very unusual occurrence. The lowest point of temperature was at Northfield, Vt., where the thermometer registered 16 degrees below zero. The highest temperature wrs at Jacksonville, Fla. At that place it was 73 degrees above zero. The lowest temperature in this city yesterday was 14 degrees above at 4 a. m., and the highest was 32 degrees at 3 p. m.

JERSEY'S LASHED COAST.

Vessels and Bulkheads Damaged and Railway Tracks Submerged.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27:—Along the Jersey coast the storm was very severe and the surf high. Much damage was done in all sections of the State.

Off Pleasantville a three masted schooner dragged her anchor and went ashore. Her name was not learned.

Portions of the bulkheads of cottages at Monmouth Beach were swept away, but the extent of the damage has not been determined. The Life Saving Service telephone line is down between Seabright and Sandy Hook.

At Long Branch great holes were torn in the bluff and many bulkheads damaged. At noon a large ship narrowly escaped going ashore near the ocean pier.

Travel in Newark was seriously impeded, the electric cars were unable to move, and on the horse railway lines cars were run only at long and irregular intervals. Some routes of the Rapid Transit Company were closed by deep snowdrifts.

Heavy surf tore up the big board walk at Asbury Park and cut out the beach at Ocean Grove.

Poor fishermen are the principal sufferers by the storm. Nearly every hut was flooded with water to the depth of three feet, and the occupants were forced to seek refuge in the upper stories.

Tracks of the New Jersey Southern Division of the Central Railroad are under water, and much delay is experienced in running trains. Communication by rail between Long Branch and Sandy Hook has been shut off owing to the high tides and drifting snow.

HEAVY SNOW IN THE EAST.

New England and Northern New York Feel the Effects of the Storm.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 27.—Cold, high winds and heavy snow storms have prevailed all over New England. At Bangor, Me., the thermometer registered 12 degrees below zero, and in some of the surrounding towns 35 degrees below was marked. The storm almost reached the proportions of a blizzard in Portland, Me. A hard northeast gale was blowing and the snow came down in sheets.

Reports from sections of Vermont indicate that the storm has been the heaviest of the season. Reports from Summit Station, on the Central Vermont road, state that the storm was the most severe in many years. The thermometer registered 40 below zero at Lyndonville, Vt., last night and 30 below this morning.

Reports from Concord, N. H., say that the storm is heavy throughout the State.

Throughout Massachusetts the storm has raged with much severity.

All the railroad companies throughout New England report their trains much delayed by the storm.

Throughout New York State.

ALBANY, Dec. 27.—From all over the State comes the news of heavy snow. At Watertown the thermometer has been five degrees below zero. In the Mohawk Valley generally there has been a high wind with cold weather. The electric street railroad at Utica is tied up. In Lockport, Ithaca and Elmira street traffic is seriously impeded.

Pennsylvania Gets a Taste.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 27.—Between 12 and 14 inches of snow has fallen. Trains are hours behind time and street car traffic on all but the cable roads has been temporarily suspended. The snow is dry, and so far has not affected the telegraph service. From the various parts of this section of the State news comes of heavy snow storms.

THE ROOF FELL IN.

Two Seriously Injured and Others Hurt in an Albany Round House.

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 27.—While a number of the Central Hudson railroad's employes were working in and around its old round house at West Albany, the roof of the old dilapidated structure, overweighted with snow, fell, imprisoning several of them.

There were eight men buried beneath the timbers and snow. Of these, only two were very much injured. Engineer John Reeder had his right arm broken and was otherwise bruised. George Petrie sustained injuries about the body and legs.

The others escaped with slight bruises. There were thirteen engines in the house at the time.

Heaviest Storm Since the Blizzard.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—The snow storm in this city was the heaviest experienced here since the blizzard of 1888.

Floating Ice on the Hudson.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Dec. 27.—The Hudson river is packed with heavy floating ice from here to Sing Sing.

EXTORTED CONFESSIONS.

The Alleged Train Wrecker Says He Was Humbugged by Pinkerton.

TROY, N. Y., Dec. 27.—Detective Bob Pinkerton is not particularly happy today. In the Court of Sessions John Reed, the alleged train wrecker, was sworn tn his own behalf regarding the train wreckings on the Central road during the strike last summer.

He declared that he was humbugged by Pinkerton into making the so-called confession about the wrecking of the Montreal express and the misplacing of the "cabbage switch" near Greenbush on September 4, and swore that of his own knowledge he knew absolutely nothing about either affair. Pinkerton, he said, showed him what purported to be confessions of Kiernan and Cordial implicating him, Cain and Buett, and believing that he would better himself and being promised immunity from punishment and the services of the Central's lawyers he made the confession.

BLOWN TO ATOMS.

A New Jersey Town Shaken by an Explosion in a Powder Factory.

LAKE HOPATCONG, N. J., Dec. 27.—The residents of this place will not soon forget the explosion which blew up the cartridge house of the works of the American Forcite Powder Company near here at 7:30 a. m. The noise of the explosion was heard for several miles, and despite the heavy snow storm great crowds of people flocked to the works all day.

Two workmen, John R. Johnson and Mahlon Sperey, who were in the house at the time, were literally blown into fragments.

The remains of the two men were gathered up and removed to an adjoining shanty and the coroner notified.

SIXTY-FIVE DROWNED.

Chinese Passengers Leap from a Burning Vessel Into the Sea.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 27.—An awful catastrophe occurred at sea yesterday. The steamer Shanghai, engaged in passenger traffic, when off the town of Wu-Hu caught fire and was totally destroyed.

On board were 60 native passengers, who leaped from the deck into the sea. They are all believed to have been drowned.

ASHORE OFF DEAL BEACH.

The Three-Masted Schooner Yale a Total Wreck.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Dec. 27.—The three-master schooner Yale of New Haven, bound for Baltimore came ashore at 7 a. m. opposite Deal Beach, during a terrific gale. It was the intention of the captain to make Sandy Hook, but so intense was the gale that before Long Branch was reached the blinding storm prevented him or his crew from landing, and loosing his bearing the vessel went hopelessly ashore.

For a long time the captain and his crew fought to save the vessel, resorting to all the plans that ingenuity could suggest to prevent the wreck. They refused, until compelled to do so, to signal for help. The struggle was watched by a number of people who went down to the beach. They cast both anchors, but they would not hold, and gradually the vessel was pushed ashore.

The Yale is owned by Armstrong & Hodgson, of Baltimore.

Her crew, consisting of Captain R. Alexander Simpson and seven men, were taken off the vessel by means of the breeches buoy.

A large bark is reported wrecked off Bay Head. The shore wires are down and no information can be obtained.

Scalped in a Laundry.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—Mrs. Minnie Wilkes, the wife of the manager of a laundry at 197 First avenue, accidentally caught her hair in the belting of the machinery of the place and had her scalp torn from her head before the machinery could be stopped. She will probably die.

Struck by a Rail and Killed.

ST. JOHNSVILLE, N. Y., Dec. 27.—While John Colson, of this place, was engaged unloading rails at the depot in this village, he was struck on the head by a falling rail and instantly killed. He leaves a widow.

Gen. Spinner Dying Slowly.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 27.—Gen. Spinner has failed perceptibly the last day or two. How long he must continue to suffer cannot be foretold. He is simply dying slowly.

EXPLOSION IN A MINE

The Lives of More than One Hundred Men Imperilled.

THEY ESCAPE BY THE AIR SHAFT

The Accident Caused by a Miner's Lamp Setting Fire to a Barrel of Oil.

The Entire Population of Mount Pleasant, Pa., Rush to the Burning Shaft—Shouts of Joy When They Saw Their Friends Crawl to a Place of Safety—A Brave Superintendent.

POINT PLEASANT, Pa., Dec. 27.—Early in the morning a barrel of oil exploded in the underground stables at the United Coke Works of H. C. Frick & Co., near here. The explosion set fire to the hay and feed. The flames spread to all parts of the mine, which is now burning with frightful fury.

The tipple houses and several other buildings at the top of the shaft were also destroyed. Nearly all of the company's property above and below the shaft was burned. Sixteen mules also perished.

The fire was caused by stableman John Skroggs' lamp setting fire to a barrel of oil, which exploded. The burning oil scattered all about the stable. Skroggs battled with the flames, but without effect, and barely gained the top of the shaft when the flames followed him, setting fire to everything of an inflammable nature.

The Miners Escape.

There were 120 men at work in the burning mine. At the first alarm the entire population of the village rushed to the burning shaft and a babel of shrieking voices filled the air. Half an hour later a hopeful cheer came from the door of an air shaft a short distance away that changed the wailings of the almost frantic people into shouts of joy as they saw their friends crawling out of the little hole in the ground to a place of safety. All of the miners were saved.

Overcome by the Gas.

Mine-Master William West had discovered the flames and given a timely warning to the workmen who were scattered over a radius nearly a mile in extent. Mr. West, assuring himself that all his men were safe, with a dozen followers re-entered the mine and erected a brattice, preventing the flames from spreading in the heading. Charles Bowder, the company's master mechanic, ventured beyond the fire limit and was overcome by the gas. West dashed through the flames, dragging Bowder back to a place of safety and resuscitated him.

The company's loss will reach $75,000, and months will elapse before the works can be operated again.

ORDERS TO TELEGRAPHERS.

They Must Withdraw from the Brotherhood or Leave the Lake Shore Road.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.—An order order has been issued by William Kline, superintendent of telegraphs of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railways, requesting the members of the order of railway telegraphers in the employ of the company to withdraw from the order or resign their positions.

The reason assigned for this demand is said to be the opposition of the brotherhood to taking young men into their offices as apprentices and teaching them the business. This, it is said, the superintendent believes detrimental to the interests of the company.

The first order of the kind was issued last August by Superintendent Kline, when he sent a personal letter to all the telegraphers in the employ of the company, asking them to withdraw from the order, and also requesting those who would not do so to answer the letter and give the reason for not desiring to comply with the request. The letter created quite a stir among the men and many of them complied.

The Pope to Honor Mme. Carnot.

PARIS, Dec. 27.—It is reported in this city that the Pope intends to confer a special honor on Mme. Carnot by sending her the Golden Rose, which he blessed at the last Mid-Lent Sunday. As this honor is usually bestowed upon a Roman Catholic sovereign, the presentation of the Rose to the wife of the President of a European Republic will be a most significant incident, as indicating a change in his political attitude, according to the view taken of it here.

Seals Caught and Sold in Victoria.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—According to a special from Victoria, B. C, the total seals caught and disposed of in Victoria were 43,779 divided as follows: Canadian vessels, 39,547; American, 2,201; German, 1 041. The value of the seals is placed at $498,728.

THE SCOTCH STRIKE.

The Board of Trade Will Try to Force a Settlement of the Trouble.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—The strike on the Scotch railways is causing such a serious loss to merchants and business men of all sorts, all over the kingdom, that unless there is a settlement soon the Board of Trade will comply with the numerous appeals which are piling up before them and interfere to force an agreement of some kind.

The men have agreed to confer with the directors of the company, provided the secretary of their union is permitted to be present and give his counsel during the deliberations of the meeting. Considering that about 10,000 men are now out along the line of the railway system of Scotland, the strike is a phenomally orderly one. The most serious demonstrations thus far have amounted to nothing more than the occasional stoning of a non-unionist workman, and the hearty hooting and slanging of men who choose to stand by the companies.

It is just announced that the Board of Trade will not remain inactive longer than until Monday, and from present appearances there is no likelihood of the trouble being settled between the men and their employers by that time.

PADLEWSKI TRACED.

The Murderer of Seliverskoff has Made His Way to Bulgaria.

PARIS, Dec. 27.—Col. Pepoff, Chief of the Russian political police is now in Paris investigating the murder of General Seliverskoff. He makes a statement in which he claims that the anarchist, Padlewski, who is supposed to be the murderer, has been traced to Brindisi. From that port he took ship for Varna, and is believed to have made his way to Bulgaria, the only country in Europe in which Nihilists are considered, and protected, as political offenders. The law of that country operates to prevent the extradition of persons charged with the offense imputed to Padlewski.

The French anarchist journalist, Gregoire, recently sentenced by the Paris tribunal to eight months' imprisonment for assisting Padlewski to escape from Paris, has been arrested in Palermo at the instance of the French consul to that place. Gregoire had previously offered to surrender himself to the consul in order that he might be sent to Paris to testify at the trial of M. Labruyere and Mme. Duquercy. Gregoire will now be sent to France, there to serve his term of imprisonment.

A GIRL'S FEARFUL DEATH.

Caught on a Bridge by a Train Running at a High Rate of Speed.

LOCK HAVEN, Pa., Dec. 27.—Emma Mather was killed during the day on a railroad bridge near Halifax by a train running at a high rate of speed. She was half-way across it, and realizing her danger, attempted to drop through the ties into the creek below.

The space was too narrow, however, and while she was trying to squeeze through the engine struck her. All her clothing was torn from her as the locomotive passed her, killing her instantly. Her body dropped into the creek, and one of the men who helped to carry the crushed body to the shore stopped to see if he could identify it. Suddenly he exclaimed, "My God, it is my sister!" The girl was 23 years old.

Thrown from a Carriage and Killed.

WILLIMANTIC, Conn., Dec. 27.—While George H. Green and his wife and another man were riding down Ripley Hill, South Coventry, their horse became unmanageand ran away. While turning a corner Mr. and Mrs. Green were thrown out. Mr. Green died two hours later of internal hemorrhage. Mrs. Green is not expected to live. The third occupant of the carriage got safely out of the rear of the carriage while the horses were ascending the hill after the accident. Mr. and Mrs. Green belonged in Tolland and had been married only one week.

One Divorce Lawyer Confesses.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—Charles Buttner, the divorce lawyer, who was arrested, has made a partial confession to the police and acknowledges the committing of the crimes of forgery and larceny in connection with the bogus divorce will of Hughes and Campbell, which was recently exposed by ex-Mayor Pendleton of Fort Worth, Texas. Buttner says he is willing to pay the penalty for his crimes.

Shot by Accident.

MIFFLINTOWN, Pa., Dec. 27.—At a shooting match here a rifle in the hands of Samuel Dunn was accidentally discharged while he was in the act of putting on a cap, shooting Oscar Conrad, a boy in the crowd of spectators. The ball passed through his head, killing him almost instantly.

Cut His Throat on His Wife's Grave.

WARSAW, N. Y., Dec. 27.—C. P. Wing, a painter, cut his throat with a pocket knife on his wife's grave here. He made a bad gash, but the jugular was not cut and he may recover. His wife died some months ago and since then he has been despondent.

Two Cents Per Mile.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.—The Supreme Court of the State of Michigan has rendered a decision affirming the validity of the two cent per mile passenger rate law. The Michigan roads decided some time ago to ignore the law, being advised by counsel that it is unconstitutional.

Death of Mme. Haussman.

HELP FOR INDIANS.

They May Be Put Under Secretary Proctor's Care.

CONSIDERED BY THE CABINET.

A Plan to Have Army Officers Take the Place of Civilian Agents.

A Formal Report from Gen. Miles Has Been Received Recommending the Scheme—The War Department Receives Good News from the Indian Country—East Thunder and others May Surrender

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—It is stated today that the President and Cabinet have under consideration an earnest purpose to carry out, in a temporary way, the plan which the late Gen. Phil Sheridan so persistently urged, of transferring the management of the Indians from the Interior Department to the War Department. The manner in which the temporary experiment is to be attempted is by the removal of the civilian Indian agents at Pine Ridge, Rosebud and Standing Rock agencies, and the detail of army officers to take their places.

It is said that one of these Indian agents, who has been in office nearly 15 years, has amassed a fortune on a salary of $1,500 or $1,800 a year, and that it was the filing of a complaint as to his methods by Sitting Bull which caused all the recent trouble. The agent exerted his powers and cut off the rations, and the Indians resorted to "ghost dances" as a means of getting together and devising means to redress their grievances. Something to this effect was hinted at several days ago.

It is now said that a formal report from General Miles, recommending the experiment referred to, has been received and is being favorably considered.

The President and the World's Fair.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—The Attorney-General, at the request of the Secretary of the Treasury, has rendered an opinion in which he rules that under the provisions of the World's Fair law, the President is authorized to design such "additional articles for exhibition," outside of any department as he may see fit and proper. This grant of authority, the Attorney-General decides, also carries with it the power to employ such persons as shall be necessary to properly prepare and care for the articles so designated.

Miss Jones Disappears Again.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., Dec. 27.—Miss Jones, alias Frisbem, the housekeeper of Henry Adams, a miner of Everson, has disappeared again, taking with her over $350 in money and $1,600 or $1,800 in notes. Her disappearance is said to be due to the combined efforts of a couple of married men in Everson, whose objects in view were to secure a slice of the money. Miss Jones two weeks ago caused a sensation by similar actions, for which she was arrested in Pittsburg. The case at that time was settled with her old lover on condition that she return to his household.

Governor Beaver Surprised.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Dec. 27.—At a dinner given last evening by Governor and Mrs. Beaver to the members of the Governor's Cabinet, the host and hostess were given an agreeable surprise by the presentation to them of an elegant silver tea service as a token of the esteem and as a memorial of their 25th wedding anniversary. Ex-Secretary Stone made the presentation speech.

Rescued from Lynching.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Dec. 27.—John Maddine, a railroad laborer, attempted to assault Chris Kearcher's six-year-old daughter and he was arrested and locked up. A dozen men took him out of the jail shortly afterward and had a rope around his neck to hang him to the engine house tower when the officers rescued the man who had fainted with terror.

An Albany Bookkeeper Jailed.

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 27.—Daniel W. Talcott, who has been for a long time employed as chief bookkeeper for the firm of Sage & Co., was last night arrested and jailed on a charge of embezzlement. The amount of his peculations is said to be $10,000. He is said to have worked in collusion with Joseph B. Abbott, the defaulter, who lately suicided.

TRAGIC SUICIDES

Suspected Russian Students Prefer Death to Imprisonment at Siberia.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—Tragic consequences have followed the discovery by the Russian police of a Nihilist propaganda among the students of the Veterinary Institute at Dorpat, the Athens of the Northern Empire. A number of the students implicated in the conspiracy were arrested, and will doubtless soon be on their way to the prisons of Siberia, to spend the remainder of their lives in privation and misery.

Two of the suspected youths, however, determined to escape this wretched fate by taking their own lives. Having learned that the detectives were on their track, one of them, after a farewell interview with the young lady to whom he was betrothed, shot her dead in his arms, and immediately put another bullet through his own brain. It is supposed that the couple had mutually agreed to die together rather than endure a lifelong separation.

The other young man, after exhorting his fellow-students to remain loyal to their fellow-citizens, and dividing his books and other effects among them, cut his throat with a razor. Both the suicides were scions of well-to-do and influential families. The affair has caused a great sensation in Dorpat, where there are hundreds of young men from all parts of the empire studying at the university and the various schools.

Struck Another Great Gas Well.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Dec. 27.—Buffalo drillers have struck another great gas well in Canadian territory adjacent to Buffalo. Careful computation places the flow at 12,000,000 feet in 24 hours. Arrangements have been made to pipe the gas across the river to Buffalo, and the indications now are that considerable customs duties, at ten cents ad valorem, will be collected on it.

—"Laid up for repairs" is a sign frequently seen in our goings to and fro in the world. It will be admitted as a fact in this connection that many things are "laid up" in the repairing. At Collier's, however, repairing is an art synonymous with renewing, and whatsoever is done there is well done, and you can rely on it.

SANTA CLAUS IN THE VALLEY.

Abundant Gifts Bestowed on the Washingtonville Chapel People.

The first Christmas festival held in the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel at Washingtonville, took place last evening. The members of the Sunday school, with their parents and friends, filled the main room to its full capacity. The exercises were participated in and enjoyed by those present in a spirit that showed that they appreciated the efforts of the committee who so kindly worked to make everything a success. It was by far the most successful entertainment the school has had. Much of the success of the evening's enjoyment is due to Miss Minnie Wilson, whose zeal and earnest efforts for the promotion of the pleasure of those present had much to do towards making it a success. A handsomely dressed tree was the cynosure of many bright eyes.

The evening's exercises began by the use of Dr. Lowry's Christmas Service, the Sunday school singing "Jesus Reigns." Master Eddie Clark in his inimitable style gave a recitation entitled "A Vote of Thanks to Santa Claus." A quartette by four little girls, Carrie and Bessie Bullman, Ettie Acker and Minnie Deal, entitled "A Merry, Merry Christmas," was then sung. Master Fred. Bonny gave a recitation entitled "Santa Claus and the Mouse" to the great delight of the audience. The Christmas carol "Zion Awake," by the school, was next, followed by a recitation "The Night After Christmas," by Carrie Bullman. "The Old Old Song," by the school, showed the drilling of the voices to time and tune in this superb Christmas hymn by Fanny Crosby. A recitation by Master Harry Acker followed.

One of the features of the festival was the entrance of one of the Western Union boys with dispatches to Mr. Bonny from Santa Claus, stating that as the sleighing was played out he would be a little late, but when the bells on the reindeer was heard coming over the mountain the delight of the children knew no bounds; and when Santa Claus came down an improvised chimney loaded with presents for the boys and girls there were exclamations of joy. Santa again climbed up the chimney, this time to bring down two presents, and in a neat speech told how he had heard of the work of Superintendent Bonny and Secretary J. H. Manning and asked that they would accept them as a token of the appreciation of the members of the Sunday school for their kindly efforts.

The organ standing near the chimney attracted the attention of Santa, and knowing the painstaking and earnest efforts of Miss Nettie J. Beeching, the organist, in the interest of the Sunday school, he drew a curtain aside, bringing into view a handsome rocking chair, which in a few well chosen words he presented in the name of the members of the Sunday school. Iced cream and cake were then served to the audience, oranges and candy were distributed, and after a short time spent in pleasant intercourse, the audience went home voting it one of the jolliest Christmas festivals ever held. R.

Messrs Macy, Lyle and Van Vliet Entertain.

Notwithstanding the severe storm, about fifty children of the primary department of the Sunday school assembled in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church yesterday afternoon. A Christmas tree, with Santa Claus represented by D. M. Van Vliet, delighted their eyes, and there was a present for every one.

In the evening the main school were entertained by J. Williams Macy, the well known humorist of New York, and Will Lyle who pleased all with his banjo solos and plantation songs, Mr. Macy is undoubtedly unexcelled in his line. His Irish and Italian dialect recitations are excellent, and his facial expression is constantly changing. He is good also in the pathetic, and he possesses besides a very fine bass voice, which adds greatly to the pleasure he is able to give. After the entertainment refreshments were served in the parlor below.

An Election and a Banquet.

The following officers of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., were elected at last night's meeting:

M. of E.—B. B. Force.
K. of R. and S. J. F. Wakefield.
Representative to G. L.—Jos. C. Blimm.
Alternate Representative—James Patterson.
Trustee—G. W. Clark.

These will be installed Friday evening, January 2, 1891. At last night's meeting 40 delegates from Somerset Lodge, Bound Brook, were present. An excellent collation was served.

Christmas in the German Church.

Christmas morning at 10:30, a regular and well attended service was held, and nobody was permitted to depart without feeling that it was Christmas Day. At 7 o'clock p. m., the christmas tree entertainment was tendered to the Sunday school, and a very pleasing affair it was. The exercises consisted of suitable recitations, quotations from the Bible, and singing by the scholars, an address by the pastor and distribution of fine presents to the children. Happy faces abounded.

—Assessor John M. C. Marsh, of Westfield, fell down the steps of the First National bank, the other day, and almost broke his leg. He was loaded down with money that made his fall the heavier.

If the Freight House Were Moved.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—If there were a probability that the freight house would be removed, the problem of safety to passengers for the trains would be easy of solution. By using the two outer tracks for passenger, and fencing the two inner ones from them for freight trains; then with bridges over, or a well lighted tunnel under them from the basement of the station to a nice long covered platform, there could be no danger from passing trains. As the station stands high up from the street, the basement is well adapted for the purpose, is of easy access from the sidewalk of North avenue, and, if well finished and lighted and connected with the ticket office and waiting room above by nice broad stairways, would also make another good waiting room Southsiders could reach the cars quickly and easily through a pleasant park, and a walk and driveway direct to Park avenue would accommodate both South and Northsiders who come to the Eastbound trains through that street.

T. W. MOORE.

Counter-Charges on a Club Car.

David P. Hall has preferred charges against a prominent member of the Fanwood Club Car, accusing him of inserting in the columns of THE PRESS an article reflecting upon him. The charges were in writing and placed in the hands of Mr. Keeler, of Westfield, who is said to be one of the executive committee of the car. Upon Mr. Keeler's submitting the charges to the member referred to, the gentleman replied that he did not know that Mr. Hall could not practice law in New Jersey until he was so informed by Mr. Hall himself. Immediately thereafter, it is reported, the Treasurer of the car accused Mr. Keeler of instigating a system of gambling. THE PRESS is awaiting developments of the charges preferred by the respective gentlemen.

—The merry jingle of sleigh bells is music to the livery stable man—and to everybody else.

Mr. EDITOR
OF THE PRESS.

I wish to put in print my congratulations upon Plainfield's largest business year in its history—in my judgment.

The opinion among many merchants is that the citizens of Plainfield have done more to encourage home trade this season than ever before, and as for me I am willing to encourage its increase

In the year to come, by offering the best goods at the lowest prices, with a large assortment to select from.

The first thing after the great Holiday rush is over, is to look after the Winter stock, and see that it is got out of the way for the Spring goods.

THERE will be an excellent opportunity to get bargains in all such articles at Edsall's now, as his house will put a price on them that will make them move off lively.

THIS SEASON'S trade has gone away ahead of previous years, and we are just in humor to give our patrons a chance to save some money on what they may need in this line.

Fur Capes and Muffs are not wanted in our store now. Their room is better than their company, and they must go.

Woolen Underwear and Mittens, and such like, will be obliged to leave our counters; they can be excused.

You had better come in and see what we are doing.

No reasonable offer will be refused for the balance of our Holiday gifts.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

(In Charge of Superintendent of Press Work.)

W. C. T. U. MEETINGS.

Sundays — Consecration service, 9:15 A. M.; praise service, 4 P. M.; Thursdays —Special programme each week, 3:30 P. M. Saturdays—Gospel temperance meeting, 7:45 P. M. 73 West Front street.

If you are not already a member of the White Ribbon Army, will you not weigh conscientiously the question of joining it, and see if you are not losing an opportunity of entering at an open door which will yield you a rich blessing in your mental and spiritual life and lead you into a new world of usefulness?

AN UNERRING MARKSMAN.

"Whisky never misses fire," said a man to us the other day. No; it never does. It is sure to bring down its victim sooner or later, whether he be high or low in the social or intellectual scale. And fluttering all about him will be the wounded hearts of mother, father, wife, children, sisters, brother and friends, while beyond and behind all this is too often a trial of ruined virtue and contaminating influences. At least six hearts on an average carry a lifelong, overshadowing, dreary sorrow, for every victim alcohol brings down. The undertow of all family and social life is largely silent sorrow and dreary heartache over the victims of alcohol. No: whisky never misses fire! never!

A STINGING REBUKE.

Another stinging rebuke of the inconsistencies of "fashionable" church members is told by The Christian Advocate, which says:

A Chinaman applied for the position of cook in a family in one of our Western cities. The lady of the house and most of the family were members of a fashionable church, and they were determined to look well after the character of the servants. So, when John Chinaman appeared at the door he was asked, "Do you drink whiskey?" "No," said he; "I Clistian man," "Do you play cards?" "No; I Clistian man." He was employed and gave great satisfaction. He did his work well, was honest, upright, correct, and respectful. After some weeks the lady gave a "progressive euchre" party, and had wines at the table. John Chinaman was called upon to serve the party, and did so with grace and acceptability. But next morning he waited on the lady and said he wished to quit work. "Why, what is the matter?" she inquired. John answered: "I Clistian man; I tole you so before, no heathen! No workee for Melican heathen!"

Who the Soloists Are.

The soloists engaged to assist in the oratorio of "Elijah," which is to be given at the first concert of the Plainfield Choral Society, at Music Hall, next Tuesday evening, are among the very best that New York city affords. Mrs. Charles Tyler Dutton, known to many as Miss Bessie Grovesteen, ably filled Miss Beebe's place in Dr. Paxton's church until she received a better offer in Brooklyn, where she now sings. Mrs. Sarah Baron Anderson is so well known here, that merely to say that she is going to sing is sufficient recommendation. Wm. H. Rieger is considered by many (including the conductor of the Melopoia), the finest tenor in New York city, while Dr. Carl E. Martin is grand, and in every way suited to take the part of Elijah, which is the most prominent one in the oratorio.

The orchestra from the Philharmonic Society will be somewhat larger than heretofore, thus dispensing with the necessity of a piano.

A Bicycle for the Pastor.

The Rev. C. B. Mitchell, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, was completely surprised at the conclusion of the Christmas exercises last night. When Frank French rolled into the room on a high-grade Columbia safety bicycle, and P. Minturn Smith in a neat and appropriate speech presented it to the pastor in the name of the people of the church, the audience cheered, and the recipient expressed his gratitude.

Mr. Mitchell said it was probably the first time a minister had ever been called upon to preach on such a subject, but he believed there was in the Bible an appropriate text. This he found in Ezekiel x, 19—"When they went out, the wheels also were beside them." He told of his experience in learning to ride and thanked all sincerely and heartily for the particularly welcome present they had chosen.

The Seventh Commandment.

"'Parson Haines', the famous commercial traveler,"—says the Fort Wayne News—"yesterday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. Hall, delivered one of the most sensible and practical talks on a theme of absorbing interest that a Fort Wayne male audience ever heard. It was on the Seventh Commandment, and was one of his grandest efforts for purit An immense audience was present, and the exhortation was enthusiastically received." Mr. Haines, who is a resident of Netherwood, will speak on the same subject at the Y. M. C. A., Sunday at 4:15 P. M.

Boys, Attention.

A meeting for boys to be addressed by Robert G. Smith and Milton A. Craft, will be held to-morrow at 4:15 p. m., at 59 North avenue. All boys are invited to attend.

"Laws grind the poor, and rich men rule the law." But let us be thankful that any poor sufferer can buy with only 25c a bottle of Salvation Oil.

The enormous sale of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup has developed many new remedies, but the people cling to the old reliable, Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

They May Modestly Blush, But Their Fame Is Deserved.

(From the Elizabeth Journal.)

New Jersey girls have given the world at large the most emphatic evidence of both their beauty and good sense. And they have given it unconsciously, which makes it all the more conclusive. The evidence to which reference is made is found in the following from the Plainfield Press:

The agent of the Board of Health has been searching up and down the State for cosmetic and face washes and finds that they are a scarce article in New Jersey. A month ago he received notice from the Board of Health of Massachusetts that two brands of facewash, extensively advertised, and manufactured in New York, were full of poison. After reading the analysis and seeing danger ahead for the New Jersey girl, he instructed his deputies to go on a search for these particular washes and get samples of any other that looked suspicious. Only two places in the State were found selling the articles.

Now the moral of the face wash and cosmetic habit is not the application. New Jersey girls don't need such stuffs. They are pretty enough without them. Everybody in New Jersey knows this. The New Jersey girls know it. Moreover, their commonsense tells them that the use of such trash destroys rather than enhances natural beauty. So they refuse to use these patented stuffs, and lo, the State Board of Health finds that facewashes and cosmetics are a scarce article in New Jersey, and makes official mention of the fact. All unconsciously, therefore, the New Jersey girls have been making themselves famous for their personal beauty and good sense. They may modestly blush to find themselves thus officially appreciated, but they deserve their fame.

A Borough Official Recommends a Borough Government.

Mayor Charles Place, of North Plainfield, has written a letter giving the people of Bound Brook his views of the advantages to be derived from a borough government. Among other things he says:

The growth of North Plainfield since it became a Borough in 1885, has been very marked, and it is still growing. This has been largely because we have all the improvements of the city of Plainfield, and we are, as fast as we can, keeping pace with that city. If Bound Brook is to grow and increase substantially, in my judgment a Borough government will be the government for her to adopt. Once tried she will not go back where she now is. She has many advantages over other suburban towns—fast trains which do not stop between there and New York, competing railroads and canal, and a good healthy location.

Extra Precaution on the Central.

Little delay was occasioned to the New JerseyCentral trains by yesterday's storm, though all along the line the wind blew a strong gale, and the fast-falling snow was drifted in some places to a formidable depth. Unless the storm increased greatly during the day little fear of any serious blockade was had by the officials. As a result of the blizzard of 1888, extra precautions against a snow blockade were taken by the New Jersey Central officials, and orders were issued to have all the snow-ploughs in readiness should the storm continue severe; But the storm abated, and the snowploughs were not needed.

Charley Hyde's Money Unnecessary.

Postmaster W. B. R. Mason, of Bound Brook, who is also editor of the Chronicle, writes to Editor Pearsall of the Westfield Standard advising the latter town to start its own bank without obligation to Charley Hyde of this city. Mr. Mason says: "No doubt Mr. Hyde is induced by only the best motives to make the offers that he has made, but my opinion is that you do not want his capital nor that of any other person interested in a neighboring bank."

Collision on the Central Railroad.

There was a slight wreck on the Central Railroad Tuesday morning, near Bound Brook. Engine No. 310 ran into the tail end of a train pulled by engine 107. A caboose and three coal cars were badly wrecked, and 310 lost a headlight and was considerably the worse for the shaking up. Nobody was hurt, but it was a narrow escape, as there are generally one or more men in cabooses.

The Senatorial Contest.

Testimony in the contest of Senator-elect Keys's seat is being taken at the Court House in Somerville today. The examination was begun at ten o'clock this morning. Craig A. Marsh conducts the examination for Mr. Reed, the contestant, and the Hon. A. A. Clark, Mr. Reed's father-in-law, represents Mr. Keys.

A Railroad's Gift.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad has given ten acres of land at South Somerville for an industrial school for the colored people. An effort is now being made to raise $5,000 with which to erect a school building.

Miss Liberty, who holds aloft the torch on Bedloe's Island, in New York harbor, rejoices in what is literally an iron constitution, and so we don't think it worth while to recommend to her the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. But this is the one great exception which proves the rule. For all the rest of womankind the "Favorite Prescription" is indispensable. The young girl needs its strengthening help. The matron and the mother find in it invigoration and relief from the numerous ills which beset their existence. And ladies well advanced in years universally acknowledge the revivifying and restorative effects of this favorite and standard remedy. The only medicine for women, sold by druggists under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

—A colored clergyman who was visiting in Bloomington is the "Bound Brook Minister" who married William Smock, colored, to a white girl, as copied last week from the Somerville Demoarat. Several of our ministers refused to perform the ceremony.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

Why not, when you have a cold, take a remedy that you can depend upon to cure you? Hires' Cough Cure is a remedy above all others. It has cured a larger percentage of cases, where it has been tried, than any other cough preparation made. Do not forget it.

A Father Accidentally Kills His Child.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Dec. 27.—John Frick and his seven-year-old son, of this place, went gunning in the morning, returning at noon. The father undertook to remove the loads remaining in the gun. The weapon was discharged, the ball entering the boy's forehead, killing him instantly. The father is almost crazed with grief, and a watch is kept on him for fear he will hurt himself.

Barely Escaped With Their Lives.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., Dec. 27.—The frame residence of Joseph Standen of Pendleton was burned to the ground early in the morning. The family barely escaped with their lives and passed the rest of the night in the barn covered with hay to keep them from freezing to death. A young son had his feet frozen in the snow.

Looking for a Reunion.

PARIS, Dec. 27.—The Temps says that after the meeting of Mr. Parnell and Mr. O'Brien, a formal conference will be held between Messrs. McCarthy, Redmond, O'Kelly, Sexton, Kenny and Arthur O'Connor, the aim being a reunion on the basis of the temporary retirement of Mr. Parnell.

Will Not Accept Parnell as a Leader.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—The general sentiment of all anti-Parnellites in this city is that Messrs. Gladstone and Morley, as well as the Irish Catholic hierarchy, will never consent to Parnell being acknowledged as leader, and that any agreement at the Paris conference ignoring those factors would of necessity be void.

Bishop O'Donnell's Views.

DUBLIN, Dec. 27.—Bishop O'Donnell, of Raphoe, writes to the Irish Catholic expressing regret that the Irish people did not blame Mr. Parnell immediately for his moral fault, instead of so acting as to give him a handle wherewith to work the ruin of the party, and perhaps the country.

AN ORDINANCE

For preventing or removing from the streets of the City of Plainfield obstructions, encroachments, encumberances and nuisances, and concerning the laying down of iron, lead, glass, wood or other pipes for the conveyance of water or gas in said streets.

Section 1. That no person or persons or corporation shall place or cause to be placed upon any of the streets, roads, highways, sidewalks or alleys of said city any pipes or castings of iron or other metal, or of other hard substance without first obtaining from said Common Council a designation of the streets, roads, highways, sidewalks or alleys in which the same may be placed and the manner of placing the same under penalty of a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars for each offence.

Section 2. That no person or persons or corporation shall dig or plow or otherwise disturb the surface of any of the streets, roads, highways, alleys or sidewalks of said city without first obtaining from said Common Council a designation of such street, roads, highways, alleys and sidewalks, and of the manner in which the work may be done under penalty of a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars for each offence.

Section 3. That no person or persons or corporation shall lay down, or cause to be laid down, iron, lead, glass, wood or other pipes for the conveyance of water or gas in the streets, highways, alleys and sidewalks of said city without first obtaining from the Common Council of said city a designation of the streets, highways, alleys and sidewalks in which the same may be laid and in what part thereof the same may be laid and the manner of laying the same under penalty of a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars for each offence.

Section 4. That any person or persons who or corporation which shall fail to remove from the streets, roads, highways, sidewalks or alleys of said city any pipes or castings of iron or other metal, or other hard substance, that shall have been placed or caused to be placed thereon by such person or persons or corporation in violation of Section 1 of this ordinance within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by the Street Commissioner of said city shall be liable to the penalty of twenty dollars fine for each day that such failure to remove as aforesaid shall continue.

Section 5. That any person or persons who or corporation which shall fail to remove from the streets, roads, highways, sidewalks or alleys of said city any iron, lead, glass, wood or other pipes for the conveyance of water or gas that such persons or corporation may have laid down or caused to be laid down contrary to the provisions of Section 2 of this ordinance, within twenty-four hours after being notified so to do by the Street Commissioner of said city shall be liable to the penalty of twenty dollars fine for each day that such failure to remove as aforesaid shall continue.

Section 6. That nothing in the preceding sections of this ordinance shall be construed to prevent the repair of pipes laid in pursuance of the provisions of this ordinance nor the repair of any gas pipes that shall have been laid prior to the adoption of this ordinance, nor to prevent the temporary use or disturbance of the streets, roads, highways, alleys and sidewalks for the purpose of making such repairs.

Section 7. That no person or persons or corporation shall carry on or maintain a system of water works within the limits of the said city of Plainfield until there shall first have been introduced into said city a system of sewerage adequate and sufficient to carry off such waters as may be supplied by said system of water works so as not to endanger the health or well being of the inhabitants of said city; but nothing in this ordinance contained shall be construed to apply to or interfere with the contract heretofore entered into between said city and the Water Works Company of Plainfield. Any person or persons or corporation who shall violate any of the provisions of this section shall be liable to the penalty of a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars for every day that such violation shall continue.

Reduction in Prices for Cash!
TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.
AFTER DECEMBER 15, 1890,
The Plainfield Produce Company
Will Sell All Goods Strictly for Cash!
We will present a few reasons for making this change in our manner of doing business. In the first place we have our Hay, Grain and Produce inspected and bought direct from the Producer for Cash. Thereby obtaining better quality, also saving one profit, which would go to the commission merchant if bought from sample the usual way.
In the second place any concern doing an extensive credit business must get larger profits to offset slow and worthless accounts, of which with the greatest care there will be some. And the customer who is ready to pay and does pay his bills when presented, is the one who must pay these larger profits.
By selling for cash we avoid losses from such accounts, and can afford to sell for smaller profits.
We ask for a share of your patronage. Give us a call and we will show you how low we can sell for CASH, instead of how high we must sell for credit.

RELIGIOUS MATTERS.

THE NEW YEAR.

A year untried before me lies,
What shall it bring of strange surprise
Or joy, or grief? I can not tell;
But God, my Father, knoweth well.
I make it no concern of mine,
But leave it all with Love Divine.

Be sickness mine, or rugged health,
Come penury to me, or wealth;
Though lonesome I must pass along,
Or loving friends my way may throng
Upon my Father's Word I rest,
Whatever shall be, shall be best.

No ill can come but He can cure,
His Word doth all of good insure;
He'll see me through the journey's length
For daily need give daily strength.
'Tis thus I fortify my heart,
And thus do fear and dread depart.

The sun may shed no light by day,
Nor stars at night illume my way;
My soul shall still know no affright,
Since God is all my Life and Light.
Though all the earthly lamps grow dim
He walks in light who walks with Him.

O Year untried, thou hast for me
Nought but my Father's eye can see;
Nor canst thou bring me loss or gain,
Or health or sickness, ease or pain,
But welcome messenger shall prove
From Him whose name to me is Love.
—R. M. Offord, in N. Y. Observe

A MARKING OF TIME.

The Beginning of a New Year is a Time of Sober Thought.

Does this phrase, a new year, designate any thing more than a device by which we deceive ourselves? It is indisputable that our present division of time is purely an arbitrary arrangement. The Jewish year does not coincide with the Christian. The Christian year would be as much a year if it began in midsummer, instead of midwinter. The seasons are a fixed, natural order; the calendar is an artificial, arbitrary arrangement. In one sense, a new year begins every day. Every moment is a point of departure, if you are pleased to regard it so.

None the less, the construction of a common calendar is inevitable; and as wise as necessary. Man is a son of Time. The conception of time as subject to division, and of his own share of time as matter of limitation, may be called birth-marks of his mind. Similarly, the sense of time as prefatory to an immeasurable future, is inwoven with the very constitution of the human spirit. The vague apprehensions of "failings from us, vanishings," resolved by poet and philosopher into an evidence of pre-existence, are not universal, necessary and well-defined elements of man's conscious life as are his aspirations toward an endless future, and his anticipations of its solemn realities. The former shade off into an obscure and uncertain region where no light falls upon them from a Divine revelation; the latter grow with our growth, strengthen themselves amid the disappointments of our present experience, and are certified by His word who "brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel."

They, then, to whom the beginning of a new year is a time of self-searching and sober thought are wise according to the wisdom of God. "So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom," was the prayer of a man already partaker of the boon he craved. It is a prayer that God still delights to answer. He who arranged the division of light from darkness into day and night; He who set the seasons for signs is well pleased in those who miss no opportunity to impress upon themselves the transiency of human life, and its solemnity, as the prelude to the life beyond death. "The life indeed" is more firmly grasped and more richly realized by him, to whom the close of one year and the opening of another is a season of serious thought, than by Him to whom all seasons come alike, so indifferent is he to their order, or their change.

Nor is there any arrangement that carries with it a more practical imparta-tion of God's mercy to man than his sense of time and the necessity for its notation. The emphasis thus put upon the possibility of a new start is a most gracious token of Divine love and goodness. To be permitted to "forget the things that are behind," as behind, is one of the most helpful incentives to "reach forth unto the things that are before." The very fact that our sense of the year is inevitable, proclaims our Father as "the God of Hope," to whom it is a pleasure to have His children hopeful. The coming of the New Year is thus the assurance that within and behind it is the love of Him who inhabiteth eternity. The dawning of its first day is the expression of His desire that all our years may be both new and blessed.—Christian Inquirer.

THE QUEEN OF BEAUTY.

A Time When the Plainest of Wives Are the Most Beautiful of Women.

There is a time when the plainest wife is a queen of beauty to her husband. She has done the work of life. She has reared her children for God and Heaven, and though some of them may be a little wild they will yet come back, for God has promised. She is dying, and her husband stands by. They think over all the years of their companionship—the weddings and the burials, the ups and downs, the successes and the failures. They talk over the goodness of God and His faithfulness to children and children's children. She has no fear about going. The Lord has sustained her so many years she would not dare to distrust Him now. The lips of both of them tremble as they say goodbye and encourage each other about an early meeting in a better world. The breath is feebler and feebler, and stops. Are you sure of it? Just hold that mirror at the mouth and see if there is any vapor gathering on the surface. Gone! As one of the neighbors takes the old man by the arm gently and says: "Come, you had better go into the next room and rest," he says: "Wait a moment; I must take one more look at that face and at those hands. Beautiful! Beautiful!"—Talmage, in N. Y. Observer.

—Sleep is Death's younger brother, and so like him, that I never dare trust him without my prayers.—Sir T. Brown.

GIVE QUICKLY.

An Old Maxim That Applies Nicely in Many Cases.

"He gives twice who gives quickly," is not only a sound rule of benevolence, but a most true and vital principle with regard to a great many other things besides the giving of money. Sympathy, promptly expressed, soothes and comforts an aching heart; it does little good if it waits to utter itself until the first need is passed. Pleasant words spoken at the right moment will often bring back the sunshine to spirits clouded by anger or impatience; they are of small avail unless they meet the crisis when it arises. "In the day when I cried, Thou answeredst me," was the grateful Psalmist's acknowledgment o God's "very present" help. We should aim at a similar readiness in doing wha we can for the happiness of those about us.

Swift kindnesses are best; a long delay
In kindness takes the kindness all away.

More than that, opportunities for being kind to people are lost if they are no at once improved. A woman who was not merely good, but wise, once wrote in her journal: "I expect to pass through this world but once. Any good thing therefore, that I can do, or any kindness that I can show to my fellow creature, let me do it now. Let me no defer or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again."—N. Y. Examiner.

Obstacles That Help.

The other day I watched a street-car which had got on the wrong track, and was interested to see what the driver did to get it on the right one again. Finding that his horses were powerless to drag the clumsy vehicle off the rails, he took a large spike and laid it under one of the front wheels. Then he started up his team, and at the first pull the car was jerked from the rails, and after bumping for a minute or two over the stones rolled into the track where it ought to run! How often the providence of God treats us as that driver did his car. We go astray and get on a fatally wrong track. Perhaps we don't try much to get back on the right one; but if we do, our efforts are vain. Then God puts some obstacle in our way which throws us out of the path we are taking. It seems pretty rough traveling for a time, but after a while we discover that the hinderance has been the means of bringing us once more into the safe and happy road.—N Y. Examiner.

Some Good Rules.

The following rules for the guidance of life are by the celebrated Mrs. Fry: 1. Never lose any time. I do not consider that lost which is spent in amusement or recreation every day; but always be in the habit of being employed. 2. Never err the least in truth. 3. Never say an ill thing of a person when thou canst say a good thing of him. Not only speak charitably but feel so. 4. Never be irritable or unkind to any body. 5. Never indulge in luxuries that are not necessary. 6. Do all things with consideration, and when thy path to act right is most difficult, put confidence in that Power alone which is able to assist thee, and exert thine own powers as far as they go.

Without Their Aid.

John L. Sullivan's friend, the Marquis of Queensberry, is opposed to Christianity because it has done so little for the poor. It is in order at the present moment to ask the noble lord if "reverent agnosticism" has built hospitals, asylums, houses of refuge, homes for the erring and friendless, ragged schools and charitable mission houses? Whatever active charity is in the world at present is the result of Christian effort. Agnostics, men of science, infidels and atheists may have contributed, but their help—compared with the religious efforts—has been a single drop in a mighty ocean. There is not a single charity in America that owes its existence to reverent agnosticism.—Chicago Journal.

When to March Forward.

As it is better to go forward than to retreat in a right cause, so it is better to retreat than to go forward in a wrong cause. And yet there is a false sentiment in the minds of men that there is virtue in pressing forward, in and of itself. "I'm in for it now, and I'll go through with it," is often said with a certain air of heroism. But it is better, says Ruskin, "not to prefer mean victory to honorable defeat; not to lower the level of our aim, that we may the more surely enjoy the complacency of success."—S. S. Times.

Suffering is not always the evil that to our sensibilities it seems to be. —N. Y. Independent.

HELPFUL CYCLONES.

One of the Kansas Variety Prevents a Terrible Accident.

WHILE crossing Kansas, somebody introduced the subject of cyclones. "Don't you live in perpetual dread of those devastating wind-storms—those terrible manifestations of the angry elements, commonly called cyclones?" asked the Massachusetts parson.

"Well, not to any great extent," answered the passenger from Sedgwick County. "You see we all have a cyclone-hole in the back-yard, and when the elements look a little too manifesting for comfort we take to kiver till the show's over. You don't mind cyclones a great deal after you've lived right among 'em for awhile, and, besides, back East you only hear half the story. Cyclones, especially Kansas cyclones, have their good freaks as well as bad. They ain't always bent ou devilment, but often do a man a big favor when he's in a tight place. Why, last summer, when Bill Simkins, whose ranch jines mine, was short of help, at harvest time, a cyclone came prancing along just as he finished cutting his five hundred acres of wheat, gathered every sheaf up clean and stacked it round his threshing-machine. Prettiest stacks that were ever seen in Sedgwick County, too; people come thirty miles to see 'em."

"That reminds me of a favor a cyclone did for me in the spring of '78," said the passenger from Sumner County: "I was then living up on the Smoky Hill river, on rented land. The outlook wasn't very glittering, and so I made up my mind one morning to move down to Sumner County and take up a quarter section. I talked it over with my wife, and before long we had our traps together, ready to start. Well, that night a frolicsome but gentle and obliging cyclone picked up the house and entire outfit, and set 'em down safe and sound almost before you could say 'scat!' on the best unoccupied hundred and sixty acres in Sumner.

LIFTED FROM THE TRACK.

"Swept up the old ranch clean; didn't leave behind a thing that was worth bringing away, and didn't shake a brick off the chimney. Found my axe and wood-pile right by the back door, too, as usual."

"Did it move the well?" asked the consumptive passenger.

"Well, no," answered the passenger from Sumner County; "you see, the well belonged to the man who owned the ground."

"I remember that cyclone," said the editor of the Wakarusa Bird of Freedom. "But I have in mind another cyclone whose work was far more miraculous, and which saved many valuable lives, including my own.

"I was returning from Dodge City, where I had been attending, as a delegate, a State temperance convention. Just a little bit west of Florence, the engineer spied a 'wild' freight coming round a curve toward us, with the throttle open.

"Some of the passengers, who were looking out of the windows, saw if almost at the same moment with the engineer, and their cheeks blanched, you may believe. We braced ourselves for the expected crash, and, though probably it was not more than five seconds, it seemed to be a year before I could draw another breath. Then somebody looked out of the rear door, swung his hat and gave three cheers. The freight train, which a moment before had seemed to be coming down on us like the wolf on the fold, was now speeding away behind us toward the setting sun.

"A bob-tailed cyclone, which had been hovering in our rear for half an hour or so, had saved us.

"At the very moment our destruction had seemed inevitable the cyclone had caught up with us, our train had been lifted from the track, while the 'wild' freight had passed under us, and we had been set down again on the rails so softly that not even my pocket flask was broken. Then the cyclone had gone on its way rejoicing.

"Of course the engineer stuck to his post, employes never 'jump' on the Santa Fe route, and we pulled into Florence on time. Conductor Brady growled a little, because, he said, the 'thunderbolt' was entitled to the right of way; and, according to railroad regulations, the cyclone should have lifted the freight and allowed our train to pass under; but, you may believe, we were all mighty glad the thing turned out as well as it did, and none of us carried home any hard feelings against the bob-tailed cyclone."—Scott Way, in Puck.

POPULAR SCIENCE.

DRUGS FROM OINTMENTS.

Dr. A. P. Luff Talks Learnedly About Their Absorption.

The author describes some experiments he has made with the object of ascertaining to what extent drugs spread upon the skin in the form of ointments are absorbed into the general circulation. The several ointments containing soluble drugs were prepared, and each ointment was placed inside a sheep's bladder; the bladder was suspended in a beaker of distilled water, kept at a uniform temperature of 98 degrees Fahrenheit in a water bath. The ointments were prepared with three different substances as a basis, viz.: vaseline, lard and lanolin. The results of these experiments are thus classified: Vaseline and iodide of potassium, exosmosis commenced at end of one hour; lard and iodide of potassium, at end of nine hours; lanolin and iodide of potassium, nil at end of twenty-four hours; vaseline and carbolic acid, exosmosis commenced at end of two and three-quarter hours; lard and carbolic acid at end of seven hours; lanolin and carbolic acid, nil at end of twenty-four hours; vaseline and resorcin, exosmosis commenced at end of ten hours; lard and resorcin, at end of fifteen hours; lanolin and resorcin, nil at end of twenty-four hours. These experiments have all been performed with sheep's bladders, but the author hopes to be able to publish the results of further experiments on the living subject. The practical lesson to be learned from this paper is that if an ointment is employed with the view of its active ingredients being absorbed, then vaseline is by far the best excipient to use; but if an ointment is employed for its local effect only, absorption of its active ingredient not being desired, then lanolin is the best excipient for such an ointment.—Journal of Dermatology.

IMITATION POTTERY.

A Wooden Pitcher Transformed Into a Thing of Beauty.

Although a great variety of articles may be successfully made of wood and finished in imitation of pottery, only one example will be given. This is a pitcher having an annular body with molded base and top. These parts are made of well seasoned pine glued together, and further secured by screws. A hard wood handle is firmly attached, and the whole is varnished with shellac varnish and allowed to dry thoroughly. A design is drawn on the pitcher and filled in a portion at a time with shellac varnish, slightly colored with some pigment. Before the varnish becomes entirely dry the surface is covered with bird shot No. —, which adheres and forms a nodular surface. When all the varnish-coated surfaces are covered with shot, the varnish is allowed to dry, after which the entire vase is painted with white or cream-colored oil paint.

WOODEN PITCHER, FINISHED IN IMITATION OF POTTERY.

After the first coat is perfectly dry it is smoothed with fine sandpaper. A second coat of the same kind is applied, and when dry, smoothed as before. The paint for the final coat is mixed with varnish to give the vase a gloss. As soon as this coat becomes tacky, the parts covered with shot are brushed over with a piece of chamois skin sparingly charged with gold bronze powder. This gilds the projecting convex surface of the shot, leaving the rest of the original color.

The effect is fine. This vase, if made twenty or twenty-four inches high, may be placed on the floor in any suitable nook or corner.—Scientific American.

PROGRESS IN SCIENCE.

The harbor of Batoum, originally intended to hold twenty steamers, is to be deepened and made sufficiently large to contain thirty-three vessels.

In the London Spectator it is stated that Mr. E. T. Chaplin, by hypnotizing a laying hen, induced her to sit on a number of eggs until chickens were hatched.

The new underground electric railway in London is held to be a departure that marks an important development in electric traction and a distinct advance.

A centrifugal machine for making sugar has lately been invented which is continuous draining, works automatically and is said to accomplish as much as the ordinary machines.

The gardener of the Kew Gardens, after numerous failures, has at last succeeded in growing the Coco de Mer, or double cocoanut, which often attains a height of one hundred and fifty feet, with a smooth trunk about a foot in diameter.

Dr. Hebler, the eminent authority on small arms, says that the concentric tube which incloses the firing barrel of the Mannlicher rifle is the cause of increased temperatures, and by no means answers the purpose for which it was intended, guarding the hands of the soldier from being burned.

Dr. Kabierski, of Breslau, has invented a novel percussor in the form of a tuning fork with a cylindrical stem, which is held between the finger and thumb, with thin prongs with rounded free extremities for striking the surface of the body. He has mapped out by its means the varying movements of the apices of the lungs, and believes that he has shown that results heretofore obtained should be considerably modified.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

Sleeplessness Cured.

I am glad to testify that I used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic with the best success for sleeplessness, and believe that it is really a great relief for suffering humanity.

E. FRANK, Pastor.
St. Severin, Keylerton P. O., Pa.

Pleased and Grateful.

New York City, May, 1890.
I express my entire satisfaction with Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son, who is now nineteen years of age, had been afflicted with epileptic fits since he was six years of age. I tried everything that money could purchase, but no permanent relief was effected, now I can cheerfully recommend, and deem it my duty to advise sufferers to at least try Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son has not had any symptoms of the disease since he used the remedy. I am therefore pleased and grateful.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

AN ATROCIOUS CRIME

A Human Monster Nearly Exterminates His Family.

HE STABS HIS WIFE TO DEATH.

Wounds His Son and Daughter and Then Hangs and Shoots Himself.

The Butchery Deliberately Performed—He Commenced His Fiendish Work With Two Revolvers—His Children Escape After a Terrible Struggle—His Wife's Limbs Hacked and Full of Holes.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Dec. 29.—One of the most atrocious crimes conceivable, deliberately planned and as deliberately performed, was committed last night by a monster in human form a few miles southwest of Carlisle, in Wilkin County.

Carl Reher's family yesterday consisted of six persons—husband, wife, a son and three daughters—to-day the father and mother are dead, the son is hovering between life and death, and one daughter is dangerously wounded, tho other two having escaped a similar fate only by flight.

Rehrer crme home about 9 o'clock from Elizabeth, where he runs a shoe shop, and after some pleasantry about presents, drew two self-cocking revolvers and began shooting at his wife, son and three daughters. He hit his son twice in the arm and stabbed him in the back with a carving knife as he was trying to escape from the house. The light went out in the midst of the shooting, and the three daughters got outside and hid themselves, one of them with a bullet wound in her shoulder.

Butchered His Wife.

Mrs. Reher was left alone in the house with the monster. He attacked her fiercely with the carving knife and stabbed her again and again. She fell, apparently dead, and he then went out to find his daughters and finish his work. He did not succeed and returned to the house. His wife was gone. The youngest daughter watched the scene from the haymow. Her father appeared at the door with the dripping knife still in his hand. He saw his wife crawling painfully on her hands and knees 50 yards away. He ran to her and again fell upon her with fiendish ferocity and plunged the knife repeatedly into her prostrate body. Then he returned to the house.

He Kills Himself.

Half an hour later several neighbors well armed arrived. The neighbors entered the house and found Reher stone dead, with a bullet in his brain and a rope around his neck. He had thrown the rope over a beam and put the noose around his neck, and as the noose tightened he had blown out his brains. He lay there with his own blood mingling in a pool with that of his wife and son.

Mrs. Reher also lay on the floor. She had only the strength to tell the story of the awful tragedy and then died. Her body and limbs were frightfully hacked and full of holes. Any one of the half dozen wounds she had would have been fatal.

Everything in and about the place was soaked with blood and the scene was the most ghastly one that could be imagined.

KILLED HIS RIVAL.

Two Men Court the Same Young Lady and a Tragedy Occurs.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., Dec. 29.—A young miner named Plunter, of Moyer, and George Plutor, have been courting the same young lady, who is employed at Plutor's brother's boarding house at Stauffers. Yesterday Plunter called on his sweetheart. Shortly after George Plutor came in. The two young men shook hands heartily and seemingly were the best of friends. In the course of conversation Plutor invited Plunter upstairs. The latter accepted the invitation, and a short time thereafter the report of a pistol shot was heard.

The inmates of the house ran quickly to the scene, only to find the dead body of Plunter stretched on the floor with a bullet through his heart. Plutor was asked some questions on the affair, and his answers were so unsatisfactory that he was at once placed in custody and taken to jail charged with murder.

A Missing Editor Heard From.

FARGO, N. D., Dec. 29.—Nearly two months ago H. H. Mattison, editor of the Fargo Daily Sun, disappeared and no trace could be found of him. Yesterday a letter was received from him by his family dated Salem, Ore. He says in the letter that he remembers starting down the street after supper on the night following the November elections and knows nothing further regarding his actions until he found himself in Salem in a half famished condition. He is at present employed on the Salem Statesman. During Mattison's absence his daughter Belle has taken charge of the Sun, the paper not having lost an issue.

New Tin Discovery.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Dec. 29.—Louis Giraud, a prominent civil engineer, has arrived in this city with specimens from the new tin discovery which has recently been made on the Colorado River, in Llano County, 100 miles northwest of here. The deposit covers a large extent. Mr. Giraud brings the ores here to be sampled. He says new discoveries are being made daily, and 60 deposits have already been located.

The Times Will Not Apologize.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—The Times declines either to withdraw its assertion as to Mr. O'Brien's alleged utterances on dynamite or to apologize for its publication, but accepts his assurance that he did not contribute the article to the Irish World.

MORE MURDERS SUSPECTED.

Frank Krulish Coolly Confesses that He Butchered Winnie Croupa.

SAYVILLE, N. Y., Dec. 29.—The funeral of Winne Croupa, the young man who was killed in the woods back of Bohemiaville by Frank Krulish, took place yesterday from the home of his parents, near the scene of the murder.

A large number tramped through the snow from the surrounding villages to get a glimpse of the murdered man. The remains were in a stained pine coffin, which rested on two stools in a small room, which was crowded to suffocation by excited Bohemians who chattered in loud tones.

The remains were interred in a little graveyard known as Union Cemetery, not more than a stone's throw from the street where young Croupa was killed.

The murder was committed while Krulish was under the influence of liquor, and it was he who informed the neighbors of the crime and led them, with the dead man's father, through the snow to the place where the mutilated corpse lay.

When arraigned before Justice O'Brien Krulish confessed the crime and was committed for the action of the grand jury. Coroner Bennett of Patchogue impanelled a jury and the inquest will be held this afternoon.

In Riverhead it is said that Krulish while stopping at that place some weeks ago amused himself by torturing animals and frightening women.

It is now strongly suspected that Krulish killed the 17-year-old son and namesake of Constable Josef Shasek, who arrested him.

It is also recalled that Krulish lived in Breslau four years ago when an aged couple named Sheidler were brutally murdered in their home and their bodies mutilated much in the same manner as young Croupa's was. The mystery of this double tragedy was never cleared up

THE WAR ABOUT OVER.

Big Foot is Captured and All the Hostiles on Their Way In.

PINE RIDGE AGENCY, S. D., Dec. 29.—Big Foot and 120 followers have been recaptured by Major Whitside, of the Seventh Cavalry. It will be remembered that they escaped from Colonel Sumner some days ago.

The hostiles now on their way from the Bad Lands will probably reach here to-morrow. The Indian troubles may now be said to be practically over, for the time being at all events.

Herty Wins the Walking Match.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 29.—Following are the results of the six days' go-as-you-please match in this city: Herty, 518 miles; Moore, 509; Messier, 503; Golden, 500; Campana, 450; Nolan, 426; Hawley, 286. The gate receipts amounted to about $3,000, of which the men who covered 500 miles received half, or about $1,500. Herty will get about $750; Moore, $350: Messier, 225; Golden, 175.

His Parishioners Stand by Him.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 29.—The Rev. O. B. Milligan, who with a number of other preachers was recently suspended by the Pittsburg Presbytery of the Reformed Presbyterian Church for heretical utterances, has been presented with a purse containing $300 in gold by the members of his late congregation. The church has been closed since the suspension, the congregation refusing to accept a supply for the pulpit.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 29.—The mills of the Clark Thread Company resumed operations this morning, the company having received sufficient yarn from the Paisley Mills, in Scotland, to enable them to continue work for several weeks without the services of the striking spinners. THEY WILL APPEAL

The Tories Preparing to Dissolve Parliament.

TWO IMPORTANT BILLS TO PASS.

Parnell's Opponents Condemn His Attitude Toward Workingmen.

A Denial from Archbishop Walsh—Mr. O'Brien Denies Statements by Paris Newspapers—His Controversy With the London Times—Mr. Gladstone Celebrates His Birthday.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—It is stated on the authority of a member of the Cabinet that Parliament will certainly not be dissolved until after the passage of the Tithes bill and the Land Purchase bill.

The Land Purchase bill, if not pushed to the final stage, would give the Liberals their only possible chance to appeal to the country on the Irish question with confidence, as many, even of the Tories, only accept the measure under the whip of party discipline, and are opposed to pledging British credit in any way for Ireland. The final passage of the measure is now certain in the present Parliament, as the Parnellites will more than make up, it is expected, any defection in the Government ranks.

The Tithes bill is not seriously opposed by any large body of Liberals, and Sir William Harcourt, who in Mr. Gladstone's absence would act as leader of the Liberals, states that he has no idea of impairing the national property in tithes, and is favorable to the general spirit of the present bill, which shifts the payment from occupier to owner, and will efface the ground for much discontent, especially in Wales.

With these two measures law, the understanding is the Government will be ready to face the people.

There is, however, another bill which is likely to arouse some discussion, and that is the bill for removal of the remaining disabilities of Roman Catholics; in other words, to make it possible for the Queen's representative in Ireland to be a Roman Catholic. This the Government will oppose on the ground that the officer holding the Queen's place in Dublin should be bound by the same constitutional restriction that prohibits a Roman Catholic from sitting on the British throne.

PARNELL AND LABOR.

He is Ridiculed by His Opponents for His Interest in Workingmen.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—The opponents of Mr. Parnell are heaping ridicule upon his suddenly developed interest in the condition and aspirations of the laboring classes now that, according to his critics' view of it, he is in need of all the supporters he can find.

They declare that out of 32 sittings of the Committee on Irish Industries in the House of Commons during the past few years, Mr. Parnell has taken the trouble to attend only one, and his reason for being present on that occasion was that the subject under discussion had a bearing upon the utilization of a river which runs through Mr. Parnell's estate.

Mr. Parnell, it is said, always treated the Irish labor agitators with hardly disguised contempt, and refused to put a line in his programme that bore upon any other aspect of the Irish question than the particular one which he had taken upon himself to champion.

Some of the most earnest of Irish patriots have from time to time urged the view that at least a portion of the woes of the Irish people were attributable to defects in the industrial and social system which could be remedied without reference to the Home Rule question, and the agitation of which would not arouse the hostility of England; but Mr. Parnell always frowned upon such theories as tending to detract from the unity of the people on the great demand for political self-government, and his present eagerness to cater to the men whom he has hitherto snubbed is alleged by his enemies to show a willingness to sacrifice his principies for votes.

Says He Was Robbed of $14,000.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 29.—A despatch from Fortoria, O., says: Frank Myers, a farmer and agent for agricultural implments, tells a thrilling story about three robbers relieving him of $14,000 near the scene of the Kuhns-Campean murder. The robbers impersonated officers and put Myers under arrest and handcuffed him. He was then robbed. Marshall Neff filed the handcuffs off.

THE NEXT BIG FIGHT.

Turfmen Betting Heavily on the Result of the Dempsey-Fitzsimmons Mill.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 29.—The interest in the Dempsey and Fitzsimmons contest for $12,000 and the middleweight championship is increasing, and the turfmen now here are speculating heavily on the result. Dempsey has a legion of admirers here, principally Eastern bookmakers and horsemen, who are backing him at even money.

Fitzsimmons, however, appears to be the favorite with the majority of sporting men, many of whom believe Dempsey is overmatched.

Dempsey is training at Chalean's Garden, Galveston, while Fitzsimmons is located at Bay St. Louis, and is already in condition. The Olympic Club, which offers the $12,000, is enlarging its amphitheatre for the contest and expending $5,000 in fitting up boxes and reserved seats. The private boxes will contain six seats and will be $100 each. The general admission will be $5, with reserved seats $10. The amphitheatre will seat between 966 and 1,000 spectators.

Already there is a demand for boxes from Galveston, Memphis, San Francisco and New York.

Jack McAuliffe, the light-weight champion of the world, will leave New York on January 2 for Galveston to second Dempsey. McAuliffe will arrive in Galveston in time to put the finishing touches on the "Nonpareil" for the contest. He will bring considerable money to bet on the contest.

A BANK OWNER CRAZY.

His Failure Has Excited a Large Number of Small Depositors.

WOONSOCKET, S. D., Dec. 29.—The strain upon L. L. Stevens, owner of the Sanborn County Bank which failed Friday, has driven him mad. Steps are being taken to have him examined by the Insanity Board and sent to an asylum.

Just before going crazy he gave instructions to the assignee to pay back some money to a few creditors who has made late deposits, but nobody knowing the combination of the safe it could not be opened. Small depositors lose about $20,000 and they are greatly excited.

Many Applications for the Lymph.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—The doctors at the different hospitals in this city report that they are besieged with applications for private treatment with the lymph and receive many visits and letters daily, with offers even of indirect bribes, but adhere to their decisions to treat no cases outside the hospital unless the patient can afford the expense of a couple of doctors in the house with him to watch his condition from hour to hour, and if the case is advanced at all in phthisis they will not take it for treatment under any circumstances.

An Unknown Bark Ashore.

VICTORIA, B. C., Dec. 29.—A fisherman who reached here last evening brings intelligence that a large unknown iron bark is ashore on Cape Flattery. It was passed by the fisherman in his boat Friday night, but owing to the heavy gale he was unable to get near it. Two salmon laden ships answering the description left here some days ago for England. They are the Mennock and Broddick Bay. The bark Astoria left Tacoma flour laden for the United Kingdom, and it may be either of these three.

A PENSION PROBLEM

Ex-Confederates to Go on the Government Pay Roll.

BUREAU OFFICIALS BOTHERED.

A Quorum Not Expected in the Senate Any Day This Week.

The Crisis Over the Cloture Bill Expected After New Year's—How the Struggle May be Prolonged—The House Will Adjourn To-Morrow Until Saturday—New Year's at the White House.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—A pension problem has arisen under the new Pension law of last June. The act grants pensions to soldiers who served 90 days and are now disabled from earning a support provided they were honorably discharged.

The officials of the Pension Office were of the opinion that the act of June 27, 1890, did not include soldiers who had been in the Confederate service, as the act is silent in regard to this class of pensioners; neither does it repeal Section 4,176, or wind up with the usual saving clause, "All acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

The question was referred to Assistant Secretary Bressy, who decides that claimants who served in the Confederate army prior to enlistment in the United States service are entitled under the act of June 27, 1890, and are placed on the same footing as all other Union soldiers.

Some of the official minds of the Pension Bureau are bothered to know what to do with those who were wounded or contracted disabilities while in the Confederate service. The only restriction that the act of June 27, 1890, makes, is that the disabilities must not be the result of the soldier's own vicious habits.

DULL WEEK IN CONGRESS.

No Quorum Expected in the Senate Until After New Year's Day.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—The holiday season has brought congressional proceedings to a standstill, and this week is likely to be even duller than last week.

It is not at all probable that a quorum will be secured in the Senate any day in the week, and in this event no business will be transacted, and adjournments will be taken from day to day. If a quorum should possibly be secured at any time, the Elections bill will be discussed.

The crisis in the Senate over the cloture rule is expected next week. On the 5th of January, the Republicans hope to have a full attendance, with their majority increased by the arrival of two Senators from Idaho. Then will come the tug of war.

The first fight will be over the adoption of Senator Aldrich's amendment to the rules giving the majority power to close debate. If the Republicans have a quorum present—and they have five more than a quorum on their side of the Senate—it will be comparatively plain sailing. If they have not, the struggle may be prolonged until the endurance of the Democrats is exhausted, or arbitrary measures are adopted by the Republicans.

In the House a three days' adjournment will be taken from Tuesday until after New Year's, and then another adjournment will be taken until next week.

THE PRESIDENT'S RECEPTION.

Arrangements for the New Year's Day Calls at the White House.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—The President and Mrs. Harrison will be assisted by the Vice-President, Mrs. Morton and the ladies of the Cabinet in receiving those who call at the White House on New Year's Day.

A quarter of an hour later are expected the Chief Justice and Associated Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, Judges of the United States Court of Claims and Judges of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. These will be followed by Senators and Repsesentatives, District Commissioners and judicial officers, ex-members of the Cabinet, ex-United States Ministers and officers of the army, navy and marine corps.

At noon will come the Regents and the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, the Civil Service and the Interstate Commerce Commissioners, assistant secretaries of the departments, the assistant postmasters-generals and heads of bureaus generally. From 12:15 to 12:35 the President will receive the Associated Veterans of the Mexican War, the Grand Army of the Republic, the Loyal Legion and members of the Oldest Inhabitants' Association of the District of Columbia. Visitors are expected to take their leave at 2 p. m.

O'SHEA'S REPLY TO HEALY.

There is No Legal Remedy So He Publishes Two Letters.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Having been advised that an action for libel would not lie, Captain O'Shea publishes the following correspondence to disprove Mr. Healy's taunt that O'Shea bartered his wife's honor to gain a seat in Parliament.

In a letter dated December 24, 1890, Mr. Stalbridge says: "When a Liberal whip, I did my best to promote your candidature as a Liberal and a supporter of Mr. Gladstone from Mid Armagh, and afterward from Liverpool in 1885."

In a letter dated December 20, 1890, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, M. P., says: "I assume that you will take some notice of the brutal attack of Mr. Healy at Kilkenny, though unless I am much mistaken you will find that there is no legal remedy. His statement is entirely inconsistent with what I know of the general election of 1885. According to my recollection, Mr. Parnell neglected at first to give you any assistance, and did not do so until he had received letters from myself and another person, pointing out that your services in the past as an intermediary between himself and the Liberal party had been a real advantage to both, and that such services would continue to be equally necessary if the two parties desired to maintain any kind of friendly relations. Respecting Galway, I find that I wrote you to the same effect in January, 1886, which letter I authorize you to publish if you think it would be useful. This correspondence ought to afford sufficient evidence that no such complicity existed as your traducer has been base enough to insinuate."

SYMPATHY FOR STRIKERS.

Clergymen Deliver Addresses in Favor of the Scotch Railway Employes.

EDINBURGH, Dec. 29.—At a large meeting here, at which many clergymen delivered addresses, resolutions were adopted expressing sympathy with the railway strikers.

The passenger service continues to improve and mails are being handled with almost the customary regularity, but the freight traffic is still demoralized and there are no signs of a settlement of the dispute.

The strikers allege that among the men now being employed by the railway companies are many victims of color-blindness, who were formerly discharged because of their deficiency in this respect.

The Society of Amalgamated Engineers has donated £3,000 to the strike fund. The employes of the Northeastern Railway have resolved to give each a day's pay every week to aid the strikers.

Congressman Geissenhainer's Bill a Good One.

(From The Elizabeth Journal.)

Think of the work done Friday by the brave men who patrol back and forth on the Jersey coast, watching for those whom the storm drove with relentless fury upon the beach. One schooner with eight men aboard was beyond control, and the men would undoubtedly have been drowned, but the life saving service rescued them after the hardest and most perilous kind of work. Mr. Geissenhainer's bill to increase their pay is a good bill.

Hope Chapel's Merry Christmas.

The members and teachers of Hope chapel held their annual Christmas entertainment Saturday evening. The chapel was filled to its utmost, and all enjoyed thoroughly the affair. Great credit is due to Wm. D. Murray for the manner in which he conducted the Punch-and-Judy show, which pleased the little people especially. When Punch had retired Santa Claus came down the chimney loaded with all sorts of Christmas gifts for the little ones. Miss L. E. Miller presided at the piano during the evening. A Great Address by Mr. Haines.

Reform Hall last evening contained a very appreciative audience. President Harper occupied the chair, the Rev. Dr. Rodman conducted the devotional services in an impressive manner, and Mr. Vanderbeek's full choir, with Miss Alice Smith as accompanist, rendered a choice selection of music.

The speaker of the evening was Samuel A. Haines, of Netherwood, and his chosen topic was "Tears; or, Stop Crying!" With great oratorical ability and vividness of detail he showed the torrent of tears caused by liquor drinking, giving as proof many startling incidents, and declaring it mockery to enter desolated homes, and to go among the thousands of women and children starving and weeping because of drunkenness, and say to them "stop crying," while the terrible scourge of the liquor traffic is authorized by law, and not opposed, by so many professing Christians. Seldom has a speaker commanded more profound attention than did Mr. Haines last evening.

The President announced, at the close of the meeting, that next Thursday being New Year's Day the regular evening meeting of the Club would be omitted; but, under the auspices of the Women's Aid Society, the parlors of Reform Hall would be open day and evening for calling and refreshments; and that next Sunday evening the Rev. Dr. Rodman would deliver the address in Reform Hall.

Almost a Serious Fire at the Church.

The Christmas celebration at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church Friday came near ending in a serious fire. The big tree in the chapel was illuminated with electric lights, candles being considered too dangerous, and as the women of the church who were preparing the festivities found the glare of the lamps too bright they shrouded each globe in a bit of thin gauze, thus softening the glow, and giving a pretty, tinted effect. The heat of the lamps, however, had sufficient intensity to communicate fire to the gauze, and hardly was the smoke noticed and the sexton sent for a ladder when each lamp was developing a bright blaze that threatened to cause a fire that would not only envelop the tree but destroy the building. The sexton and the ladder, however, arrived in time to prevent any such catastrophe. The blazing bits of gauze were torn from the lamps, and the tree and the chapel were saved for the festival which came later.

Three Wills in Thirty-eight Hours.

One of the reasons why the jury in the Moore will case decided that William Moore was not competent to make a will and that John C. Moore, his only son, ought to inherit the estate, was the fact that came out in the evidence that the testator made an effort to execute three different last wills and testaments in thirty-eight hours.

Clear Those Sidewalks!

Why don't the city and borough authorities compel property-holders to keep their sidewalks free from snow and ice as the law requires? Somerset street affords some remarkably bad walking, and the condition of many other thoroughfares is the source of much annoyance and danger to those afoot.

Don't hawk, hawk, blow, spit, and disgust everybody with your offensive breath, but use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy and end it.

HORRIBLY MANGLED BY THE CARS.

An Awful Death the Wages of an Immigrant's First Job.

An Italian section hand, at work on the tracks of the Jersey Central railway near Fanwood, this morning, was struck by the locomotive of a train of empty coal cars, and was so frightfully mangled that at noon Matron Walrod of the Muhlenberg Hospital said that he could live only a short time longer. His head, face, body and limbs, are a mass of terrible gashes, and when his fellow-workmen picked him up and put him on the train that struck him, to have him taken to Plainfield, the bleeding mass of flesh, which scarcely hung together, bore but little resemblance to the body of a man still alive. The poor fellow had not been in this country long, and this was his first job. He was known to his section boss only as "Mike, No. 13."

To-Night's Show.

"The Wife's" coming this evening should be looked forward to by the patrons of the better class of attractions with much pleasure. Daniel Frohman's company, presenting this charming society comedy, have met with marked favor. The play is thoroughly American in theme. Instead of dishing up the veneered immorality of Europe, it deals with the wholesome home life of our own country, and is fully up to the standard of artistic excellence. Such performances as those of the Lyceum Theatre Company in "The Wife" redeem the stage of the charge of being given over utterly to immoral suggestion, sensuality and trash. They furnish also evidence of what may be accomplished for the American stage by proper effort, and of its possible ultimate destiny. It is by the encouragement of genuine work of this class that our city and the whole country may obtain relief in some measure from the dry-rot which seriously threatens to destroy all healthy and intelligent progress in the domestic drama.

"The Wife" ran eight months in New York. Nearly every seat was taken every night. In point of intelligence and social standing the audiences were the cream of the city. The best people, in the best and only legitimate sense of the term, were there. They were respectable, refined and progressive. They were at the performance night after night because they liked the play and not through the influence of any fashionable fad or fancy. The indorsement of the play by these people was an honor to the authors and a compliment to the players.

The Opening of the Park House.

(From The Hotel Mail.)

Plainfield, N. J., which has long been without hotel facilities at all commensurate with her needs and importance, is naturally rejoiced at the lease of the Park House by Messrs. Miller & Poillon. Except during the regime of Mr. DeRevere there, the hotel has never been properly or profitably conducted, and of late it has been closed altogether. It is good hotel property, however, and will doubtless draw a large business under the new management. Mr. Frank E. Miller, whose ability has been demonstrated in the success of the beautiful Netherwood, at Netherwood, knows just what the hotel wants of Plainfield are, and how to provide for them. The new proprietors, who take possession in February, will overhaul and modernize the Park from top to bottom.

Three Schools Join in Christmas Services.

The Christmas services of the Crescent Avenue, Hope and Bethel Sunday schools, took place in the Crescent Avenue church yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. There was a large attendance of scholars, teachers and members of the Church and its missions.

An address was made by the Rev. W. R. Richards, and by the Rev. Mr. Newell of Hope chapel. There was singing by the home school and by the scholars of Hope and Bethel. Twelve little girls of the primary department sang "The Christmas Wreath," and Master Willie Sebring recited "In the Orphan House."

Christmas Festival at Holy Cross.

The Christmas festival of the Sunday school of Holy Cross church took place Saturday evening, and was attended by a large congregation. The exercises consisted of the singing of carols, the distribution of gifts, and a short address by the Rev. T. Logan Murphy, rector. The church presented a very handsome appearance, beautifully decorated as it was with holly and evergreens, while two tall Christmas trees, covered with bright colored ornaments, rose on either side of the chancel and reached almost to the high arch of the nave. A collection was taken for the Children's Home. During the exercises H. R. Phillips, superintendent of the school, was presented with a valuable picture as a token of the esteem and good wishes of his fellow-workers in the Sunday school.

Burned by a Flash-Light.

Mr. and Mrs. Christopher M. Goddard, now of Boston, but formerly of this city, have been spending the holidays at the home of their brother, George H. Goddard, of East Ninth street. While Mr. Goddard was attempting to take a flash-light photograph of a Christmas interior the magnesium blazed up in his face, singeing off his luxuriant whiskers, and severely scorching his flesh.

Courtships average three tons of coal each, and scores of bad coughs and colds; but then every prudent gallant is provided with a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, which costs only 25 cents.

A Rare Chance for Young Men and Boys.

Book-keeping and penmanship classes will meet at the Y. M. C. A. to-night. Young men and boys who contemplate a business career will do well to join one of these classes. A $2 membership in the Association entitles to these and other privileges of the Association. Boys too young for membership will be admitted to the classes on payment of $2. Messrs. Ezra Loomis and G. Q. Packer are the instructors.

The "White Cap" Man Again.

Edward Wilson, the man who some months ago received a "White Cap" letter, warning him to reform his evil ways, was arrested again yesterday on complaint of his wife, on the same old charge of drunkenness and abuse. His wife once more repented and refused to prosecute, so the Court discharged the prisoner.

Miners Appeal for Help.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—The Central Labor Federation reported that a communication had been received from the United Miners of Birmingham, Ala., stating that many of their members would be hungry before the year was out, and asking for assistance. The matter was referred for further consideration.

Passed Two Forged Checks.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Dec. 29.—A man giving the name of H. W. Bower of Philadelphia succeeded in passing two forged checks upon business men of this city. He came here for the alleged purpose of establishing a Pennsylvania bureau of Southern information. He has left the city.

James R. Garfield to Wed.

CHICAGO, Dec. 29.—James R. Garfield, son of the late President James A. Garfield, has taken out a license in this city to marry Miss Helen Neweil, a Chicago lady.

Death of a Lottery King.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 29.—M. A. Dauphin, for 20 years president of the Louisiana Lottery Company, is dead. He was a native of Alsace-Loraine and was 53 years old.

Sudden Death of a Doctor.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 29.—Dr. Dennis Doyle, of Freehold, N. J., died suddenly in this city. He was 35 years old.

Mr. EDITOR

OF THE PRESS.

I wish to put in print my congratulations upon Plainfield's largest business year in its history—in my judgment.

The opinion among many merchants is that the citizens of Plainfield have done more to encourage home trade this season than ever before, and as for me I am willing to encourage its increase

In the year to come, by offering the best goods at the lowest prices, with a large assortment to select from.

The first thing after the great Holiday rush is over, is to look after the Winter stock, and see that it is got out of the way for the Spring goods.

THERE will be an excellent opportunity to get bargains in all such articles at Edsall's now, as his house will put a price on them that will make them move off lively.

THIS SEASON'S trade has gone away ahead of previous years, and we are just in humor to give our patrons a chance to save some money on what they may need in this line.

Fur Capes and Muffs are not wanted in our store now. Their room is better than their company, and they must go.

Woolen Underwear and Mittens, and such like, will be obliged to leave our counters; they can be excused.

You had better come in and see what we are doing.

No reasonable offer will be refused for the balance of our Holiday gifts.

ORIGINS OF PHRASES.

Where Some of the Popular Expressions of the Day Come From.

The phrase "I acknowledge the corn" originated with a slave in the South, says the Detroit Free Press. He was charged with stealing corn found in his possession. Having a sack with him, he was also charged with stealing that. His reply was: "No, sar, I 'knowledge de corn, but I ain't gwine to 'knowledge de sack."

"Tipping the wink," generally regarded as a vulgar phrase, is to be found in a grave historical romance. It occurs in "Valerius; a Roman Story," by John Gibson Lockhart, Sir Walter Scott's son-in-law, and for many years editor of the Quarterly Review.

"Any color, so it's red," originated among the class of characters called Jakeys in the local drama. One of them being on a committee appointed to procure a new fire engine, was asked what color the company desired the apparatus painted. He replied: "Why, any color, so it's red."

The origin of the phrase "I can't see it" is traced to Lord Nelson, who, at the battle of Copenhagen, was told that a signal was given to cease firing and the direction pointed out to him. Seizing a telescope he applied it to his blind eye, and exclaimed: "I can't see it."

"Hauling over the coals" dates six or seven centuries back, when feudal barons often used harsh methods of exacting gold from the rich Jews by suspending their victims above slow fires until they paid ransom or died. There is a scene of this sort in "Ivanhoe," in which the Templar endeavors to extort money from Isaac of York, father of Rebecca.

"Barking up the wrong tree" is a very common expression in the West. It originated from the fact that a dog will bark at the foot of a particular tree to indicate to his master where the game is located. While endeavoring to see the animal, he discovers it on another tree, and it finally escapes him altogether. In its application it denotes that a person has mistaken his object, or is looking for it in the wrong place.

Anxious mothers often tell their handsome daughters that "beauty is but skin deep." The phrase probably originated with these two lines:

Beauty is but skin deep, and so doth fall
Short of those statues made of wood or stone, which occurred in Rev. Robert Fleming's poem, published in 1691.

The term "blue stocking" was originally used in Venice about the year 1400, to designate literary classes by colors. In Mill's "History of Chivalry" we are told that members of the various academies were distinguished by the color of their stockings, blue being the prevailing color. The application of the term to women originated with Miss Hannah More's admirable description of a "Blue Stocking Club" in her "Bas Bleu."

"Corporations have no souls" is a much older expression than most people imagine. It originated with Sir Edward Coke, who in the sixteenth century was considered one of the best legal writers of the age. He says, in one of his treatises: "Corporations can not commit trespass, nor be outlawed, nor excommunicated, for they have no souls."

"Drowning the miller" originated from the following fact: If the mill stream below the mill is dammed or stopped, the water is ponded back, and the mill becomes what the millers call "tailed." There is too much water, the mill will not work, and the miller is said to be "drowned out." Hence, when too much of any one article is put into a mixture it is called "drowning the miller."

There are few such common-sense proverbs as "every man is the architect of his own fortune." Appius Claudius, a Roman censor, used it in a speech delivered by him fifty years before the Christian era.

Not a few of the phrases in use at this day originated with Lyly, and are found in his "Euphues," a popular book published in 1580. Among them might be mentioned "caught napping," "a crooked stick or none," "brown study," "catching birds by putting salt on their tails," etc.

When people do not particularly like each other it is sometimes said "There is no love lost between them." The phrase occurs in the old ballad of "The Babes of the Wood," and in a tale of the days of Shakespeare, entitled "Montchensey."

COMPLEXION MAKING.

Two or Three Fresh Suggestions by Ladies Qualified to Give Advice.

Ten hours' sleep out of the twenty-four, a walk of at least four miles a day in the air, brown bread, no coffee, no sweets, vigorous rubbing in cold water every morning and the simplest, purest toilet articles—that is Mrs. Kendal's prescription for a nice skin, and the delicacy and fairness of her own face gives proof of its efficacy.

Another somewhat new way for procuring a good complexion, says the New York Journal, is to take a sponge bath in tepid salt water every morning before breakfast, plenty of exercise and nourishing, easily-digested food.

A pretty little woman said with a sigh, as she laid down a fresh list of axioms for beautifying the person: "It is just enough to wear any one all out to follow half the directions written now for making you beautiful. I've tried them all. I've used vaseline and glycerine, acid, cocoanut oil and almond paste, rose water and lemon juice. I have bathed in boiling water and ice water, and in tepid water and in milk and water. I have washed my face with a cloth of the roughest crash I could buy and rubbed the very cuticle off in my struggles to follow out the directions, and I have half washed it, as I would a bit of porcelain, with the softest, finest flannel I could find. I think the worst of all was when I didn't wash it at all for awhile, because some one said the hard water here in New York would cause wrinkles, so I wiped it off with one thing and another as long as I could bear it, or rather until just before I had ruined my skin entirely, when my husband suggested that I try just keeping plain clean for awhile, and, do you know, I haven't had a bit of trouble since."

WAYS OF WILD BEASTS.

How an Arab Killed a Rhinoceros with a Sword.

The Pall Mall Gazette gives the cream of Sir Samuel Baker's latest wild beast stories as follows: Having once made a good shot at a rhinoceros it fell to the ground and died. We now observed a fine young animal which was standing on the opposite side of the mother, and I suggested to my famous Hamran hunters that we should call upon the camels and endeavor to secure the calf with our good supply of ropes. The camels were brought and the ropes arranged. Nooses were prepared and I suggested that we should attempt to mob the young one and then secure its legs. My Arabs declined this plan, as they rightly declared that the ground was unfavorable, owing to the number of large rocks which would prevent them from getting out of harm's way should the animal charge. It was ultimately agreed that Taher Noor, my head Arab, was to lend me his sword, and that I was to go first, while they would follow with the ropes and nooses to endeavor to trip up the calf should it charge me. Taher Noor drew his sword.

This was a beautiful blade that had been handed from father to son for several generations; the cross hilt and fittings of the handle were solid silver, also the knob at the end, through which the tongue was riveted. He cautioned me to beware of striking a stone, and he evidently parted with regret from his familiar weapon.

The calf was about three and one-half feet high, and was standing by the body of its mother, evidently ignorant of her death. As I cautiously approached there was not much time for reflection, for the young tartar gave an angry shake of his ugly head, emitted the usual three sharp whiffs and charged at me as fast as it could gallop.

I jumped quickly backward by a large rock, and it passed within three feet of me, but immediately halted, instead of continuing so far as the spot where the Arabs were in waiting with the ropes. It now turned around, and, seeing me, it repeated its charge in reverse, as hard as it could go. I again jumped back, but as I did so I delivered a lightning-like downward cut with Taher Noor's favorite sword. The young rhinoceros fell stone dead, all in a heap! The Arabs ran to the spot. Taher Noor took the sword carefully from my hand, and, pointing it at arm's length, he looked along the edge; he then wiped the blade upon the body of the rhinoceros, and to prove the perfection of the weapon he shaved a few hairs of his arm; then exclaimed, with a deep sigh of pleasure and astonishment: "Mashallah!" and returned it to the scabbard.

A SUMMER'S TALE.

Recipe for a First-Class Love Story—Time-Tried and Tested.

Take a small, white cottage, shaded by fine maple trees, and let it "nestle in a peaceful valley 'neath the shadow of the grand old New England hills." In this cottage, writes J. L. Ford in Puck, place the widow Perkins, or Lee, or Osgood, or Larrabee—any one of these will do—and her daughter Mary or Ruth; if the latter, it should be referred to as the "sweet old Bible name which her father loved so well." Add a summer boarder in the person of a young artist who is "strolling through the valley in search of material for his canvases."

Care must be taken to select a tall, sun-burnt artist, with broad shoulders and brown beard, and he should be called Lionel, or Gerald, or Reginald. His surname may be Beresford, or Ravenshoe, or Arundel.

Let these ingredients simmer slowly for three weeks before a hot August sun. At the end of that time the artist will be done brown, according to calculations made by the widow when she took him to board.

Now, season to the taste with a little bitterness and woe. Let Ruth find a letter on the artist's table, written in a delicate feminine hand. Let her eye fall upon the words: "My Darling Lionel," and then let her throw it indignantly from her, and go out, "with her hand pressed close over her beating heart, out—out into the desolate night."

Be careful to let Mary or Ruth go out—out into the desolate night—without reading any more of Lionel, or Gerald, or Reginald's letter. That would make the cake dough, besides violating all the traditions that have governed the daughters of boarding-house landladies from time immemorial.

The weeks that follow this occurrence may be fraught with sorrow, and during this time the dish may be allowed to cool until a thin crust forms over its surface. Towards the end of the summer, just as the widow is beginning to realize with bitter regret that her boarder is going away and that she will have her daughter on her hands another year, put the crowning touch to the whole by introducing the lover's sister, Grace, who wrote the letter. Spread a reconciliation over the dish, and serve before it has time to cool.

Maine's Woman Sailor.

The Ellsworth (Me.) American well describes Mrs. Belle Wooster Higgins, of Sullivan, as "a veritable salt." She has been at sea almost constantly for almost nineteen years, and during that time has sailed to nearly every part of the globe, including several European ports. Africa, Australia, the Island of Sumatra, South America, every port of the West Indies and nearly every Atlantic port in this country. She is an expert in navigation, and is possessed of sufficient nautical skill to enable her, if it should ever become necessary, to take full command of a vessel and sail her to any part of the world.

Potato Pen-Wiper.

Some genius has found out that a potato makes a very good pen-wiper. When you have finished writing, instead of laying down your pen to be corroded by the ink which remains in it, just stick it into a potato, and the next time you want to use it you will find it bright and clean. Nothing is said, however, about the points keeping their proper relative position under such treatment.

WEATHER FORECASTS.

Prognostications Based on Various Indisputable Signs.

A careful collation of the forecasts of the weather likely to be issued to the country this winter shows the following results:

The hornets are building their nests several sizes smaller than usual and higher up the trees. This economy in houseroom and rent expenditure indicates a mild winter and an outdoor life for our esteemed contemporaries the hornets.

The goose-bone belonging to Colonel Harris, of Lexington, Ky., indicates a dry and cold winter. This goose-bone has never failed.

The goose-bone belonging to Colonel Fitzwilliam, of Frankfort, Ky., predicts a wet and warm winter. Colonel Fitzwilliam's goose-bone has attained a National reputation for the accuracy of its forecasts.

Dr. Veeder, of Derry, Pa., who has made a specialty of sun-spots, auroras and magnetic storms, and who carries a large stock of these goods on hand at all times, says that the peculiar manifestations of these phenomena indicate a winter of three-ply severity.

The sage-hens of Nevada were six weeks behind in their hatching—a never-failing sign of a short, mild winter.

The moss on the trees is of a thickness which presages a long, hard winter.

The musk-rats are building Queen Anne houses with pleasant porticos in front, thus showing that the winter will be an open and very pleasant one.

The Hudson river is full of crabs, and a weather-beaten old fisherman says he never knew crabs to gather in such large numbers without the convention being followed by a cold winter and plenty of it.

From the foregoing it seems reasonably clear that we shall have a large quantity of variegated and assorted reather before the robins nest again.—William H. Siviter, in Judge.

HANS' MISTAKE.

Herr Brietmuller—Ach! some feller's left a frankfurter. I vos nod proud already.

——But py chim! dot dog vos!—Judge.

Extenuating Circumstances.

The historical verdict, "Not guilty, but don't do it again," was improved upon recently by a jury at Carmarthen quarter sessions. Having to try a charge of embezzlement, where the defense was that the prisoner had spent the money in question not on himself, but in pushing his employers' trade, these twelve good Welshmen and true came to the following conclusion:

"We find him guilty of receiving these sums of money, and are of opinion that he did not appropriate the money to his own use, but employed it in the interests of the firm by pushing the business, and we strongly recommend him to mercy."

In other words, "Not guilty, and strongly recommended to mercy."—National Tribune.

Be careful to let Mary or Ruth go out—out into the desolate night—without reading any more of Lionel, or Gerald, or Reginald's letter. That would make the cake dough, besides violating all the traditions that have governed the daughters of boarding-house landladies from time immemorial.

It Wasn't Expensive.

Book Agent—That is a work, sir, in which the writer has handled his subject with a master's grasp. A book which has received the highest encomiums of the pulpit, the press, and of educated and refined people wherever it has been seen. It is at once entertaining, instructive, and as a book of reference it is invaluable. It costs you four dollars.

Busy Man—Cheap, isn't it?

Book Agent — Remarkably so, for a work of its character.

Busy Man—I did not refer to the book.

Book Agent—Excuse me, what did you refer to, sir?

Busy Man—Talk.—Puck.

Realism Accounted For.

Gilhooly—There is something wonderfully realistic at the scene where you smother Desdemona. I don't understand how you can make it appear so realistic.

Actor Friend—Easy enough, my dear boy. All I have to do is to imagine that Desdemona is my mother-in-law.—Texas Siftings.

A Pleasant Occupation.

Little Johnny — You ought to have seen Mr. Merritt and sister make lemonade.

Mrs. Brown—How did they do it?

Little Johnny—Cora held the lemon while Mr. Merritt squeezed Cora.—Scottish American.

Two of a Kind.

Mrs. Yerger — What is the matter? You seem to be very much annoyed.

Mrs. Peterby—I have good reasons to be annoyed. That addle-pated goose, Mrs. Jones, treats me as if I were not her equal.—Texas Siftings.

A Weak Man.

Mrs. Larkin—My husband can lift a barrel of flour on his shoulders and carry it upstairs.

Mrs. Bunting—I wish Mr. Bunting was as strong as that. He can't even hold the baby ten minutes.—Epoch.

THE MALE SOPRANO.

A Dangerous Man to Have Around When Your Wife Is Away.

HERE is one excellent woman in this city who wishes she had attended to her own affairs and neither listened nor tattled. The wife of a popular railroad man who occupied rooms and boarded in her house went away for a week, and left him alone. Being of a social disposition he invited in some of his friends—two or three railroad officials and a well-known professor of music—and proceeded to have an evening of it, in a madly hilarious way.

About the small hours the musician entertained them with some amusing and very clever imitations of a prima donna. He brought forth peals of laughter and was loudly applauded.

The next morning the lady of the house received her boarder with a brow like a thunder-cloud. He attempted to apologize for the noisy demonstrations of the previous evening, but was frowned down. It was not until his wife had returned and met him with an icy front, that he knew the full measure of his offending.

"I didn't suppose—I couldn't have believed it," she said, incoherently, "that you could be so base."

"Base, my dear? What do you mean? Why these remarks?"

"You—you—you," sobbed his wife, rising to the four-feet-five-inch dignity of a tragedy queen, "Oh, Henry, how you have deceived me! Who was the woman who came here and sung to you and your friends, when I, your wife, was absent? Answer me that, f-a-l-s-e-m-a-n."

"I swear no woman, not even the washlady, came. Who has been telling you such infamous things?"

"The washlady does not sing opera airs in a high soprano voice at midnight nor play the piano, either."

"Oh, I see, I see," exclaimed the husband suddenly, as he remembered that night. Then he sat down and laughed until he was black in the face.

"Why—why," he gasped, "that wasn't a woman at all. That was Prof. S. He was imitating some opera singer he had heard, and we all roared! It was too funny."

"The landlady told me—"

"The landlady be hanged!" said Henry, severely. "I'll teach her to listen and meddle with other people's affairs."

A hollow peace was patched up all round, but Henry will entertain no more male sopranos when his wife is absent.—Detroit Free Press.

Reduction in Prices for Cash!
TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.
AFTER DECEMBER 15, 1890,
The Plainfield Produce Company
Will Sell All Goods Strictly for Cash!
We will present a few reasons for making this change in our manner of doing business. In the first place we have our Hay, Grain and Produce inspected and bought direct from the Producer for Cash. Thereby obtaining better quality, also saving one profit, which would go to the commission merchant if bought from sample the usual way.
In the second place any concern doing an extensive credit business must get larger profits to offset slow and worthless accounts, of which with the greatest care there will be some. And the customer who is ready to pay and does pay his bills when presented, is the one who must pay these larger profits.
By selling for cash we avoid losses from such accounts, and can afford to sell for smaller profits.
We ask for a share of your patronage. Give us a call and we will show you how low we can sell for CASH, instead of how high we must sell for credits.

NOW'DAYS.

Now'days Joseph's acting strange. He Wears his best clothes days together;
Got some boots with patent-leather
On 'em; 'n, a perfumery:
Bought a hat that cost a dollar;
Vest and got a fancy-shade
Necktie and a stand-up collar.
What's the matter? Nancy Wade.

Now'days Joseph gets around more
Lively; goes to hear the speaking
Every Sunday, and goes sneaking
Sunday nights around the church door.
Joined the choral union, when he Never sang a note nor played
Any thing, I guess, but penny
Jew's-harps. 'Cause of Nancy Wade.

Now'days Joseph's got a new style
Sing e cutter; and he brushes
Up and scours things! And he blushes
Let her come within a mile.
Can't so much as stand the mention
Of Elisha Poole—he paid
Something like a little attention,
'Way last year, to Nancy Wade.

Now'days Joseph's looking round and Pricing furniture, and buying
Timber and the like, and slying
Round about the price of land.
Now'days Joseph's right in clover;
Thinks the universe was made
For they two. He's bubbling over
Now'days, and so's Nancy Wade.

TOLD BY A THIEF.

"Mollie Matches" Relates What He Knows of Picking Pockets.

I once knew a pickpocket who would, on occasion, unbosom himself as to his work.

"I can," he said, "get a thousand pocket-books before I am detected once, and then the discovery will occur through the clumsiness of one of my 'stalls.' Yes, it would seem as though my business would pay, but you must recall the fact that most pocket-books do not contain much money. We open them frequently and find no money at all—nothing but receipts and other papers. Those we call 'readers.' We strike so many 'readers' that the money made in pocket-picking is not as great as one might think. Then, the expenses are heavy. It takes at least three men to do the work, and four are better. In this 'mob,' as we term it, is one pickpocket proper; the rest are helpers. The expenses of a 'mob' of four are high. If you are working on a train, and this frequently happens, you have your railway fare in addition to regular expenses. These four men will average in their expenses about fifty dollars a day, the best you can do. Then, besides, there goes twenty per cent. for 'protection.' Thieves are great protectionists, whether protectionists are equally as great thieves or not. If they can—and they do more frequently than you would think—they fix things with police officials. Many a time I've worked under the actual eye of a detective. In event of a 'tumble' and a 'squeal' he would in the hurry and bustle rush in and grab the man who was touched and hold him until the boys and I got out of sight. Then, of course, he would apologize and deplore his mistake in grabbing the wrong man. The gang would be safe by then, however. Well, as I say, that sort of thing costs twenty per cent. Then, another thing: Thieves lose vastly on the stuff they take, unless it's money. Watches, diamonds and similar plunder we only get about thirty-five or forty cents on a dollar for. There is another reason why profits in thievery are not large. One can not work forever. A man's nerve begins to shake after about two weeks and then he has to lay off until he is himself again. Of all men on earth, a pickpocket has to possess nerve, and have it with him. The man who 'takes,' as a rule passes the stuff out of his hands as soon as he can. If a thief carries a 'hot leather,' that is some pocket-book just taken, or that there is a row about, he doesn't put it in his pocket. He carries it under his vest, so that by simply drawing in his breath it will fall to the ground. He does this, of course, and lets the leather go in event of being taken. He will drop the wallet as he and the officer are walking along. In the dark, it's easy. Just drop the stuff, and walk over it. I've walked over hundreds in my time.

"Thieves don't work in the winter if they can help it, either, as overcoats and that sort of cold weather harness make it very risky.

"I don't myself see any moral wrong in robbery. It's like any other business. A dry-goods man, if he can, will make you pay a thousand dollars for what costs him one. He don't inquire what he should get or what you should pay. The question never is what is right and honest? His idea is to pay as little and get as much as he can.

"Sometimes thieves get reckless and will turn a trick for fun, and just to demonstrate how smart they are. I saw a man once in a seat ahead of me on the train who put his pocket-book in his hip-pocket after he paid his fare. Just to show what I could do I waited until he sat dozing in his seat. Then I began to push in the back of the car seat with one knee, and as fast as I raised the seat back I held it by wedging my other foot in between it and the bottom of the seat. I lay back and pretended to sleep all this time myself, and I worked so slowly and so steadily that my friend never woke at all. When I had the back of the seat raised so high that I could make the trip I reached under and took the pocket-book. It took forty-five minutes to get the pocket-book, and there wasn't any thing in it then, but the people with me thought it was a great feat.

"Thieves never take a silver watch. It is not valuable enough. In getting watches the man who does the work stands still with his back to the party wanted. This sort of work will occur on race tracks and at any place where crowds are standing. The 'stalls' get behind the victim and commence crowding until one way and another they get the gentleman square against the left shoulder of the pickpocket. On his left arm he carries a duster or a shawl as a 'cover,' and when the victim is all placed the pickpocket goes through him with his right hand, reaching across himself to do the feat, covering the right arm and hand from sight with a duster on his left, and looking steadily the other way all the time. The man who is robbed never sees the face of the man who takes his watch at all and this is a great point in case he makes a roar. As a rule I never take the chain. They are mostly plated, and there's nothing in them. It is easier and quicker to take the watch alone. The rings are only sprung into the watch stem—not riveted; and as you take the watch you can twist the ring free from the watch and chain by an easy effort of the thumb and forefinger. You don't drop the ring; you bring watch and ring both, but separate from each other.

"Sometimes a very ticklish thing occurs. I get hold of a watch that opens easy and spring it open before I know it. Of course, I've got to let it remain that way. Shutting the case is clean out of the question. Closing a watch makes a noise like a gun.

"You can not protect yourself from a pickpocket. He can get any thing you have on but a ring from your finger. Your pin is his every time; so is your watch, and a tailor never made a pocket he can not explore as thoroughly as if he took a lantern.

"I was talking with a gentleman one day as I am with you, and he called my attention to an emerald stone of great value which he wore in his scarf.

"'Vauable, ain't it?' he asked.

"'I should judge it was,' I said, 'but I don't know much about emeralds. A pure one, I hear, is worth as much as a diamond.'

"'So it is,' he replied; 'you would rather like this one I wear, wouldn't you?' and at that he laughed as if he supposed I couldn't look on any thing without wanting to steal it.

"'No,' I said, 'I don't want your emerald; they bring bad luck. If I wanted it I'd take it.'

"'You couldn't get it; its fastenings are harder to get at than you think.'

"We let the matter drop and talked of something else. Something, as we talked, got into my eye and pained me greatly—eye-lash, I guess. I was in great pain, and he volunteered to get it out. He worked about ten seconds, and then I winked and declared the eye all right. As he stepped back I handed him his emerald, that he thought no one could get. He was very much astonished, but didn't say much. I could see that it destroyed his faith in those complex fastenings, though.

"Another time Robert A. Davidson and Judge Adams had been defending some of the family and got them clear, and we were giving them a little supper among other things by way of celebration. Talk turned on thieves and their work, and both Davidson and Adams, like every other man on earth, thought it impossible to plunder them. You could rob other men, but they were altogether too keenly sensitive. They would know the minute a thief got within a block of 'em, to hear 'em tell it. While the talk was going on the boys robbed them of every thing they had, even their eye-glasses. Of course we gave the stuff back.

"Well, I can't be with you always," he said. "I must go."

As he shook hands at parting he left my own pin in my hand. He had taken it from my scarf while we were talking. The pickpocket was "Mollie Matches."
—Kansas City Times.

DUKE AND MARQUIS.

They Had Considerable Fun at the Expense of the Station-Master.

An amusing incident lately occurred on a southern railroad in England in connection with the Duke of Norfolk and the Marquis of Bute, says London Society. The Duke and Marquis were fellow-travelers, and when the train stopped at —— station a companion joined them in the person of the station-master himself, who was going for a jaunt some twenty miles further up the line. The Duke and station-master, who were both diminutive men and therefore fond of talk, soon got into conversation, while the Marquis—a tall, robust man—was inclined to be reticent, until he found his friend the Duke up to his ears in conversation, when he himself joined, addressing most of his conversation to the stranger.

At length the train arrived at B—— and the Marquis bade a hearty farewell to the Duke, and with a kindly adieu and a shake of the hand from the stranger, the Marquis quitted the carriage, while his dispatch-box and wraps were secured, to the surprise of the station-master, by a tall, powdered footman, and the train soon glided again out of the station. Silence was not, however, long maintained, the station-master breaking out with the question: "I wonder who that swell was?" "That," replied his companion, "was the Marquis of Bute." The answer seemed to dumfound the station-master for a time, but presently he exclaimed: "So that were a Marquis,—was he? Well, now, I do think it kind of him to talk to two such snobby little chaps as us, don't you?" The Duke nodded his assent and had a good laugh. When the train drew up again his grace affably bade his companion "Good-bye," and, on alighting on the platform, was received with the greatest deference by a throng of Jesuit priests, this incident again setting the station-master the task of inquiry, who inquisitively asked a brother official: "Who that little bloke was?" "That," replied the guard, "is the Duke of Norfolk." The station-master, after this, declared he would never travel first-class again as long as he lived.

A Bargain in Kisses.

The new girl stood behind the counter in a South End bake shop, says the Springfield (Mass.) Union. A young man walked briskly up and laid down two cents with the words: "Two kisses." Doubtless he would have been satisfied with two of the white sugar-and-egg structures in the show-case, but the new clerk, who was brought up in Thompsonville, climbed upon a stool and pursed her red lips so temptingly that the customer got an extraordinary bargain—four kisses for two cents.

A Touch of Nature.

In the familiar song "Pull for the Shore" there is a line "Cling to self no more," which, as sung by the colored children in one of the schools, sounded strangely, and on having it said slowly it was discovered that they were singing: "Clean yourself no more."

WHAT BOYS CAN MAKE.

Useful Utensils for the Kitchen and a Sled for Every-Day Use.

"Bridget wants a new bosom-board, father. Will you buy one this morning?"

Here, surely, is something easy enough to begin with. Nothing is needed but a smooth, well-seasoned board, an inch thick, twelve inches wide and eighteen inches long. The material should be white pine. It is better without end pieces. It should not be rounded, either, as is sometimes done, but should have square corners; though our Mary says that if it could be cut out a little at one end, as shown in the cut, it would fit better around the neck. Let it be planed smooth, and finished with sand-paper.

FIG. 1

Not much more difficult is the ironing-board, which is a sort of great-uncle to the bosom-board. Use pine again, and make the board of the shape shown in Fig. 2, five feet long, twelve inches wide at the narrower end, and eighteen inches at the other.

This board will be right for all ordinary purposes, but if you have any little brothers or sisters you will fill Bridget's heart with delight if you make another board of the same length, but tapering from twelve inches at the widest end to only two inches at the other. The ends of this need not be rounded.

Before you get through with it, you will find that the kitchen will furnish a large portion of your orders, after your ability is once demonstrated. But for the present, we will consider only one more kitchen article suited to your undeveloped skill. This is a contrivance for holding the "scouring-brick." The construction appears in Fig. 3, and needs no further explanation than that there is a strip of leather fastened on the board to scour the knives upon.

FIG. 3.

Coming into the living-room, we find mother busily at work with her needle. This reminds me that Harry Doty—he was my first partner in the carpenter business—and I used to give very good satisfaction, and earn a little spending-money, by our manufacture of "lap-boards."

A lap-board is a broad, light, and strong board which a woman holds in her lap when she is sewing or cutting out, and upon which she spreads her work. We used for our material white-wood or else very clear pine, half an inch in thickness. We cut two strips, each a foot wide and three feet long, and fastened them together with glue, and by strips across the ends attached by long brads. We then rounded all the corners carefully, cut out a curved opening on one side to fit around the waist, and made the whole very smooth with sand-paper. I give a sketch, Fig. 4.

We used to take particular pride, I remember, in making the joining of the two boards so nice that it was very hard to detect it by the eye.

Another article, for which we found steady demand among our neighbors, was the snow-shovel. For a time we had poor success with these shovels, but at last hit upon the following plan, which proved reasonably successful. For the handles we bought hoe-handles. We made the blade of the shovel of half-inch white-wood, in sizes to suit the purchasers. One end of the blade was planed off to an edge, and protected by a piece of sheet iron folded over it and firmly riveted.

At the back of the blade we fastened a piece of inch stuff with screws from beneath, and bored a hole obliquely through it to admit the handle. Then we sawed off the lower end of the handle at the proper angle, and, passing it through the hole in the inch board, attached it to the blade of the shovel by two staples, which passed over it and were clinched beneath. The result is shown in Fig. 5. We used to put a screw down into the handle where it passed through the board at the back, and another between the staples.

Speaking of snow reminds me of sleds; and as boys can not confine their labors exclusively to merely useful manufacture, we may as well consider next how a boy can make a sled. This is more difficult than any thing heretofore described, partly because more pieces are needed, and partly because we shall have to use hard wood, at least for the frame.

Cherry or oak will do very well. Borrow the sled you like best for a pattern, and improve its lines a little if you can. Do not be afraid of making the runners too long for speed; three-quarters of an inch is thick enough, and you will hardly want your sled more than six or eight inches high.

The two runners or side-pieces must be firmly joined by cross-pieces, and it is better to cut out the holes for these to pass through before completely shaping the runners, so as to avoid danger of splitting.

Fig. 6 represents a runner "blocked out" on the board ready to cut. The dotted lines show the final shape. At a and b you will cut holes through the piece two inches long and one inch wide. First mark them out the required size, taking care to have the upper edge of the holes just one-half inch from the upper edge of the runner.

Now bore two holes with your inch bit side by side within the oblong space marked out and finish with a chisel. The cross-bars should next be made, and may be fourteen inches long if you prefer a narrow sled, or sixteen inches long if you prefer a wider one. If you like to have the ends of these cross-pieces project, of course you must allow for that. They should be two and one-half inches wide, and this will allow a shoulder a quarter of an inch on each side of the tenon, a, in Fig. 7.

You will fasten the bars in their places by strong wooden pins set in from the upper edge of the runner. (Fig. 8, a, a.)

Having finished the frame by making holes in the sides for your hands (Fig. 8, b), and holes in the front end for the rope (Fig. 8, c), you will fit the top board of half-inch white-wood, and finish the whole with stain and shellac, or paint and varnish, according to your taste. The shoes should be of tempered steel, and should be made and fitted by a competent blacksmith or wagon-maker.

In our little shop-book we once made the large entry: "Received for one study-table (black walnut), $4.00;" but unless my recollection of the ineffectual joinings and exceedingly crude finish of the rickety affair is much at fault, the table would have been dear at half that sum. It was too difficult an undertaking for our skill.

There is no end to the things that a boy can make, because the more he makes the more he can make. There are clothes frames, and tivoli-boards; work-boxes, and book-cases, and brackets; wash-benches and plant-stands; chicken-coops, and trellises, and ladders; aquariums and wardian cases; wood-boxes, saw-horses and cabinets.

But, after all, half the fun lies in finding out for yourself what you can make, and in devising the best means of making it; so that if the few hints I have given shall only start you pleasantly with your delightful work with fragrant, balsamy pine and spruce, and induce you to make all your joints honest, and all your finish fine, I shall have done you better service than if I were to give detailed directions for making every thing that can be made.—Harlan H. Ballard, in Youth's Companion.

THE SWEDISH PRINCES.

Two Bright Little Fellows Who Are Taught to Be Very Polite.

Prince Oscar and Prince Karl of Sweden are very loving brothers.

Royal children have generally long names, and the elder of the two is really Oscar Frederick William Olaf Gustavus Adolphus.

There have been some famous Kings of Sweden named Gustavus, so the Swedish people love the name; and if this little Prince ever becomes King, he will be known as Gustavus Adolphus VI.

He is to be a soldier; he will not be a play-soldier, but he will have the hard work that real soldiers have to do. He was born November 11, 1882, so he is but eight years old.

The younger Prince is Karl William Ludwig; he is to be a sailor. The two boys live much of the time near the seaside in the Castle of Tullgarn. There they go bathing and fishing, and the elder has learned to swim. Little Princes and Princesses have a great many things to learn, and they must begin their work early. Prince Oscar has for some time been able to read and write well.

Like all other children, they like to "go to grandfather's" visiting. Their grandfather is King Oscar of Sweden. He is very fond of the children, and when they go to see him, he takes great pleasure in giving them the military drill. They go through their exercises on the lawn, where the people of the neighborhood can stand outside and watch them. When they are through, he tells them to "present arms" to the people.—Pamela McArthur Cole, in Little Men and Women.

How to Walk Gracefully.

Correct dress sustains an important relation to correct carriage. If the dress be loose, light and healthful, the shoes easy fitting and with low heels, muscular activity is unimpeded. But correct carriage is not to be attained without symmetrical muscular development. For instance, if a person has a weak spine and the muscles of the shoulder are weak, it can be readily seen that he will walk with shoulders down and slightly stooping. One with weak muscles in the sides of the body always walks with a swaying gait. To walk well the abdominal muscles must also be strong. Bad bodily carriage is to be corrected by developing the muscles of the whole body and by systematic training in walking and standing.—From lecture by Dr. Kellogg.

Big Foot's Braves Fire Upon Their Captors.

CAPT. GEORGE WALLACE KILLED

Several Soldiers Wounded and Many Indians Reported Dead.

A Bloody and Desperate Conflict—Precipitated by the Troops Attempting to Disarm Big Foot's Band—A Second Battle—Official Dispatches from General Miles—Great Excitement at Pine Ridge.

PINE RIDGE AGENCY, Dec. 30.—A courier from the Bad Lands who has just arrived here announced that a bloody and desperate conflict occurred during the morning on Porcupine Creek between the United States troops and the hostiles.

The fight was precipitated by the troops under Colonel Forsyth attempting to disarm Big Foot's band. Captain Wallace, commanding K troop of the Seventh Cavalry, was killed. Lieutenant Garlington of the same regiment was shot in both arms. Several soldiers and a number of Indians were also killed.

The greatest excitement prevails among agency employes and also among the friendlies, many of whom are relatives of the young bucks now on the warpath. Great fears are entertained here for the safety of this post. The courier who brought this news of the conflict could only give the facts relating to the commencement of the fight.

Another Battle.

PINE RIDGE AGENCY, Dec. 30.—A second fight occurred near this agency. One of Col. Forsyth's troopers of the Seventh Cavalry was fired on by some Indians who went out from the Rosebud camp near Pine Ridge. This caused a skirmish in which two soldiers were wounded. The Indians who were camped near where this skirmish took place moved west to a creek near the agency. Owing to the absence of the cavalry there is great trepidation here. Indian scouts who have just come in say that but few of Big Foot's band are left alive.

SIX SOLDIERS KILLED.

The War Department Receives Official Dispatches About the Fight.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—Official dispatches from General Miles, dated Rapid City, S. D., were received by General Scofield telling of the fight in the Bad Lands between the Indian hostiles and the white troops. The dispatches were first sent by General Brook to General Miles. The first was as follows:

"Whiteside had four troops of cavalry and held the Indians till Forsythe reached him with four more troops last night. At 8:30 a. m. while disarming the Indians a fight commenced. I think very few Indians escaped. I think we will have this matter in hand as soon as all are in position. There was no precaution omitted. The fight occurred near the head of Wounded Knee Creek. I have just seen many of the Indians who went out toward Forsythe this morning come back."

The next dispatch was:

"Gen. Brooke telegraphs Porsythe reports that while disarming Big Foot's band this morning a fight occurred, Captain Wallace and five soldiers killed, Lieutenant Garlington and 15 men wounded. The Indians are being hunted up in all directions. None known to have got their ponies. Gen. Brooke also reports that many of the young warriors that were going out from the camp in the Bad Lands to the agency have gone toward Forsythe. All troops have been notified. Col. Forsythe had two battalions Seventh Cavalry and Hotchkiss guns. Other troops in close proximity."

A later dispatch says:

"Gen. Brooke reports that two shots were fired near the agency (Pine Ridge) by some one, and several were fired in return. Quite a large number of Two Strike's band ran away and all at the agency are greatly excited. All this makes matters look more serious."

REGRET AT WASHINGTON.

General Scofield and Secretary Proctor Discuss the Battle.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—General Sofield, though deeply regretting the occurrence, was not greatly surprised when he learned of the treachery displayed by the Indians in the fight. He had been on the lookout for treachery all the time: it was almost inevitable. That the trouble would end without a conflict of this kind was almost too much to hope for.

So far as he could see just now there appeared to be no further danger at hand, except that to be feared from the disarmament of the band of Indians that is still out, though the excitement following the fight of to-day might be the means of leading to further trouble.

Secretary Proctor also expressed regret at the occurrence, as he had hoped for a a settlement of the trouble without further bloodshed. He supposed that inasmuch as Big Foot was connected with Sitting Bull's band, it was a case where the Indians wanted revenge for the killing of their friend. Both Secretary Proctor and General Schofield felt disinclined to talk at length in the absence o detailed information.

Worst Snow Storm of the Season.

WEST MORRIS, Conn., Dec. 30.—A large meteor flashed across the sky here last night. It made a brilliant light and burst with a report like the roar of a cannon.

BRUTAL TRAGEDY.

Three Persons Shot Dead by a Hungarian—Escape of the Assassin.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Dec. 30.—Broderick's Patch, a little mining hamlet about six miles from this city, was thrown into excitement during the day over a most brutal tragedy, which resulted in the death of three persons.

Early in the morning John Tirello, a Hungarian from Edgerton, who had been in the hamlet but a few days, entered the saloon of Michael Curley, and in the presence of the latter's 5-year-old daughter Mamie, shot and killed Mrs. Curley, and then shot Curley, who had just come down stairs. Tirello also shot and instantly killed a Hungarian named Michael Hodak, and then laying the revolver on the prostrate form of Curley, made his escape.

Officers are hotly pursuing him and have tracked him as far as the stone bridge at Wyoming, three miles away.

The only person in the room, excepting those directly concerned in the tragedy, was the little girl Mamie, and she is too young to make an intelligible statement. The theory that Tirello did the shooting is the most reasonable, and is borne out by the child, who insists that Tirello shot her mother, and not her father, as was at first supposed.

HE MURDERED HIS FATHER.

The Trial of Young Herbert Warren Commenced at Elmira.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Dec. 30.—The trial of Herbert Warren, a 16-year-old boy, for the murder of his father, J. Frank Warren, has commenced here before Judge Smith. The day was occupied in an effort to secure a jury.

J. Frank Warren was a traveling man and was home but little. He brought his family here from Michigan and then took long trips away himself. Mrs. Warren is au invalid. Warren was engaged in intrigues with women in Connecticut, it is alleged, and his wife learned of it. June 12 last he came home and had a quarrel with his wife. At 2 o'clock in the morning Warren was shot down by his son Herbert, who claimed that his father was assaulting his mother and that she called on him for assistance. The boy admitted the shooting.

REED CONVICTED.

He is Found Guilty of Wrecking a Central-Hudson Train.

TROY, N. Y., Dec. 30.—The trial of John Reed, the Central-Hudson striker accused of train wrecking, was concluded last night.

The case was given to the jury at 8 o'clock after an impartial summing up by Judge Griffith.

At 10:10 p. m. the jury came in with a verdict of guilty as charged.

Was Brown Murdered?

BELVIDERE, N. J., Dec. 30.—Oxford, a small village near this place, is excited over the finding of the body of James Brown in a room at his home. There is a strong suspicion that he met with foul play. It is said his watch and money, which are missing, were stolen. A young man who is known as one of his intimate associates has been placed under arrest pending an investigation, which is to be made by the coroner.

The Robber Confronted With a Pistol.

ERIE, Pa., Dec, 30.—Officer Joseph B. Blenner, son of ex-Chief of Police Blenner, was detected early in the morning in the store of the Mauer Confectionery Company, and while emptying the money drawer was confronted by one of the proprietors with a revolver. Blenner confessed to having stolen about $25 at various times, and was locked up. The arrest has caused much excitement.

Reduction in Steel Workers' Wages.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 30.—According to the sliding scale which governs the steel workers' wages at Carnegie's Homestead plant, the wages of about 1,500 steel workers will be reduced about 10 per cent January 1. The scale is based on the price of steel billets, which have been steadily falling off during the last three months.

Rewarded by the French Government.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Dec. 30.—Captain William H. Thomas, of the schooner Horace B. Parker, has been given a magnificent marine glass by the French Government in recognition of his conduct in rescuing two French fishermen in May last. The men had been adrift four days and nights when rescued, and were lying helpless in the bottom of their dory, badly frostbitten.

Looks Like Hydrophobia.

BIRMINGHAM, Conn., Dec. 30.—E. A. Walker of Ansonia was bitten on the leg by a dog ten days ago and has suffered intense agony. His leg is swollen and his mental condition is such that he is kept under the influence of opiates. The doctors refuse to say yet whether it is a case of hydrophobia or not.

Alleged Fiendish Dance Around a Postmaster's Body.

WAS HE MURDERED BY A MOB?

Another Account of the Killing of John Prentice Matthews.

The Civil Service Commissioners Send a Letter to the President—Surprised at Mr. Wanamaker's Report—The Senate Confirms the Appointment of Justice Brown—The West After More Members.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—J. M. Matthews, of Mississippi, who was the Republican candidate for Congress against Congressman Hooker in the last election, is a brother of John P. Matthews, the postmaster at Carrollton, Miss., who was killed by a man named McBride. Mr. Matthews, who is in Washington, has received the following telegram from Carrollton:

"John was murdered by a mob. He had been notified by a dozen men that a mob was going to kill him. He saw the men with their guns and he got a rifle. When he did this the sheriff arrested him and placed him under bonds. John pointed three men out to the sheriff and asked him to arrest them and protect his life. The sheriff refused. It was a plot and all were in it. John told Lloyd (a young man working for him) he thought they would kill him before night. He stayed at the postoffice until his second dinner bell rang, when he said he would go to dinner. They begged him not to go, but he said he would.

"When he reached the hotel steps McBride, who was still in his drug store, shot him down with a shotgun, killing him instantly. Not satisfied with this, McBride fired five shots at him from a revolver after he was dead. The mob then began dancing and shouting around the body with the most vile abuse and curses. John had received several anonymous letters telling him he must leave the town. The murderer goes free, and all because they must have the postoffice at Carrollton."

"My brother," said Mr. Matthews, "was only 21 years old. He was a bright, intelligent boy. He was appointed postmaster several months ago at Carrollton, and while there have been a number of threats at his life I did not think anything would come of it."

DENY THE STATEMENT.

The Civil Service Commissioners Surprised at Mr. Wanamaker's Report.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—The Civil Service Commission has addressed a letter to the President in reply to the annual report of the Postmaster-General, in which Mr. Wanamaker said that the civil service examination ought to be improved by being rendered more difficult.

In its letter the commission points out the fact that they have many times asked high officials of the Postoffice Department for a suggestion as to the improvement of these examinations, and have also asked the Postmaster-General himself; and that the officials have never been able to give them any suggestions. This report, they say, is the first intimation that they have received of the Postoffice Department having anything whatever to suggest.

The Postmaster-General's statement that from one-third to one-fourth of the men furnished by the commission through the railway mail service examination have not proved satisfactory, is denied by the commission in its letter, which shows that more than nine-tenths of these men are still kept in the service, and the commissioners express surprise that their work is not satisfactory. Thus, the commission says, the figures of Mr. Wanamaker's own report contradict his assertion. The figures also show that of the postoffice inspectors furnished from the commission's list, more than 90 have been retained. There is no class of employes, the commission says in conclusion, which it is more desirable to keep from political patronage than postoffice inspectors.

Doctors Praise the Lymph.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 30.—The lymph patients at Johns Hopkins Hospital are reported improving under the treatment. The doctors say the patients have without doubt been greatly benefitted by the inoculation. Dr. Hurd expressed his great faith in Koch's discovery by saying it would save thousands of lives every year. Dr. Abbott, who went to Berlin for another supply of lymph, has returned with it. He is enthusiastic over its curative merits.

New Law Against the Jews.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—A St. Petersburg correspondent states that a new law against the Jews will be promulgated with the opening of the new year. It forbids selling, leasing or mortgaging to a Jew any estate within the empire. All privileges heretofore granted to certain Jewish merchants as to the ownership of real estate are cancelled. Jewish artisans who have been permitted to reside outside of the Jewish pale will have to return.

THE NEW UNIVERSITY.

The Board of Trustees of Yale Adopt Professor Harper's Plan.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 30.—The plan of the new University of Chicago, proposed by Professor Harper of Yale, has just been adopted by the board of trustees of the university. It had been previously submitted to between 50 and 60 of the most prominent educators in the country. All these, without exception, have fully indorsed the plan.

The endowment fund of the university amounts to $1,500,000 with a building fund of $500,000. Building operations will shortly be commenced on the 10 acres presented by Marshall Field.

Negotiations are pending with the Baptist Theological Seminary at Morgan Park for the effecting of a union with the new university. The seminary has a valuable library of 25,000 volumes and an endowment fund of $300,000. A feature of the university will be the absence of all creed or class lines.

Professor Harper has not yet announced his decision in regard to the presidency of the university. He declares that so far he is acting as a member of the board of trustees. Many things may happen which would prevent his becoming president, he says. The remaining trustees are not counting on any such contingency, and are full of confidence that when the month of May comes his decision will bind his connection with the university.

THE SCOTCH STRIKE.

Strikers Deny that the Roads Are in Fair Running Order.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—The Scotch railway strikers assert that all the talk about the men being beaten and the road in fair running order again is a bluff, intended to throw the strikers in a panic if possible and lead to defections which will demoralize the ranks of the men.

The present outlook, to outsiders, is that the men are determined to fight to the bitter end, and the railway officials are just as determined in their purpose to crush the rebellious workmen.

The strikers allege that the companies are imitating the tactics of the dock managers during the dockers' strike of last year by issuing misleading information.

The expression of sympathy for the men, adopted at various public meetings, has greatly encouraged the strikers.

BIG FAILURE IN DUBLIN.

The Chairman of the Stock Exchange Goes Under for a Large Amount.

DUBLIN, Dec. 30.—The firm of F. E. Dubedat & Son, stock brokers, has suspended, with liabilities estimated at over £250,000, and placed by others at various sums ranging from £60,000 up to the former amount. It is rumored that the members of the firm are missing. The senior partner was chairman of the Dublin Stock Exchange.

Upon the announcement of the suspension, Mr. Copeland, the vice-chairman, was elected to the presidency of the exchange. The exchange was thrown into demoralization by the news of the suspension, but the normal feeling was soon restored.

Mine Operators Take Action.

PHILLIPSBURG, Pa., Dec. 30.—At a meeting of the operators of the Phillipsburg and Beech Creek districts, held here, the following action was taken, and is intended to be in reply to the demand of their miners for an advance January 1: "There has been no advance in mining asked from competitive regions and for part of this region, therefore we deem it unjust and uncalled for to make a demand for an advance of price in this region." This action will lead to a strike on Thursday unless the miners weaken.

The West Wants More Members.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—Senator Davis of Minnesota, who is a member of the Senate Committee on Census, has introduced an amendment to the Apportionment bill, which is now before that committee, granting one more Representative to the States of Minnesota, Arkansas and Missouri. This would make the House 359 members. He does not want to increase New York's delegation. The committee has not voted on this amendment yet.

Will Try to Extradite Piquet.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—An official of the New York District Attorney's office, is in the city to consult with the State Department about the extradition of Eugine Piquet, the defaulting cashier of the Lancashire Insurance Company, who skipped with $18,000 belonging to the Company. Piquet is now in Geneva, Switzerland, where he was captured a few days ago.

Confirmed by the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—The Senate confirmed the nomination of Henry B. Brown to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, vice Justice Miller, deceased.

Connecticut's Ballot Law.

MERIDEN, Conn., Dec. 30.—Judge Fenn, of the Supreme Court, decided that a Republican ballot, which was mutilated in opening the envelope when canvassed at the late election, and which was rejected by the Democratic moderator, was legal. This decision makes Golden, Republican, alderman, there having been a tie between him and Bradly, Democrat, without this ballot.

End of the Chicago Players' Club.

CHICAGO, Dec. 30.—The Chicago White Stocking Club is no more. Its grand stand and chairs, the lease of its park and its insurance policies, its books and papers and its contracts with players belong to the League Club. The deal was consummated at a final meeting between Spalding and Addison.

THE LEADERS MEET

Parnell and O'Brien in Conference To-Day.

THEIR MEETING VERY FRIENDLY

A Large Number of Prominent Irishmen Waiting to Hear the Result.

Three Counties in Ireland Placarded by a Startling Proclamation—An Appeal for Parnell and Victory—Healy's Remarks About Mrs. O'Shea Displeasing to O'Brien—Sullivan and Parnell.

BOULOGNE, Dec. 30.—Messrs. Parnell O'Brien, Gill and a large delegation of Irishmen are in this city.

Parnell came here quietly last night followed soon after by O'Brien and Gill It is reported that the greeting between Parnell and O'Brien in Paris last night was very friendly.

The two Irishmen, upon the result of whose labors it is generally acknowledged so much depends, had evidently been devoting the earlier portion of the morning to steady work. Mr. O'Brien, it must be admitted, shows traces of the great mental and physical strains which have recently been put upon him. In spite of this, however, his manner was cheerful and hopeful in the extreme. He showed no signs of bitterness while speaking to a reporter of the trials that the cause of Ireland has recently been subjected to.

Mr. O'Brien was asked early this morning: "Is it true that the conference between you and Mr. Parnell upon recent events is to take place here this afternoon?" He replied:

"That is a point upon which I am unable to speak at this time. There is no necessity to anticipate matters of that description. To say more than this would, possibly, imperil the success of our efforts."

The Irish editor then disappeared, to confer with Mr. Parnell, it is said.

London Irishmen Suspicious.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—Well informed Irishmen in London declare that there is not the slightest chance of a compromise being effected at the Boulogne conference between Messrs. O'Brien and Parnell The scheme of the Parnellites, they say is to gain Mr. O'Brien's consent, and that of the McCarthyites generally, to a sham retirement of Mr. Parnell, who is to retain the real control of affairs, but without taking an open personal part in their management. It is also stipulated that after a certain time he shall be at liberty to resume the active leadership. Prominent Irishmen of both factions agree that this plan will not work, as it would be unmasked by the Liberals and prevent a resumption of the Gladstone alliance. This the McCarthyites will never agree to be responsible for.

PARNELL'S APPEAL.

Westmeath, Roscommon and Athlone Placarded With His Proclamation.

DUBLIN, Dec. 30.—Athlone, Roscommon and Westmeath are placarded by a startling proclamation which appears in the most conspicuous places.

It asserts that true Irishmen are resolved to maintain their independence, and describes the recent Kilkenny electoral reverses to the Parnellites as a "trumpet call for you to close your ranks and make a last supreme fight for the cause."

It continues: "The fatherland is threatened by a calamity surpassing a thousand coercion acts, the lowering of the flag of independence to the vague promises of a British statesman. Irish history teems with disasters resulting from reliance placed upon English promises. We want home rule for which Emmet and other patriots gave their noble lives. We were advancing to victory under a good leader. Support him and Ireland's cause forever. God save Ireland."

O'Brien Displeased With Healy.

PARIS, Dec. 30.—It has leaked out that Mr. O'Brien has expressed deep indignation at Mr. Healy's statements on the platform in Kilkenny, that he, O'Brien, had been obliged to go to Mrs. O'Shea to ascertain the whereabouts of Mr. Parnell, thus virtually suggesting that Mr. O'Brien was fully aware of the intrigue. While neither denying nor affirming as to this, O'Brien considers Healy's statement a breach of confidence.

Sullivan's Quarrels With Parnell.

DUBLIN, Dec. 30.—T. D. Sullivan, referring to a statement that he had a personal reason for enmity toward Mr. Parnell, stated that he never quarreled with Mr. Parnell but twice, both times in connection with Captain O'Shea's candidacy for Galway.

Cut His Throat and Robbed Him.

WOONSOCKET, R. I., Dec. 30.—Archibald McDonald of Hyde Park, Mass., who was found wandering about the streets of this city with his throat badly gashed, died during the morning. McDonald made an ante mortem deposition that he was attacked by five men in Hyde Park on December 19, who cut his throat and robbed him of $9.

Wilhelm Wants Tall Men for Guards.

BERLIN, Dec. 30.—The Emperor is following the example of Frederick the Great in enlisting the tallest men that can be found for the guards. The latest acquisition is a young Rhinelander whose height is seven feet, four and a half inches. He is the tallest man in the guards since 1850.

Dead in a Snow Bank.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—Frank A. Early, 40 years old, was found dead during the morning in a snow bank at the corner of Frankfort and Pearl streets. Early was an operator on the waiting list of the Western Union Telegraph Company. His wife and child are living in Newburg, this State.

Practices What He Preaches.

(This is 1890.)

DR. MOTT, late U. S. Gov't Chemist, says: "Owing to the purity, strength, effectiveness, and constancy of composition of Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder, I have adopted the same for use in my home." July 23, 1890.

STARTLING ROBBERY.

Four Men Make a Haul in a Chicago Bank but are Chased and Captured.

CHICAGO, Dec. 30.—A telephone message from South Chicago says that four men entered the bank there, covered the cashier with revolvers and robbed the bank of all the money it contained. They jumped into a buggy and drove rapidly toward the city. The alarm was given and officers started rapidly in pursuit.

The bank officials say that the robbers secured but $2,800, leaving $4,000 in the cashier's drawer and a $10,000 package in the vault undisturbed.

Frank Linn, the assistant cashier, was alone behind the counter when the thieves entered the bank. Two of them covered Linn with revolvers while the third man went through the teller's door and beat him into insensibility. One of the men on the outside of the counter then went behind the counter and helped himself to the available cash, while the other stood guard at the door and the third man stood over the prostrate bank official.

The thieves were surprised in the midst of their operations by the approach of C. P. Wilder, the cashier. Hurriedly throwing the limp form of Linn into the bank vault and locking it the four robbers jumped into the buggy and drove off at breakneck speed. Cashier Wilder upon seeing the bank deserted opened the vault door and there found Linn, who had sufficiently recovered to tell the story of the robbery.

The police were immediately notified and every station sent out its reserve force. Six patrol wagons were dispatched to head off the robbers. At 52d street the robbers abandoned the buggy, the horse being completely exhausted, and jumped into a delivery wagon which a confederate had in readiness. At 49th street Lieut. Jenkins was almost within firing distance of the desperadoes. Here they abandoned the covered wagon and ran in all directions.

At 46th street a posse of citizens who were aiding in the pursuit was fired into by one of the robbers, and Patrick O'Brien was shot in the hip and dangerously wounded. At 43d street Lieutenant Jenkins came upon one of the band and ordered him to throw up his hands. For an answer the robber drew a revolver and fired at the lieutenant and his associates. Lieutenant Jenkins returned the fire and the desperado fell to the ground with a bullet in his thigh. The other three sought shelter in the neighboring houses and yards. Two of them were soon captured, but the fourth man escaped. He is completely surrounded and the police are confident they will capture him also when he leaves his place of concealment.

The wounded robber gives his name as John Corbett. He is not known to the police. The other two that were captured are Morris Hennesy, well known in police circles, and Charles Mullen, a stock yards butcher.

Secretary Rusk's Action Objected To.

OTTAWA, Dec. 30.—The action of Secretary Rusk, of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, in closing certain Vermont ports for entry of Canadian cattle into the United States, owing to the alleged existence of pleuro-pneumonia in the Dominion, is much criticised here. —There is no better time of the year for squaring up accounts than the present. To begin the new year with as clean a financial record as possible will not only make one feel better but will make times easier by putting just so much money into circulation. It is an excellent thing to pay up at any time, but never a better time than now.

—The Reception Committee of the Y. M. C. A., whose reputation is established, have in charge the New Year's reception from 3 to 10 P. M., at the Association rooms Thursday, January 1. A fine assortment of pictures from the Camera Club will be on exhibition. A programme will be rendered at 8 P. M. and refreshments will be served during the day and evening.

—The list of accidents caused by falls on slippery sidewalks is becoming formidable. Householders who do not desire to have a death on their hands as the result of their gross carelessness, ought to obey the law and keep their portion of the sidewalk clean. Perhaps these householders might be quickened in their welldoing by a prompt and vigorous enforcement of the existing law against the nuisance of unswept sidewalks.

—As between Bergen of Somerset and Mullone of Hudson, for Speaker of the next House, there is no political preference, but there is as to counties. The State generally doesn't like Hudson county to have so much authority. It isn't a wholesome county, and its political methods are decidedly unwholesome. Somerset is a much cleaner county even if does go Democratic at odd intervals, and Bergen is a clever fellow.—Elizabeth Journal.

THE CLOSE OF A BUSY YEAR.

EXIT OF THE CITY'S COMMON COUNCIL OF 1890.

Its Own Debts Paid, and Those of Its Predecessors—An Excellent Record, Despite Prejudice and Handicap—The City Tax Reduced—The Best Financial Showing in Plainfield's History—A Christmas Find of $600—The New Council to Settle Water-Works Difficulties—Thanks to Efficient Officers—Routine Work of the Final Session.

The Plainfield Common Council of 1890 closed its year of work last night with an excellent record. In spite of the fact that the Council of 1889 left it a considerable amount of debt to pay, the careful judgment and economical management of the now departing board of city fathers has resulted in its transferring balances instead of deficiencies to next year, and in cutting down, notwithstanding its having covered fully the heavy expenses of the past twelve months and its legacy of debts besides, the tax for city purposes.

The most notable improvement in the condition of these public affairs is perhaps that of the Committee on Lights, for which Councilman Spangenberg, chairman, reported as follows:

Amount of bills paid in 1890	$9,081 08
Less amount of bills paid for 1889	1,349 78
Actual amount expended for 1890	$7,731.30
Number of lamps in use
338 lamps at $14 60 per annum	$4,934.80
226 lamps at $17.50 per annum	3,955.00
564	$8,889.80
6 lamps for Plainfield avenue, at $17.50 per annum	105.00
	$8,994 80
Surplus	5.20
Appropriation	$9,000.00

As the amount paid for public lighting by the Council of 1889 was $7,109.65, and as even that expenditure left a debt of $1,349.78 for the Light Committee of the new Council to meet, the $7,731.30 paid out for the expiring year's light can hardly be considered an extravagant sum. The truth of the matter is that this Committee, with other Committees of the Council of 1890, have exercised wise discretion throughout the year, have husbanded carefully their resources, and have wrought much benefit to the people by their thoroughness and efficiency in handling the reins of public government.

The appropriation for streets this year, as shown in the report of Commissioner Meeker' presented by Councilman Smith, Chairman of the Street Committee, was $15,000. Of this amount the Street Committee had to use $2,661.77 in paying bills belonging to the Council of 1889. The sum actually expended on street work for this year was $10,281.36, but in meeting all the current expenses of the Committee for the twelve months just ending, in setting up old debts, and squaring accounts in full, almost the entire amount of $17,797, raised jointly by the appropriation and from the contributions of citizens whose property was benefited by improvements, had to be used. That all work has been faithfully done the public already knows.

But though thus handicapped by the debts of the preceding Council, the Council of 1890 succeeded in cutting down the city tax 7 points less than last year. The only thing that caused the increase in the tax rate this year from 2.15 to 2.24, as THE PRESS has already explained, was the big jump in the county tax, resulting from the heavy expenditures on the country roads.

Much of the work of the Council at its closing session last night was of a routine character, but several interesting matters received attention. The subject of water-works bobbed up with its perennial serenity in a communication from G. M. Dorrance, who offered to construct a satisfactory water-works and sewerage plant for the city which should give good service at moderate cost. He himself guaranteed the capital, and promised that if he were given the franchise the city might have free of charge all the water necessary for fire protection. All he required was the assurance that the subterranean supply of water was adequate to operate the works, and he stood ready to begin the work of construction. The letter was filed.

For the Water Board Councilman Newhall said that the Board might, if it chose, report the final default of the Water-Works Company of Plainfield, but thought it best to leave the matter for the incoming Council to dispose of. The Corporation Counsel—he added—advised that no legal action be taken till after Jan. 1. The Water Board had done its best—he said—throughout the year, but the matter of water-works was not now in the condition for which the Board had hoped at the beginning of their term.

A Christmas find of $595.61 was reported by Councilman Johnson, who said that he had learned that ex-City Treasurer Jeremiah VanWinkle still held that amount, besides various books and papers, belonging to the city. The money belongs to the assessment account, and was raised, years ago, by a tax on property-holders benefited, to help pay for the construction of the New street sewer. Because of a dispute as to the legality of the assessment, the sum was not used, and was afterwards forgotten. The coming Council may make good use of it, however, as by unanimous vote it was ordered, together with all other property of the city, transferred from Mr. VanWinkle's to the present treasurer's hands.

Steps to abate the public nuisance caused by a portion of North avenue, near the Netherwood railway station, being constantly under water, were taken in the adoption of a resolution presented by Councilman Smith. By order of the Council the Street Commissioner will now proceed to abate the nuisance, and an attempt will be made to make the parties responsible for the nuisance—whether the Jersey Central Railroad Company, or the Land Improvement Company, or both—respond to suits for damages in the courts. Besides this, the Corporation Counsel will, in accordance with the instructions of the resolution, prepare the evidence necessary to secure the indictment of the parties through whose heedlessness the nuisance has been maintained.

George W. Grant, Captain of Police, in his annual report, said that it was "with much gratification" that he was able to state that 272 persons had been arrested during the year. Of these 249 were men, and 23 women. The arrests for drunkenness and disorderly conduct numbered 93, drunkenness 68, gambling 6, assault 7, fast driving 4, and trespassing on trains 9 The amount of fines collected was $986.50. The work of the police the past nine months, he considered, compared favorably with that of the same period in former years. The officers had labored hard, day and night, and their service fully merited the appreciation and support of all law-abiding citizens.

T. O. Doane, Chief Engineer of the Fire Department, reported that besides himself and his two assistants there were now 163 members in the department, an increase of 24 over the first of the year. Four men had been placed on the exempt list, and 11 had been expelled. Among the needed improvements which he suggested for next year were a new hook and ladder truck, an addition to Gazelle engine house, four more fire-alarm boxes, red-globe lamps at the location of all the signal boxes, and a better water-supply to meet the needs of the rapidly-growing city. The purchase of the city's own fire horses he considered a wise investment; the animals had already earned $1,065 for the department, and would in time pay for their original cost as well as earn their own "board and keep." He praised the excellent co-operation Assistants Waters and Martin had given him.

A bill for $370, from The Pond Machine Tool Company, was presented. Councilman Smith explained that through a clerical error the company had agreed, last Spring, to furnish the city with a street roller for $270 instead of $370, the price they had meant to set. Either amount was lower than any other bid, and as it was clearly shown that the error was a clerical one the Council ordered payment for $357.83, the exact cost of the roller to the company.

A long list of bills amounting to nearly $5,500 were ordered paid. The Treasurer was instructed to meet notes for $2,900 falling due Dec. 31. Samuel Drier's pawnbroker bond, made under the new ordinance, with Elias R. Pope as surety, was found correct. Max Hanson was made a member of Hook and Ladder Company No. 1, and Jos. M. Hoffman and Ernest R. Ackerman were confirmed as members of Alert Hose Company. On motion of Councilman Hetfield a unanimous vote of thanks was extended to President Moffett for his able and impartial ruling throughout the year, and one to City Clerk Coward for his efficient services. Both gentlemen thanked the Council and said that they had tried to do their duty cheerfully and faithfully, and that whatever of error they had committed had not been from the heart. Councilman Hetfield in a brief speech congratulated himself on having been connected with the Council of 1890, and congratulated the Council on its completing the year with such a splendid record. On the first day of the coming January—he said—the city would be in a better financial condition than any preceding Council had ever left it in. There would be fewer bills outstanding than ever before, and in every way public matters would bear the stamp of signal prosperity because of the work of the Council of 1890. The Council adjourned some time after ten o'clock—"sign die," as Mr. Dunham said— and Councilmen Dunham, Gallup, Hetfield, Jenkins, Johnson, Moffett, Newhall, Roberts, Rushmore, Smith and Spangenberg, comprising the Council of 1890, filed down the stairs which some of them will not climb next year.

THE "PYRAMUS AND THISBE."

A Dramatic Society of Society People Who Will Play for Plainfield's Charitable Societies.

A number of well known society people have formed a dramatic club, which is to be known as the "Pyramus and Thisbe." The fact that this club is composed of the best amateur talent in the city, and that they make their debut for the benefit of Plainfield's three general charities, assures their success.

The first performance will be given at the Casino on the twenty-second of January, and will consist of an old English play and new American farce. Cards of admission can be obtained only of the following patrons:

A Plainfield Swell's Fall.

It is so seldom that Plainfielders experience skating weather, they are not slow in taking advantage of it. They are also most enthusiastic and will walk to the New Brooklyn pond, take a train to New Market or even skate on a little snow-swept meadow lake such as may be found on South avenue opposite Barrett's dairy.

This morning quite a party of the swellest people of the city including a trio of college boys home for a vacation, walked to a small pond close by and apart from "common folks" proceeded to enjoy themselves. One of those present, a stalwart freshman who lives in the neighborhood of Seventh street, proceeded to give an exhibition of his skill as a fancy skater, to the envy of the other young men and the admiration of the ladies. A PRESS reporter passing was so fortunate as to catch a "flash light" of the skater as he wound up the "grape-vine twist." It is given above. When the skater arose, the ladies all turned their backs while the gentlemen with pins repaired the fallen swell's toilet so that he could walk home hidden by his ulster without losing any of his clothes.

The Husband Censured.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 30.—The coroner's jury in the case of the Dietrich family, including a mother and three children who were burned to death at their residence on the 26th, brought in a verdict severely censuring John Dietrich, the husband and father, for gross negligence in failing to even attempt to rescue his wife and children.

His Neck Broken by a Colt.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 30.—The body of Andrew Farward, a farmer who lived near North Pembroke, was found immersed in a large iron kettle used for a watering trough. The water was frozen and the ice had to be chopped away. Farward had been thrown into the kettle by a colt which he was leading to water. His neck was broken.

Clarence M. Smith has bren elected Treasurer of the Epworth League, in the place of Miss Ida Angleman, resigned.

Miss Clara Burt is home from Wellesley College for the Holidays. She continues to hold the high standing in her class which characterized her Freshman year.

Father Runyon, nearly ninety years of age, the honored father of Chancellor Runyon of Newark, is confined to his room at 4 Central avenue.

Mr. Clifford McGee is home from Yale College to spend the Holidays. He has been elected one of the Deacons of his class. It is one of the class honors, and most worthily bestowed. Clifford is more proud of it than to be on the foot-ball team.

At the last meeting of the Official Board the Committee on Aggressive Work recommended the election of a committee to have in charge the affairs of the Monroe Avenue Chapel. The following is the Committee ordered: James McGee, James W. Jackson, John Corey, the Pastor, and the Superintendent of the Monroe Avenue Sunday School.

Mrs. Lyman, of Baltimore, has recently been visiting her son, Mr. Chas. H. Lyman, of Washington avenue.

The ill-health of Mrs. Clinton Van Vliet will require the residence of the family to be in New York during the Winter. These good people will be missed.

Master Clarence Mills surprised us all with his excellent violin solos at the Christmas exercises. He handled the bow with remarkable skill for so young a player.

Rev. and Mrs. Herbert Welch are spending part of their Holiday vacation among relatives in this city. Mrs. Welch has been most warmly welcomed "home."

Mr. Ollie Welch, a student at Wesleyan, and one of the ushers at the Welch-McGee wedding last June, died, after a brief illness, at his father's home in New York, last week.

Charlie Hurlbut is home for the Holidays from the Wesleyan University. Charlie has gained a fine standing in his class, and is as popular in college as he is here among those who have known him from childhood.

Much praise is due Mr. Walter M. McGee for the excellent music of the Christmas exercises. Although much of the music was quite difficult, so careful had been his drilling that even the most difficult numbers were rendered admirably.

The social given by the ladies of the Home Missionary Society was a very pleasant affair to those in attendance. The refreshments were elegant. The piano solos by Miss Place, and the report read by the Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. E. P. Stevens, were noted features of the evening's enjoyment. The little speech by Millie Spicer captured all hearts, and some dollars for the treasury of the Society.

During the past nine months there have been added to the full-membership of our church from probation and by letter, one hundred and eleven. This makes our present full-membership five hundred and ninety-six. In addition to this number, eighty-eight have joined on probation. This makes our membership, counting probationers, 684. Have you realized that 199 have come into our Communion during the past nine months?

Sunday evening, Dec. 14, we held a Temperance mass meeting. Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, delivered an address on the evil effects of intemperance on the body and mind. Rev. A. H. Lewis, D. D., pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, spoke on the evil effects of intemperance on the moral and spiritual nature. The pastor concluded with an address on the evil effects of intemperance on the community.

A Republican Speaks His Mind.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—The old soldiers of New Jersey are loud in their praise of Senator McPherson, who, it seems, can hardly do enough for the veterans, regardless of their politics, and through whose efforts and untiring zeal for the old soldier numbers whose claims for pensions have been pigeon-holed for years have been allowed and the old soldiers made happy; and I no doubt echo the thought of hundreds of them that he may long be honored by representing New Jersey in the United States Senate, and that Judas Iscariot Sewell may be kept at home, which place is his proper sphere.

A REPUBLICAN ADMIRER OF SENATOR MCPHERSON.

"Little" Plainfield Beats Big New Brunswick.

(From The New Brunswick Home News.)

Over in little Plainfield they have decided to erect a handsome soldiers' monument to cost $17,000. They have secured the site, but the $17,000 is not yet sighted, and work will not be begun until that amount has been deposited in bank. New Brunswick has been pining for a monument for years and has secured the site and foundation and enough money all but $2,500 to erect the memorial, but there the matter rests.

It is too bad to spend half of a short life di-tressed with neuralgia, when 25c spent for one bottle of Salvation Oil will cure it quickly.

He talked as if he had a "frog in his throat," but he was only hoarse; a single bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup relieved the trouble at once. 25c.

WILL HE LOSE HIS SEAT?

Can Councilman Rushmore Represent the Third Ward as One of Its Inhabitants When He Lives Somewhere Else?

Great interest and excitement have been aroused by the information published exclusively in THE PRESS, that the incoming Council stood 5, to 4, to 2 on organization, with 6 necessary for a choice.

But greater interest and excitement will be aroused when the people herewith read that there is a possibility that the 5 straighout Republicans will lose one of their number, and the Council will fill the vacancy.

The ordinance dividing the city into wards says that there shall be elected from among the inhabitants of each of said wards, two councilmen, etc. And the city's charter says that in case of a vacancy happening in any elective office by death, resignation, removal, or otherwise, it shall be filled by the Council, etc.

The seat that may be declared vacant because of all that, is Councilman Rushmore's. He was elected from among the inhabitants of the third ward as their representative. But he has removed into the fourth ward. The question is, whether by such removal a vacancy in the third ward's representation has not occurred; and whether one of the inhabitants of the fourth ward can serve as Co uncilman from among the inhabitants of the third ward.

The Way to Run a Newspaper the Way to Run a Church.

Those Plainfield pastors who have been trying to induce their congregations to believe that an assistant clergyman is needed to do the work of a big church properly, will welcome the following argument in favor of their claim, from The Independent, the paper of which Dr. H. K. Carroll, of North Plainfield, is one of the editors:

"It has come to be a rule among all our Protestant denominations, with the exception of the Episcopalians, that they will put the total burden of all the work [in a parish] upon one salaried pastor. It matters not whether it be a church of 50 members or of 2,000, that one man must conduct the whole of all the services on the Sabbath, must prepare all the sermons without exchanging, must do all the visiting, must bury all the dead. Of course he cannot do this work as it should be done in a large church. This is beyond the capabilities of human nature. It is a cruelty to ask it of any man.

"But worse than all this cruelty to the pastor is the injury done to the church itself. The church ceases to be a well-managed organization; it becomes a mob flocking about a preacher, and a preacher who is unable to do anything more than provide an attractive pulpit. The minister is not for the church, but the church for the minister. The real work for which a church exists must in large part be neglected. It cannot engage in aggressive work; or if aggressive work is undertaken, it must depend upon irregular and ill-organized volunteer services, supplemented perhaps by a Bible reader or a nurse. It is not strange that the churches which conduct their business on business principles, and provide men to do their work, are the successful churches. They have their roots grown deep in the hearts of their people; they are not in danger of dissolution when one man goes. If the Protestant churches of our large cities and towns propose to do good work and to reach the people they must increase their force of paid laborers. They must have a body of assistant ministers who have the time to do their duties, to visit the sick, to care for the poor, to conduct meetings, to direct mission operations, and to compose a council to consider all sorts of good church work. The newspaper which puts all its editorial work, mainly, on one man is fifty years behind the times, and the large city church which has but one pastor is as much behind the times."

A Woman's Answer to a Plainfield Writer.

The Woman's Column, a Boston journal devoted to the interests of the gentler sex thus refers to a recent production from the pen of Oscar Fay Adams, son of W. F. Adams, of Duer street, North Plainfield:

"Mrs. Alice Moore McComas, in the Los Angeles Express, reviews the foolish article of Oscar Fay Adams denouncing women as 'The Ruthless Sex,' a portion of which article The Express had copied. In reference to the severe judgment passed by society on fallen women, Mrs. McComas sensibly says that instead of loading the whole responsibility for this on woman's uncharitableness, Mr. Adams might use his pen to better purpose in helping those women who are trying to convince the world of the injustice of a double standard of morals. She says:

"'The expression, "Brave men and pure women," should become obsolete, and we should have in its stead, "Brave men and brave women; pure men and pure women." When men as well as women dare to be pure and true to their higher, God-given natures, seeking only the greatest good for humanity, regardless of sex, then will be wiped from the face of this beautiful earth life's bitterest curse; when men treat all women as kindly and considerately as they would demand that their own mothers should be treated; when no man can afford to lower his own manhood, then we shall forget that there were ever such unfortunates as "weaker sisters" in remembering our stronger brothers.'"

AN OBLIGING MAN.

Constantly on the Watch for a Chance to Oblige His Fellow-Mortals.

"I WANT to see your Encyclopedia Nuxvomica, if you please," said a farmer as he stepped into a prominent bookstore of Pittsburgh.

"Yes, sir," replied the clerk, although he thought the inquirer looked like an unpromising customer. Still he was polite, for the clerks had general instructions to treat all callers with consideration, and beside, this particular clerk had read somewhere of literary men with agricultural habits and of a granger-like appearance, and it was barely possible that the man now asking to see the encyclopedia was one of that kind.

It does not always do to judge people by the clothes they wear, nor to form conclusions from the hayseed which may endeavor to conceal itself cunningly in their hair.

So reasoned this clerk as he displayed all the twenty-four volumes of the Encyclopedia Nuxvomica to the investigative rustic and expatiated learnedly on the dead loads of erudition which had been consumed in the production of the great work.

The farmer looked slowly and carefully through the volumes, one by one, and listened to what the voluble clerk said, but made no reply or gave any indication of a desire to add the set to his literary possessions. Finally the clerk asked:

"Were you thinking of getting an encyclopedia?"

"O, no," said the farmer; "but I like to oblige people."

"Like to oblige people?" exclaimed the astonished clerk.

"Yes. I allers try to oblige people when I can, but sometimes it's mighty inconvenient, in the busy season, for instance, like it is now."

"But if you don't intend to buy an encyclopedia," said the clerk, in an injured tone, "why are you wasting your time and mine by looking all through those books?

"Jist bekase I allers try to oblige, sir, even at some inconvenience to myself."

"I don't see how you are obliging any body," added the clerk, as he sadly replaced the books in their box, and wondered if he had better call the police."

"Don't you?" asked the granger. "Well, I'll tell you. You hev a sign in the winder which says: 'Ask to see our Encyclopedia Nuxvomica,' an' as I allers try to oblige I come in an' dun as the sign said, but there be some people as never appreciate it when you do try to oblige 'em."

And the farmer walked out, resolving never to try to oblige the city people again.—Pittsburgh Chronicle.

Wonderful Skill.

"I tell you," exclaimed the young medical student, "our professor's a great surgeon."

"How's that?" asked the chum.

"Well, a fellow was brought in with a crushed leg. The professor said it must come off. So he hacked away, and, by gosh! cut off the wrong leg."

"Do you call that great surgery?"

"Wait a bit. The professor said it would be terrible for the poor fellow to go about with no legs at all, so he splintered up the crushed leg, instead of cutting that off, too, and now it is as good as ever. An ordinary surgeon would have left the fellow legless. Wonderful skill, the professor's."—Brooklyn Life.

Very Absent-Minded.

Along in the fall, when he saw his neigbors digging their potatoes, he took his hoes, put some baskets into the cart, and, with his boy, drove the team across the pasture to a back field. Opening the bars the boy drove the cart into the field, when the farmer stepped out a few rods from the fence, looked about him, gazed across the field up and down, and seeing no signs of potatoes, said to himself:

"Well, I declare, I thought I had some potatoes here, but I guess I forgot to plant 'em—so I did."—Kenricke Journal.

Reduction in Prices for Cash!
TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.
AFTER DECEMBER 15, 1890,
The Plainfield Produce Company
Will Sell All Goods Strictly for Cash!
We will present a few reasons for making this change in our manner of doing business. In the first place we have our Hay, Grain and Produce inspected and bought direct from the Producer for Cash. Thereby obtaining better quality, also saving one profit, which would go to the commission merchant if bought from sample the usual way.
In the second place any concern doing an extensive credit business must get larger profits to offset slow and worthless accounts, of which with the greatest care there will be some. And the customer who is ready to pay and does pay his bills when presented, is the one who must pay these larger profits.
By selling for cash we avoid losses from such accounts, and can afford to sell for smaller profits.
We ask for a share of your patronage. Give us a call and we will show you how low we can sell for CASH, instead of how high we must sell for credit.

CATTLE FOR INDIANS

Wild Scenes at a Pine Tree Agency Government Distribution.

Half Starved Steers Set Free to Be Hunted and Shot by Hungry Copper Colored Claimants—Closing the Day With a Feast and a Squaw Dance.

PINE RIDGE AGENCY, S. D., Dec. 16, 1890.—All the agency was astir yesterday morning before the sun peeped from behind the string of buttes that protected the camp from the east winds. The post-house beef issue was to take place and every one was going out to view the exciting spectacle. Three miles from the agency are the corrals, strongly fenced yards with connecting gates and one gradually narrowing lane leading to scale-house gate—the gate of death for the starved-looking steers that are huddled together at the lower end of the yard. The issue of beef at this agency is made twice a month. At one issue about 250 head of cattle are killed and at the other only 88. The large issue is for all the Indians on the reservation and the smaller one for those who live near the reservation, and can draw rations twice a month. As soon as the Indian agent came out of his office and started in a light wagon for the corral there was a wild scramble in the same direction by every one at the agency who could get away. Bucks rode out on their ponies and the squaws drove out in wagons, so as to bring in the carcasses of the steers after the bucks had killed them.

When all were in readiness the Indians, sitting on their ponies in two columns a dozen deep formed an alley from the cattle yard gate a hundred yards out on the prairie. An employe called out the Indian name of Red Deer and this put the members of his family on the alert. Then the gate swung far enough open to allow one steer to crowd through and escape from the pressure caused by the cowboys' whips as they crowded the cattle against the gate. The first steer was a bony black brute that looked as if he had been wandering over the Texas trail for four years. Once through the gate, he stopped for a minute and threw up his long horned head in search of some route of escape. Finding none, he rushed down the long-walled alleyway, urged on by the unearthly yells of the Indians. As he neared the end of the line half a dozen ponies, each bearing some member of Red Deer's family with a robust appetite, surrounded the animal and one of the Indians succeeded on the second effort in throwing a rope over the animal's horns. Then the Indians riding three on a side drove the the steer on a gallop in the direction of their wagon. As they approached it, Red Deer, holding the end of the lariat, galloped around the steer until its legs were entangled, when he jerked the lariat taut and threw the animal to the ground. Then the crack of one of Custer's carbines was heard. The shot, which had been fired by a son of Red Deer, killed the steer and a moment later the Indians had cut the animal's throat and begun with feverish haste, born of hunger, to dress the carcass and get it home to their tepees.

AN ARMY SCOUT.

Meanwhile other steers had been liberated and similar scenes were being enacted in all directions. Many of the Indians seemed to prefer an exciting chase over the plains after the steer, and permitted the animal to start well off before beginning the pursuit. With a dozen families, all well mounted and armed, charging over the prairies in pursuit of cattle and shooting whenever the chance of killing seemed favorable, without checking the speed of their ponies, it required but little effort of imagination to fancy the chase to be one of the now traditional buffalo hunts. There were eighty-eight of these long-horned contract skeletons in the corral, and in half as many minutes they had been filed through the gate and driven off to their death by the Indians. Occasionally some steer would seem to have a charmed life and would run straight over the plateau toward the encircling buttes, regardless of the steady popping of his pursuer's rifles or their frantic efforts to change the course of their rapidly disappearing hopes of something to eat. None of the steers escaped, however, though many of them seemed built with a view to speed instead of steak.

The word "family" used in the distribution of beef means merely a division of the tribe, made by the agent for convenience in issuing beef. Each "family" is composed of about 30 Indians of all ages. To this community, rather than family, one of the steers is issued semi-monthly. There is a story to the effect that these steers weigh 900 pounds each, but this is an undoubted exaggeration.

There were great times in the Indian village during the afternoon and evening and the Indian dogs seemed to breathe a trifle easier while their masters were feasting on beef. About sunset a tremendous beating of drums accompanied by an uproarious chanting attracted everybody to the Indian camp. The commotion proved to be the introductory movement to one of the peace dances known as the squaw dance. What seemed at a distance to be the sound of many drums proved to be the pounding of one old drum by a dozen squaws, each armed with a fantastically decorated drum stick, the end of which was wound with thongs of leather, forming a ball about as large as an egg. A dozen drummers sat in a circle, and welted away with perfect indifference as to the time, each one getting in a crack whenever convenient. Around this couchant circle were the squaw dancers dressed in their brightest colored garment, and wearing all their available or tin trinkets. One squaw who made herself quite conspicuous as a sort of leader displayed some jewelry that evidently had not come through the Indian traders store. One article of jewelry as her dress slipped to the elbow of her upraised arm during the final of the dance was a beautiful bracelet, an elaborate affair, composed of half a hundred slender silver strands gracefully interwoven. An officer who stood beside me admiring this bracelet drew upon his imagination for some explanation of the squaw's possession of the trinket. We finally concluded that it was a bracelet that had been stolen by some road agent and that he had given it to the squaw. At one time during the dance this squaw stood directly in front of me and I asked her in compound fractural Sioux and by gestures: "Where did you get that bracelet?"

"This bracelet was purchased at Tiffany's as a present to me from a lady of Brooklyn," said the squaw, in good common every-day English. "I used to travel with the 'Kill-or-Cure' Indian herb doctor after I came home from Carlisle."

The dancers numbered from 15 to 25 and were arranged in a circle around the drummers. Each squaw conducted an independent dance, there was no clashing of hands or executing of figures, but simply a swaying of the body and a peculiar movement, their feet remaining on the ground and their bodies nearly perpendicular, but rising and falling much the same as the drawing out and closing up of a telescope. Around the dancers forming the third and outer circle were seated 150 or more squaws and children. In front of each one of the squaws in the outer circle was a tin dish with a small piece of dog meat and a couple of crackers. Early in the day a dog had been killed and stewed in preparation for the dance and when time for refreshments came an old medium woman after a series of wierd incantations moved around inside the outer circle and distributed pieces of the dog, and iron spoonsful of the soup.

The squaw dance lasted for about two hours and was ended by a suggestion from an old Indian, who then made a short speech in Sioux which was interpreted to the crowd. He thought that the white men should give some money to the dancers and eat some of the dog meat.

We contributed a handful of small coin, but declined the invitation to lunch.

MEXICAN PULQUE.

A Liquor That Requires Three Days to Get in Its Perfect Work.

General George A. Sheridan gives his experience with Mexican pulque, as reported in the New York Press:

"In the Hoffman House cafe a couple of evenings ago a party of gentlemen were discussing the national beverages of various nations, when one of them asked: 'Have you ever tried Mexican pulque?' The word has the sound of 'pulky,' and there was a moment's silence, until General George A. Sheridan, the politician, orator, lecturer and wit, replied: 'Well, you can just bet your sweet life that I have tried pulque, and I don't want any more of it in mine.' He went on in this strain: 'I tried that tiger in his native jungle. I found him in his native lair in the City of Mexico when I was down there five years ago. Of course I had numerous American acquaintances there, and they wanted to be kind to me, and we went into one of their places of resort, and I was duly asked what I would have, with the suggestion that I should try pulque. It is the common Mexican beverage, as they told me, and very delightful. I tried it. The taste was not pleasant on the first round, but the effect was delightful. I took another, and to my surprise the effect was just the same. That is to say, I felt not the slightest degree greater stimulation or exhilaration than after I had taken the first drink of it. I separated from those friends and met others who treated me with the same consideration and kindness. I took more pulque. But it did not seem to intoxicate me or raise me above a certain even degree of stimulation, and I said to myself, this is the most marvelous beverage I have ever run across. When I met other friends I tried more pulque. In all, by midnight, I think I tested ten or twelve glasses of the Mexican beverage. When I went to bed I was feeling splendid, but not in the slightest degree intoxicated. I woke up about three o'clock the next day, and I pledge you my word that if I know any thing about my condition I was as tight as a club man after a spree. I didn't know where I was or what I was doing. It was three days before I recovered my senses enough to know that I was in the City of Mexico. You can bet your sweet life that I want no more pulque in mine.'"

SAMUEL BRADBURN.

How He Satisfied Two Fellows in Search of Fun.

An incident in the course of one of Bradburn's journeys was discussed by an old minister, who had the best evidence of its authenticity—evidence which was afterwards confirmed by Bradburn's nearest relatives and biographer. The incident, says the Sunday Magazine, shows that his wit could be merciless when saucily provoked. He had come to a roadside inn to wait for the stage-coach. While waiting, another passenger arrived—a young Lord, attended by his valet. The young gentleman was lively, but stammered slightly in conversation. On seeing Bradburn, whose personal appearance would attract attention, the gay young fellow, speaking aside to the landlady, said:

"Y-o-oou h-have a parson here."

"He's a Methodist preacher, my Lord," said she.

"Oh, then, I-I-'ll have a-a bit of fun with him." Approaching Bradburn, he said:

"P-p-pray, sir, c-c-can you t-tell me how it is that B-a-Balaam's ass spoke?"

Bradburn, who knew that if you look full at a stammerer you increase his difficulty, replied:

"What did you say, sir?"

"P-p-pray, sir, c-c-can you tell me h-h-how it was th-that B-Balaam's ass spoke?"

"What do you say, sir?" cried Bradburn, looking sternly into his face, and putting his hand to his ear.

"Pa-p-p-pa-pa-pa," stuttered the funmaker, and stood with distorted face, unable to put his question.

His valet came to his rescue, and, bowing to Bradburn, said:

"My Lord wishes to know, sir, whether your can inform him how it was that Balaam's ass spoke?"

"I don't know, sir," was the answer, "unless it was that Balaam stammered so badly himself that he hired his ass to speak for him."

Both master and man had found fun enough.

TWO INTELLIGENT DOGS.

Canines That Possess More Sense and Fidelity Than Some Men.

There are two dogs in this city that surpass, in point of intelligence, the celebrated boar-hound that nightly appears with Prof. Darling, the lion trainer in the lion's cage in "Claudius Nero," says the New York Telegram. If you have ever walked up Broadway late in the afternoon or evening you have probably noticed the old blind beggar who sits at the corner of Broadway and Thirtieth street; with him is a dog of the breed commonly known as the "yellow cur," yet one glance at the animal is enough to convince any one that he is a dog of more than ordinary intelligence. When the old blind beggar is ready to go home the dog leads the way, the old man holding him by a string attached to his collar. At every crossing the dog barks once. If there are wagons or carriages passing the dog will bark twice, and the old blind beggar will wait patiently until a tug on the string he holds informs him that the street is clear and that his guide is ready to proceed. At other times the dog has a habit of whining piteously to attract attention to the beggar's outstretched hand, and the whine rarely fails to produce the desired effect. Somewhere in the neighborhood, generally about Twenty-eighth or Twenty-ninth street and Sixth avenue, you will come across another blind beggar and a dog. The latter is a shaggy hound and knows his business quite as well as his Broadway rival does. He, also, has a habit of whining to attract attention, but the act that makes him famous is the manner he goes through a crowd. If the crowd is a big one and the dog can see no way of going through it he will growl ominously. The crowd scatters at once, and the dog, with a wag of his tail, proceeds with the old man who owns him.

HER DELICATE DISH.

She Fooled Men Who Knew All About the Feminine Taste.

A party of men sat at a table in a Broadway restaurant sipping a cognac after luncheon. A girl of seventeen or thereabouts entered shyly and took her seat at a table near by. The girl's figure was slender, her lovely face was softly tinted, her eyes were blue and innocent. She drew her gloves from her small white hands, and held the bill of fare daintily before her. She seemed searching for something made of rose leaves and honey dew.

"Two to one she orders lobster salad," said one of the men, watching the sweet maid.

"Done," responded another. "Salad is too coarse for her. She'll have cold consomme."

"Well, now, you just listen for her to order an omelet souffle," said a third. "I never saw a girl out shopping in my life that didn't run in at noontime and get an omelet souffle. They are so fluffy and sugary that they just hit feminine taste."

"That girl will order a chocolate eclair and a cup of tea," said a fourth man in the party.

In the meantime the waiter was standing at the elbow of the dainty fairy, expecting her order. She studied the card long and carefully, and then she pouted:

"I don't think you have what I want."

"We have 'most every thing," said the waiter.

"Yes," responded the girl, "but I came in here on purpose for one thing, and I don't see it on the menu."

"What is it, miss?" asked the waiter.

"Frankfurter sausages and sauerkraut," replied the maiden.—N. Y. Sun.

A Particular Customer.

Particular Customer—I want an oyster stew and I don't want the oysters and liquors and milk all mixed in a mess and merely heated. I want the milk carefully boiled first, then the oysters added, next the liquor and finally, after it is taken off, the seasoning. Be very particular about the milk. It must be sweet and rich, and above all things, be careful to get good butter. Only the best and freshest gilt-edged dairy butter should be used. As for the oysters, I want the very finest to be obtained anywhere; no common mud oysters for me. Now don't forget.

Waiter—Yes, sah. Do you wish the oysters with or without, sah?

Customer—With or without what?

Waiter—Pearls, sah.—N. Y. Weekly.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

Sleeplessness Cured. 4

I am glad to testify that I used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic with the best success for sleeplessness, and believe that it is really a great relief for suffering humanity.

E. FRANK, Pastor.
St. Severin, Keyserton P. O., Pa.

Pleased and Grateful.

New York City, May, 1890.

I express my entire satisfaction with Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son, who is now nineteen years of age, had been afflicted with epilepsie—fits since he was six years of age. I tried everything that money could purchase, but no permanent relief was effected, now I can cheerfully recommend, and deem it my duty to advise sufferers to at least try Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son has not had any symptoms of the disease since he used the remedy. I am therefore pleased and grateful.

Utah House, 300, 8th Av. N. LENHARD.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the
